HALKIRK is a parish adjoining that of Thurso on the south, with a village of same name, 6 miles south of Thurso town, in the poor combination and small debt court district of Thurso. The parish extends 20 miles from north to south and 13 from east to west at its widest part (Ben Chaiteag to Ealach Begg); it contains 24 small lakes, abounding in trout, and has the Thurso water running through nearly its entire length. Besides the station of same name, a mile south of Halkirk village, there are three other railway stations (Altnabreac, Scotscalder and Georgemas Junction) in this parish, all on the Highland line. There is an Established church, two United Free churches, a Free Presbyterian church, and nine public schools. The Bank of Scotland has a branch here. The parish contains several ruined towers and camps, and a few lofty hills—Cnoc Mail-dhun, 1,358 feet, and Cnoc Mhadadh, 1,040. Sir Archibald Henry Macdonald Sinclair bart. trustees of the late James Sinclair, and Capt. William M. Thriepland are the principal landowners. The area comprises 102,616 acres; assessable value, £17,136; the population in 1911 was 2,160 in the civil and 2,041 in the ecclesiastical parish.

LATHERON, see LYBSTER.

LYBSTER IN LATHERON

LYBSTER is an ecclesiastical parish and village at the mouth of the Reisgill burn, in the parish of Latheron, in which poor combination it is included, and is in the small debt court district of Wick; it has a station on the Highland railway, and is 14 miles south-by-west from Wick town. The "Brothers Port" was the name bequeathed to the haven here by the Scandinavians, who settled in Caithness in the 8th and 10th centuries, and it appears to have been much resorted to by these "sea-kings," or pirates. A sheriff court is held 10 times a year. The population of Lybster Ward in 1911 was 1,075, and in the ecclesiastical parish 2,010.

The parish of LATHERON extends along the coast from the Ord of Caithness to Bruan, in the south angle of Wick parish, and is 27 miles in length with a breadth varying from 10 to 15, and has a good road along the coast for its whole length. It contains the villages of Berriedale, Bruan, Dunbeath and Lybster. The parish church stands about half way between Lybster and Dunbeath, and there is also one at Lybster and four United Free churches and three Free churches in the parish. A cattle fair is held at Lybster twice yearly; also an auction mart every fortnight. Cattle fairs are also held at Dunbeath in March, June, August and November, dates not fixed, but usually on the second Tuesday in the month. Dunbeath Castle, garrisoned by Montrose in 1650, formerly belonged to a branch of the Sinclair family, now represented by Sir John R. G. Sinclair bart. D.S.O., D.L., J.P. of Barrock House, Wick. The mansion is the residence of Rear-Admiral Sir Edwyn S. Alexander-Sinclair K.C.B., M.V.O., D.L., J.P. Forse House is the residence of Brig.-Gen. Edward William David Baird esq. C.B.E., D.L., J.P.; Latheronwheel, the property of Mrs. J. M. Stocks, is occupied by Arthur S. M. Smedley esq. The Duke of Portland K.G., P.C., G.C.V.O. is the principal landowner. The area of Latheron civil parish is 119,506 acres; rateable value, £15,949; the population in 1911 was 4,514 civil, and 1,586 ecclesiastical.

REAY is a parish, lying to the west of Thurso and Halkirk parishes; the village of Reay, which is situated at the bottom of Sandside Bay, being 11 miles west-by-south from Thurso town, in the poor combination and small debt court district of which it is included. It is 11 miles from north to south and about 8 miles wide, and contains some hills (Ben Ratha, 793 feet, being the highest), besides several lochs, of which Shurrery is the largest; from this flows the Forse water, the other rivers being the Reay and Sandside. The nearest stations are those of Thurso, in the northern part of the parish; Scotscalder in the centre, and Altnabreac in the south, all on the Highland railway. The parish contains lime, granite, millstone, with traces of lead and iron, mineral springs &c. This place has afforded the title of baron to the MacKay family. There are two Established churches, one United Free church, one Free church and five schools in the parish. A fair is held on the first Monday in September. Achvarasdal Lodge is the residence of Alan D. Pilkington esq. and Sandside House the residence of Thomas Pilkington esq. D.L., J.P. who are the principal landowners. The area is 44,884 acres; rateable value, £6,297; the population in 1911 was 920 in the civil and 1,581 in the ecclesiastical parish, of which 795 were in Sutherlandshire.

THURSO

THURSO is a parish, market town and burgh of barony, situate on the bay of same name, 20 miles north-west from Wick, with a terminal station on a branch from Georgemas junction of the Highland railway, and is the head of a poor combination and seat of a small debt court. The original name of Thurso, and that by which it is still called in the Gaelic language, is "Inverhorsa;" inver signifying the mouth of a river, and the latter word being a modification of "Thor," so that Thurs-o is "Thor's river," the Danes being the earliest possessors of Caithness. The bay, sheltered from the north-east by Dunnet Head and to the west by Holburn Head, is commodious, but near the town becomes very shallow, so that the larger vessels and steamers have to discharge and load in Scrabster Roads, about 2 miles down the west side of the bay, but vessels of any burthen may find shelter in the bay in all weathers. A considerable trade is carried on in May and June in connection with the herring fishery, but the boats employed are not on a separate register, but come under that of Wick. A promenade has been constructed facing the sea, at the expense of the inhabitants of the town; it is upwards of 300 yards in length. The town is situated on the left bank of the Thurso river, here crossed by an elegant stone bridge, erected in 1887, and large quantities of salmon are sometimes taken. It is lighted with gas from works belonging to a company, and supplied with water from the Loch of Calder. Near the harbour are the ruins of the ancient church of St. Peter, built about the 14th century, and half a mile north-west are the remains of the old palace of the bishops, destroyed by fire in 1222, when the bishop, Gilbert de Moray, was burnt by the populace because he had displeased them in reference to tithes. The government of the burgh is vested in a provost, two bailies and six councillors. There is a Justice of Peace Court held every alternate Wednesday, and a Sheriff Court ten times a year. The Established church is an edifice in the Gothic style, with a tower containing a clock, presented by the late Henry Miller esq. of London, a native of Thurso. The Episcopal church of St. Peter and the Holy Rood was built in 1884, and will seat 200 persons. There are also two United Free churches, a Reformed Presbyterian church and Congregational chapels, and at Scrabster is a Mission chapel. The Town Hall is in High street. The Public Free Library, in High street, adjoining the Town Hall, was erected in 1910 at a cost of £2,000, provided by the late Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle; the library contains 9,000 volumes. The Museum, opened in 1895, has a very fine and large miscellaneous collection, including the botanical and geological collection of the late Mr. Robert Dick. Dunbar's Hospital was erected at a cost of about £6,000, the necessary funds for this purpose having been bequeathed by the late Mr. Dunbar, of Scrabster; the foundation stone was laid by H.R.H. the late Duke of Edinburgh K.G. in 1881, and the building opened for the admission of patients in May, 1885; there are 12 beds for the reception of incurable persons who have not been in receipt of parochial relief, and also six cottages adjoining for 12 aged persons who have been in better circumstances, preference being given to natives of Thurso. The Thurso Combination Poorhouse is situated at Halkirk. In Sir John square stands a finely-carved ornamental stone drinking fountain, erected in 1894 by his son, the present baronet, to the memory of Sir George Sinclair bart. of Ulbster, and formerly M.P. for Caithness (1. 1868). There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Commercial Bank Limited, the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, the British Linen Co. Bank, the Royal Bank of Scotland and a Savings Bank. A little to the east of the town stands Thurso Castle, the seat of Major Sir Archibald Henry Macdonald Sinclair bart. J.P. of Ulbster, which has been greatly enlarged and modernized. Scrabster House is the seat of John Miller esq. Richard Oswald esq. one of the plenipotentiaries from the Court of St. James for settling the peace of 1783, was a native of Thurso parish, as was also the late Sir John Sinclair bart. M.P. of Ulbster, born here in 1754, and whose name is associated with the "Statistical Account of Scotland," collected and published by his exertions; he died 21 Dec. 1835, and to his memory a very elegant monument of freestone, presented to the town by the late Alexander Miller esq. has been erected on a square piece of ground fronting the Established church. The late Robert Dick, an eminent botanist and geologist, was a resident of this town, and his collection now forms an important part of the Thurso Museum. A newspaper, "The Caithness Courier," is published here weekly on Friday. A cattle market is held every Wednesday, and the annual fairs on the second Tuesday in July and the first Friday in September. The area of the parish comprises 21,182 acres; rateable value of parish, £22,288; area of burgh, 540 acres; rateable value, £12,374; population in 1911, civil 4,709, burgh 3,335 and 4,732 ecclesiastical.

SCRABSTER, the port of Thurso is 1½ miles north-west on the west side of Thurso bay, and has a Mission chapel.

WATTEN is a parish and a village, in Thurso poor combination and Wick small debt court district, situated about 8 miles west-north-west of Wick; the parish is bounded on the north by Bower and on the east by Wick, on the south by Latheron and on the west by Halkirk, and has a station on the Highland railway, 1½ miles from the village. In the north-west part of the parish, which measures 11 miles north to south by 6 broad, there is a fine sheet of water, about 3 miles in length, called Loch Watten, from which issues a branch of the river Wick, which also receives the Acharole Strath and Cumster Burns, which flow through this parish. There are Established, Free and United Free churches and three schools. Sir R. W. Anstruther bart. the Board of Agriculture for Scotland and John Robson esq. are the principal landowners. The parish of Watten comprises an area of 30,600 acres; rateable value, £6,096; population in 1911, 1,079.

WICK

WICK is a parish and royal burgh, situated on the east coast of Caithness, with a terminal station on the Highland railway, and is in Latheron poor combination and Wick small debt court district. The town, which is the largest in the county, is 290 miles from Edinburgh and 20 south-east from Thurso, and was formerly divided into two parts, viz., Pulteneytown and Wick, Wick being on the north side of the river and bay and Pulteneytown on the south. The old town of Wick chiefly consists of two streets, High street and Bridge street; the former runs from the bay along the curvature of the river and is flanked on either side by several lanes.

By a provisional order Wick was amalgamated with the Police Burgh of Pulteney in 1902.

Wick was erected into a royal burgh in the year 1589, and is the county town of the shire and the returning station at elections. The government of the town is vested in 15 councillors, from whom are chosen a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild and a treasurer; their jurisdiction, however, is confined to narrow limits, and the amount of their revenue inconsiderable, being confined to the rental of market dues and some curing stations. There is a Justice of the Peace Court and a Sheriff's Court, the former sitting when required, the latter every Tuesday and Friday, with power to appoint a sitting when and where required within the county.

The town is lighted with gas by a company, and has a good supply of water, which is conveyed from the Yarrow Loch, the works for that purpose having been finished in 1882, at a cost of £7,500.

The port of Wick consists of inner and outer basins, or harbours of fair dimensions, which have been greatly improved by dredging, so that the fishing fleet can enter at all states of the tide. In addition to these a new basin has been partially constructed at a cost of £90,000. The breakwater, constructed at a cost of about £120,000, was demolished by a storm. The harbours, formerly under the care of the British Fisheries Society, were in 1879, by special Act of Parliament, handed over to the Wick Harbour Trust. The revenues of the harbour for the year ending October 31st, 1920, amounted to £17,124 15s. 11d.

The herring trade is the staple industry, and in the season commencing at the end of May and ending in September the home fishery is prosecuted to a very large extent. From April to May a few fishermen are busily engaged with the summer fishing at Stornoway and other places in the Western Hebrides. During the home fishing the population is increased by a large influx of Highlanders, men and women, who come as "hired hands." About 400 boats, chiefly consisting of steam drifters and motor boats, manned by seven to ten men each, leave port at all times during the day for the fishing ground, the distance to which varies from 5 to 80 miles. The gutting and curing of the herrings gives labour to hundreds of men and women, and on a busy day the quay presents a scene both animated and picturesque. The winter herring, cod and ling fishing, also carried on extensively, brings to the town fish buyers from the principal towns in England. The value of fish exported from Wick during a year is computed at about £200,000, the benefit from which is diffused over a wide district. The railway transports the whole winter catch to the southern markets. The number of vessels employed in the general coasting trade that arrived with cargoes and in ballast at the port in 1918 was 196 of 15,886 tons, and departed 197 of 15,945 tonnage. The number of fishing boats registered at this port under Part IV. of the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894," on Dec. 31st, 1918, was 574, aggregate tonnage 3,904. Fishing boats and their implements are to be distinguished by the letters "W. K."

The value of imports from Wick port, which includes Crosskirk Bay, Helmsdale, Little Ferry and Scrabster in 1919 was £12,328.

The Customs district extends from Meikle Ferry to Stoer Point, with sub-stations at Thurso and Helmsdale. Different foreign states are represented by resident vice-consuls.

Ship building has entirely ceased, but the business of boat building is carried on to a small extent, and with the manufacture of herring barrels and nets is the principal source of employment for the non-fishing class.

There are two Established and three United Free churches, Roman Catholic, Presbyterian and Free churches, Baptist and Congregational chapels and a Mission Hall. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, in Moray street, was built in 1870, and will seat 120 persons.

The Wick High School, an institution for Higher Grade Education, was erected in 1912 at a cost of £12,000.

The Town and County buildings, in Bridge street, are of freestone, and have a turret with cupola containing a public clock. The Town Hall, a spacious apartment, contains portraits of the late Sir John Sinclair (d. 1873) and other local celebrities, and is used both as a council room and for the meetings of the Caithness County Council; here also are the town clerk's and other offices. The County Court House is also in Bridge street. The Temperance Hall is used for public meeting and entertainments, and will hold 1,200 persons.

The Free Libraries Act was adopted in the parish of Wick in 1887, and a library and reading room was opened in Union street, Pulteneytown, November 16th, 1888, but is now in Sinclair terrace; in 1897 a new library, containing reading, ladies', recreation and reference rooms, was erected at a cost of over £5,000, towards which the late Andrew Carnegie esq. contributed £3,400, the site being given by the late Sir John Usher, 1st bart. of Norton House, Ratho (d. 1904); the library contains over 11,000 volumes. Under the Education Authority for the county, a rural school library has now been added, and comprises over 4,000 volumes. The Rhind Institution is in West Park.

There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, the Bank of Scotland and the British Linen Bank. There is also a Security Savings Bank.

The local Chamber of Commerce consists of the principal business men in the district, and meets on the first day of January every year.

Two newspapers, the "Northern Ensign" and the "John o' Groats Journal," are published here every week.

Cattle markets are held at Wick on the 2nd and 4th Thursday of each month, and the Caithness Agricultural Society holds an important annual cattle and sheep market at Georgemas on the second Tuesday of August, and an annual show in August at Wick and Thurso alternately.

The principal residence of the Earls of Caithness was at the strong castle of Girnegoe, situated about 2 miles north of Wick, on Sinclair Bay, and of this fortress the greater part of the walls are still standing. Adjoining is Sinclair Castle, a structure of almost equal antiquity; and near by stands Ackergill Tower, which has been recently restored. Another interesting ruin, on the southern shore of Wick Bay, is Wick Castle, known as the "Old Man of Wick," which, as well as the lighthouse on Noss Head, forms an excellent landmark to seamen. There are numerous remains of Pictish dwellings in the district; five stone coffins and a number of weapons and a collection of pottery have been found in different parts of the parish.

The principal seats are Ackergill Tower, the seat of Maj. Sir George Duff Sutherland Dunbar bart. and Stirkoke House, the seat of Col. Edward William Horne C.M.G., C.B.E., D.L., J.P. The area of the parish comprises 47,247 acres; rateable value, £53,836; area of burgh, 1,147 acres; rateable value, burgh, £35,274; landward, £17,562; population in 1911, 12,587, viz.: burgh, 9,086; landward, 3,501, including 24 on board ships in the harbour. The number of inhabited houses in 1911 was 2,858. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 5,864.

The number of electors on the Wick parliamentary register in 1921 was 3,621, and in the district, 5,249.

PULTENEYTOWN, part of the royal burgh of Wick, contains the harbours, and may be reckoned the seat of the manufactures, commerce and fisheries of Wick; it was purchased when a mere waste by a society formed in London for extending British fisheries, but their undertaking was transferred in 1879 to a body of trustees. In 1892 the estate of Pulteneytown was purchased from the society by Sir John Usher bart. of Norton, who died in 1904, and his trustees are the present proprietors. Pulteneytown has been from the first laid out on a settled plan, and has regular streets, squares and terraces. The place is supplied with water from the Loch of Hempriggs. The Wick Public Library and Reading Rooms are situated in Sinclair terrace and Francis street. The Pulteneytown Academy, founded and endowed by the British Fisheries Society, is now under the control of the Caithness Education Authority. The cooperages, net, rope and woollen manufactories, saw mills and a distillery, employ two-thirds of the whole population. Population of the quoad sacra parish in 1911, 5,907.

STAXIGOE, Boathaven and Sarclet are suburban villages, populated principally by fishermen, and have each a separate harbour.

CLACKMANNANSHIRE

HIS county, the smallest in Scotland in point of size, and e twenty-sixth as regards population, is bounded on the rth-west and west by the Firth of Forth and Stirlingshire, id on the north and east by Perthshire; and on the south- ist it joins the county of Fife. Its figure, which is five-sided, id is extremely irregular, does not exceed ten miles at its reatest length, nor more than eight at its extreme breadth. id it has an area, which in 1891 was increased by the ddition of the parish of Alva, of 34,927 acres of land and 7 of water. The population in 1901 was 32,029 and in 1911, ..121, viz.: males, 14,657 and females, 16,464. Inhabited ouses in 1901, 6,957 and in 1911, inhabited, 7,100; unin- abited, 588 and building, 23.

Anciently the whole of the valuable territory lying between e rivers Forth and Tay, and bounded on the north-west by e chain of the Ochil Hills, was called Ross, as being a sort peninsula, terminating at Stirling. In course of time the strict of Ross was divided among the shires of Fife, Kinross id Clackmannan, with the introduction of a slip of Perth- ire, on the edge of the Forth, in which is situated the town Culross. Among the ancient structures of the county are ree old towers; one of them, near Clackmannan, is said to ave been erected by Robert Bruce; another, contiguous to llicoultry, is supposed from its similarity of architecture to ave been built by the same person, or about the same period; e third, or the Alloa tower, is more particularly noticed in e description of that town. At Dollar are the ruins of Castle ampbell, standing on a lofty eminence, which are also par- ticularised in the description of the village.

Soil, Climate &c.—From the shores of the Forth the surface the county rises gradually to the Ochil Hills, the highest which, Benclegh, attains the height of 2,360 feet above the el of the sea, and is in the parish of Tillicoultry. The higher grounds are partly pastoral, but the whole of the lower parts adjacent to the Forth are rich, arable, and beautifully enclosed.

Manufactures, Produce &c.—The manufacture of woollen goods, in shawls, plaidings, tartans &c. has been for many years established in the parishes of Tillicoultry and Alva with complete success, and the towns belonging to them have become thriving places in consequence, and furnish employ- ment to many hundreds of persons. At Alloa and Clack- mannan wool spinning is carried on very extensively, the former place being likewise noted for the excellence of the ale brewed there and also for the distillation of whisky. Throughout the whole county coal is worked, and at various times valuable ores of silver, lead, copper &c. have been found in the Ochils. The produce of coal in 1919 was 297,450 tons, and fireclay was extracted to the extent of 1,223 tons; other minerals raised were igneous rock, 890 tons; gravel and sand, 7,786 tons, and sandstone, 2,986 tons.

The chief crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Sta- tistics for Scotland, 1920," were:—Wheat, 445 acres; oats, 3,507 acres; beans (to be harvested as corn), 246 acres; barley, including bere, 266 acres; the total corn crops being 4,472 acres; turnips and swedes, 770 acres; potatoes, 553 acres; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. for fodder, 103 acres; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 1,375 acres. The area of the county is 34,927 acres; mountain and heath land used for grazing being 12,021 acres; permanent grass, 6,634 acres; arable land, 8,963 acres.

The live stock in 1920 comprised:—Horses used for agricul- ture and brood mares, 512; unbroken horses, 230; other horses, 80; cows in milk, 898; cows in calf but not in milk, 130; heifers in calf, 127; other cattle, two years and above, 882; one year and under two, 848; under one year, 434; ewes kept for breeding, 5,762; other sheep, one year and above, 2,018; under one year, 5,376; sows kept for breeding, 101; other pigs, 434.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 43; above 5 acres and not exceeding 15 acres, 32; above 15 acres and not exceeding 30 acres, 20; above 30 acres and not exceeding 50 acres, 9; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 13; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 12; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 25; above 150 acres and not exceeding 300 acres, 35; above 300 acres, 6; total, 195.

There is a small fishery industry, 32 boats of an aggregate of 517 tons being registered at Alloa, December 31, 1913.

Rivers, Railways &c.—Besides the Forth the county is watered by two other streams, namely, the Devon and the Black Devon, and there is one large loch, Gartmore. Four branch railways centre at Alloa, one coming from the south- west from Larbert, on the Caledonian line, another from the south-west from Dunfermline, via Clackmannan; a third pro- ceeding to the north-east, passing through Tillicoultry and Dollar to Kinross, and the fourth, which runs direct east to Stirling, with a branch to Alva. These three latter lines belong to the North British railway.

This shire contains five civil parishes and seven complete and parts of two ecclesiastical parishes and has four police burghs, Alloa, Alva, Dollar and Tillicoultry. The county unites with Stirlingshire in returning two members to Parliament, in two divisions. The parliamentary constituency in 1919 was 56,417.

ALLOA

ALLOA, a town of considerable commercial importance, the leading one of the county, and in Stirling poor combination, is 30 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 32 south-west from Perth, 7 east from Stirling, 6 south-west from Dollar, 3 west from Clackmannan and 10 north from Falkirk. The North British railway has a junction here of lines to Stirling, Dunfermline, Kinross and Kincardine, the line crossing the river by a bridge constructed in 1882, which is opened for traffic of vessels. The word "Alloa" is from "Ath Luath" (pron. "Ah-looah"), meaning the swift ford or ferry. It is situated on the north bank of the river Forth, at the point where the river ends and the Frith begins. At this spot, and for 10 miles above it, the water is deep enough to admit vessels with 10 to 11 feet draught. The quay stretches along the bank and large vessels or steamboats can thus lie close up to the thoroughfare, to the great convenience of passengers, and this is the only port on the Frith at which such can be accomplished with perfect ease and safety at any tide. A dock was constructed in 1863, which is 600 feet long and 195 feet broad, with 21 feet depth of water on the sill. Till 1854 Alloa was a burgh of barony, under the management of trustees, but in February of that year the inhabitants adopted the Burgh and Police Act, and in 1863 the Commissioners under that Act unanimously adopted the General Police (Scotland) Act of 1862, known as "Lindsay's Act." The burgh is now governed under the Town Councils (Scotland) Act, 1900, by a corporation, consisting of a provost, four magistrates and seven other councillors. An ordinary meeting is held on the second Monday in each month, and a statutory meeting on the second Friday of November. The ordinary and small debt courts for the county are held weekly, a sheriff court once a week, and a justice of the peace court at stated periods, and a fiars court annually.

The town is supplied with gas from works up to 1878 the property of a private company, but now belonging to the Town Council, having been acquired at a cost of £23,250. Electric light is also supplied by the Town Council. Until 1822 the town was very badly supplied with water, but in that year a supply was obtained from a large artificial loch, known as Gartmorn Dam, which covers 160 acres of ground; in 1867, the supply being again inadequate, two large filtering beds were constructed, and in 1891 the Town Council acquired the whole works and added a new reservoir and two filters at a greater elevation to supply the higher districts of the town; the total cost of the water works up to 1910 was £55,509.

The parish church of St. Mungo, a fine Gothic edifice, built in part with the materials of the old church, was opened 24 June, 1819, and has a tower with spire containing a bell and a clock presented by the Earl of Mar: the church was renovated in 1895, and affords 2,000 sittings. The ancient church of St. Mungo stood in the churchyard, where the tower still remains, and has a quaint figure of the parton saint within a niche. St. Andrew's, in Mar place, a chapel of ease to the parish church, is an edifice in the Early English style, and was opened 26 Nov. 1882. There are also four United Free churches and a Baptist chapel: the Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, erected in 1869, has a tower with a peal of bells, and sittings for 300 persons; the incumbency, net value £300, has been held since 1903 by the Rev. David Moir M.A. of Aberdeen University: there is also a Roman Catholic church, and three cemeteries—the old parochial burying ground in Greenside street, and the new cemeteries at Sunnyside and Tullibody, the property of Alloa Parish Council.

The County Court House, in Mar street, a building in the Flemish style, erected at a cost of £8,700, was opened Dec. 8, 1865. Further additions were made in 1911 at a cost of about £6,000. The Exchange Hall, in High street, was built in 1862, at a cost of £1,150, and is now a picture palace. The Archæological Museum and Hall, in Bedford place, erected in 1874, at a cost of about £2,000, contains a collection of antiquities, a library and a meeting room, and is also used for public meetings. The Burgh school occupies the site of the Old Assembly Rooms and Parochial school; it was built at a cost of about £5,000 and opened in 1876, and will hold 500 scholars. The Greenside Mission chapel was built by D. Paton esq. and placed by him under trustees for the benefit of the Young Men's Christian Association. The Municipal buildings, in Bank street, erected in 1872, at a cost of about £4,000, are in the Classic style. Adjacent to these is the Post Office, a building in a similar style, opened 13 Nov. 1882. The Town Hall and Free Library, in Mars hill and Church street, was the gift of the late John Thomson Paton esq. and is a structure in the Gothic style, designed by the late Mr. Alfred Waterhouse R.A. of London, the large hall being capable of holding 1,000 people. Mr. Paton also presented an organ, at a cost of about £1,700, and fully equipped the library, the ratepayers having adopted the Free Libraries Act, 22 June, 1886; the building also contains two reading rooms, reference, and lending libraries, comprising about 16,000 volumes.

The Public Baths and Gymnasium, in Primrose street, erected in 1895, form a building of stone in the Scottish style, also the gift of the late John Thomson Paton esq. J.P.; the baths include a swimming bath, with a gallery on three sides, holding 500, and extending over dressing boxes; the bath itself is 75 feet long by 32 feet wide and from 3 to 7 feet deep; there are also Turkish and Russian baths and a billiard room.

In 1871 an Act was obtained giving powers for the construction of new works under which the Harbour Trustees greatly extended the dock, and also obtained a powerful steam dredger. The harbour has now been acquired by the North British Railway Company. Besides the brewing and yarn trades, for which the town is so noted, there are iron, copper and brass foundries, extensive bottle works, a pottery, including glass engraving machine works, cooperages, saw mills, a dry dock and shipbuilding yard, electrical works, brick and tile manufactories, including enamelled sanitary goods, flower pots &c. The collieries around Alloa are very numerous, and the export trade of the port depends to a large extent upon them. In 1919, 13,712 tons of coal were shipped from this port. The value of the imports to Alloa port, which includes Charlestown (Limekilns), Clackmannan, Inverkeithing, Kennet Pans, Kincardine, St. David's and Stirling, in 1919 was £270,134, of which £269,654 was oil. In 1918, 27 vessels arrived from foreign ports of 121,284 tonnage and 3 departed, aggregating 14,062 tons. A small fishing trade is also maintained; 32 boats of an aggregate tonnage of 517 were registered at Alloa, Dec. 31, 1918, under the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1894." Fishing boats and their implements are marked with letters A. A. Large quantities of whisky are manufactured here, and much ale is brewed. The exports comprise ale, whisky, glass bottles, coals, wool and woollen goods; the imports are timber, oak, bark, hides, butter, cheese and large quantities of grain for malting. A ferry steamboat crosses every hour to South Alloa, on the opposite side of the Forth, to the terminus of a branch of the Caledonian railway. A free shipping tidal port is formed at this part of the Forth through the great depth of water, together with the facility of railway transit. The Clackmannan County Hospital, founded Oct. 1868, mainly through the liberality of Walter, 12th Earl of Kellie, is designed for the medical and surgical treatment of persons in the county of Clackmannan suffering from disease or accident; it is under the management of a committee, annually appointed from the subscribers, and is supported by voluntary subscriptions. A new building, the gift of Miss Forrester Paton, was erected in 1898-9, at a cost of £10,000. The Clackmannanshire Combination Fever Hospital, situated to the north of the town, near Sauchie, was erected in 1895, and has 70 beds, but is available for 100 patients if necessary. The Alloa Day Home, formerly a ragged school, was instituted 29 Jan. 1884, to aid in securing the elementary education of poor and neglected children in Alloa, by providing superintendence and one or more meals a day: since 1894 the children have been educated at the Ludgate school. The schools are now under the Clackmannan Education Authority, viz.: the Academy, the Burgh and Ludgate school, the Grange school, and the Sunnyside school: the Sauchie school, Fairfield school, Tullibody school and Fishcross school, besides which there are also Catholic and Episcopal schools. In 1894 a secondary department was established in the Academy, and a new building, the gift of A. P. Forrester Paton esq. was opened in 1897; it is thoroughly complete, and the curriculum is intended to meet the requirements of the leaving certificates of the Scotch Education Department in the lower, higher and honours grades, and also the preliminary examination of the Scottish Universities; two laboratories for science work, chemistry and physics are attached. In the town are branch establishments of the British Linen Bank, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the Royal Bank of Scotland, together with a bank for savings. Three newspapers are published in Alloa weekly—the "Advertiser," the "Circular" and the "Journal." In winter three curling clubs meet on their respective ponds.

The town is extending principally to the north, at Greenfield and Claremont, and eastward along the Clackmannan road. Villas are also rising to the west in rapid succession. Norwood, at present (1921) unoccupied, is a mansion in the Scottish Baronial style; Arnsbrae House is the residence of James Younger esq. J.P.; Inglewood, on the Tullibody road, is the residence of Mrs. Forrester Paton; Greenfield House, of Mrs. David Thomson; and Schaw Park, of Mrs. Graham Paton. In 1877 land was acquired by the Commissioners, as a feu from the Earl of Mar and Kellie, which has been laid out as a public park. It extends over 20 acres, is triangular in shape, and generally level, with the exception of a slight elevation at the north-east corner; it was opened on the 1st May, 1878.

Alloa, in its immediate neighbourhood, presents scenery at once beautiful, bold and picturesque. On the north side is the range of the Ochil hills, covered with verdure to their very summits, and which are, perhaps, unrivalled in Scottish landscape; on the south the Forth, with Stirling Castle on the west and the Alloa and Clackmannan Towers on the east. The noble and ancient family of Erskine, Earls of Mar, were long the proprietors of this place. They forfeited the earldom by their participation in the rebellion of 1715, but the title and privileges were restored in June, 1824; and in 1885, in order to remove doubts as to whether the ancient dignity of Mar had not been by some means surrendered or merged in the Crown, an Act of Parliament was passed, 6 Aug. in that year, confirming the old title to the present Earl of Mar, as fully as if no such supposed surrender had taken place, while at the same time an Earldom of Mar, hitherto unheard of, but supposed to have been created in 1565, was awarded to the Earl of Kellie, in accordance with a decision of the House of Lords, 25 Feb. 1875. Alloa Tower, built previous to the 13th century and anciently the residence of the Erskine family, was a quadrangular building, but destroyed by fire in 1800, and the only existing portion is a square tower with walls 11 feet thick and a turret 89 feet in height. The beautiful and unfortunate Mary Queen of Scots here spent a portion of her youth and maturity; her son James also passed many of his youthful days in this place, under the care of John, 17th Earl of Mar, and his son, Prince Henry, received a part of his education in this building under the celebrated George Buchanan. The prospect from the summit of the tower is beautiful and extensive; it is now uninhabited. Alloa House, now the residence of the Earl of Mar and Kellie K.T. stands a short distance eastward from the Tower, and was erected in 1834, but has since been much added to and improved. Alloa market was formerly held on Saturday, but is now discontinued. A hiring fair is held on the second Saturday in October. The area of Alloa parish is 7,161 acres; rateable value, £120,301; area of burgh, 840 acres; in 1901 the parish population was 16,858, and of the burgh, 11,417, and in 1911, parish, 17,130; burgh, 11,893; population of the wards in 1911, No. 1, 3,283; No. 2, 2,663; No. 3, 2,882; No. 4, 2,294; population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 13,878. The number of inhabited houses in the parish was 3,737, and in the burgh, 2,586.

CAMBUS is a small village, situated on the Forth, in the old parish of Tullibody, 2 miles west from Alloa and 5 from Stirling, with a station on the Stirling and Dunfermline section of the North British railway, and is the junction of the branch line to Alva. The river Devon at this point discharges itself into the Forth and there is a pier where small vessels are enabled to discharge and load. Brewing and distilling are extensively carried on here.

TULLIBODY parish was united to that of Alloa on 21st March, 1600; the village is 2 miles west from that town, the nearest railway station being at Cambus. The old church of Tullibody was unroofed in 1559 by the French troops of Mary of Guise in their retreat from Scotland, in order to repair the bridge over the Devon, which had been broken down by the inhabitants of the district to hamper them in their retreat; services continued to be held in the church until after 1833: the building having again fallen into disrepair, a new church of stone, in the Norman style, from designs by Mr. Macgregor Chalmers, of Glasgow, was opened in 1904, at a cost of £2,000, and consists of apsidal chancel, aisle and choir transept: there are sittings for about 350 persons. The charge is now a Home Mission Station of the Church of Scotland under Alloa. There is also a United Free church, erected in 1845, adjoining the old kirk. Tullibody House, the property of Lord Abercromby D.L., J.P. is now the residence of Alexander Forrester esq. Rateable value is included with that of Alloa.

ALVA

ALVA, a thriving burgh in the parish of same name, Stirling poor combination and in the small debt court district of Alloa, is a station on the Alva branch of the Stirling and Dunfermline section of the North British railway, 7 miles north-east from Stirling, 3½ north from Alloa, 2 west from Tillicoultry and 5 west from Dollar; it is situated at the foot of the Ochils, whence issues a stream that turns several mills, and forms, in its course through the romantic Glen of Alva, three beautiful cataracts. The largest of these falls issues from an aperture in the rock above and tumbles from a height of 40 feet in one unbroken mass into a naturally formed basin below. An excellent pathway has been formed through the glen. This parish, formerly connected judicially with Stirlingshire and physically with Clackmannanshire, has been enlarged by the Boundary Commissioners of Scotland to nearly double its former size, and is now wholly situated in the county of Clackmannan. It affords excellent pasture, is well cultivated, and the hills abound with valuable ores, such as silver, copper, iron and lead. Sir John Erskine, of Alva, about the year 1715, assisted by some miners from Leadhills, discovered a very rich vein of silver in a romantic glen about midway between Alva House and the town; some of it was so rich that 14 ounces of ore yielded 12 ounces of silver, and during the space of a little more than three months it is said that ore was obtained from which Sir John drew from £40,000 to £50,000. After this was exhausted the ore became scarce, and hence the enterprise was abandoned. In the year 1767, James Erskine, laird of Alva, and nephew to Sir John Erskine, caused a pair of communion cups to be made, for the use of the church of Alva, from some of the remains of that ore then in his possession. On these the following inscription is engraved: "Sacris in Ecclesia S. Servani, apud Alveth, A.D., MDCCLXVII., ex argento indigena, D.D.Cq.—Jacobus Erskine."

The manufacture of woollen goods, consisting of shawls, tweeds, tartans &c. is carried on in the town and its neighbourhood very extensively, and numerous hands find busy employment in the different mills; these, with their tall chimneys, exhibit an interesting contrast with the lofty Ochils and the surrounding plain. In 1876 the inhabitants adopted the "Police and Improvement Act, 1862," and in 1880 the "Burgh Gas Supply Act, 1876." The Town Hall, a plain structure erected about 1840 by public subscription, and enlarged in 1871, will seat about 1,000 persons. In the town is a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and there is also a Savings Bank. In 1874 Public Baths and Washhouses were erected at the west end of the town, at a cost of about £4,000, the gift of the late Laird of Alva, James Johnstone esq. who also, about the same time, presented the inhabitants with a public park; and in 1873 a cemetery was provided by the Parochial Board. The House of Alva, the property of Miss Johnstone, and now occupied by Col. J. Hamilton Meikle, stands on an eminence projecting from the base of Woodhill, about 220 feet above the bed of the Devon, which flows westward to join the Forth in the valley below, and 1,400 feet below the apex of the mountain. From the summit, which rises to an elevation of 1,770 feet above the sea level, the eye sweeps over an immense range of picturesque scenery, stretching from the North Sea on the east to the Campsie Hills on the west, and including the Lammermoor Chain, the Bass Rock, Edinburgh, Arthur's Seat, the Pentland Hills, and the lovely windings of the Forth. The most interesting object, from an antiquarian point of view, is the well of St. Serf, or Servanus, the tutelar saint of the district, which is situated in the minister's glebe at a little distance from the parish church.

There are an Established church, Catholic chapel, two United Free churches, a Baptist chapel and a Christian Institute. The parish church, originally built in 1631, retains a stone on the west side of the church bearing a coat of arms with this date above it: in 1815 it was wholly rebuilt, and in 1854 it was considerably extended at the cost of the late James Johnstone esq.: the belfry contains one bell, with the inscription:—"They who me giveth are David Johnkin, William Bell to Alva Kirk; curs'd be that wretch who me perverteth from sacred use or else doth sell. Anno 1633." Miss C. E. M. Johnstone is lady of the manor and sole proprietress of the land. Alva parish contains an area of 7,632 acres; rateable value, burghal, £13,977; landward, £9,947; area of burgh, 270 acres; population in 1911, civil parish, 5,265; burgh, 4,332; ecclesiastical parish, 4,404.

CAMBUS, see ALLOA.

CLACKMANNAN,

WITH THE HAMLET OF KENNET.

CLACKMANNAN, the capital of the county and parish of that name, in Stirling poor combination and small debt court district of Alloa, was at one period a town of some consequence, but since the improvement of Alloa, and the superior facilities for commerce possessed by that place, it has sunk into comparative insignificance. The name is probably derived from the Gaelic "Clachan-Mannan," i.e. the stone circle or hamlet of the district called "Mannan." It has four stations, two on the Stirling and Dunfermline branch and two on the Alloa and Kincardine branch of the North British railway, both which lines pass close to the town, and is 32 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 10 east from Stirling and 2 south-east from Alloa, situated on an eminence gently rising to a height of nearly 200 feet above the level of the Forth. The surrounding scenery is very fine, and is viewed to great advantage from Clackmannan Tower, which occupies a commanding site a little west of the town. Tradition states that this tower was built by King Robert Bruce, close to which he had his palace, not a vestige of which latter now remains. The tower is 80 feet high, and contains a variety of apartments, reached by means of a newel stair. The sword and helmet of Bruce were formerly kept in the tower, but in 1796 they were bequeathed to the late Earl of Elgin by the widow of Henry Bruce, of Clackmannan, and are now preserved at Broomhall, Fifeshire. This venerable lady, who was a devoted adherent of the Stuarts, with the sword of King Robert in her hands, was wont to assume the privilege of conferring knighthood, and when Burns the bard visited her he was honoured in this way, the old lady observing that "she had a better right to make knights than 'some folk.'" She died at the advanced age of 95 years. In the centre of the town is a square tower, and a portion of the west gable of an old building, formerly the county court-house and gaol, and which in 1865 was restored and furnished with a new illuminated clock by the late Francis Horne esq. Close to the tower is the market cross, which is in a good state of preservation, and near it is a whinstone, upon which King Robert Bruce is represented to have frequently sat. To save this stone from spoliation, a number of gentlemen were at the expense of placing it on a stone pillar 10 or 12 feet high. The public hall was erected in 1888, at a cost of about £1,500, and a library and recreation room has since been added by Mr. John Thomson Paton, of Alloa, at a cost of about £2,500, to which Mr. Andrew Carnegie added £1,200 for the augmentation of the library: the hall will seat 450 persons. The principal trade of Clackmannan is that derived from the coal mines, which find employment for a large number of the inhabitants. There is also a woollen factory. Tun and vat building is carried on here, and at Kilbagie, a short distance from the town, is a paper mill. The soil of the parish in the carse is considered the richest arable in the shire, and under the best state of cultivation. Kennet House, the residence of Lord Balfour of Burleigh J.P. a short distance east from Clackmannan, is a fine modern mansion occupying a commanding site. The places of worship are the parish church and two United Free churches. The first mentioned, erected in 1815, at an expense of £4,500, is a spacious and handsome structure, having seats for 1,000 persons. The Marquess of Zetland K.T., P.C. who is lord of the manor, Lord Balfour of Burleigh J.P. the Earl of Mar and Kellie K.T. (lord-lieutenant), John Ernest Kerr esq. and the Earl of Mansfield and Mansfield are the principal landowners. The area of the parish is 8,416 acres; rateable value, £18,102; the population in 1911 was—civil parish, 2,203; ecclesiastical parish, 2,147.

KENNET is a hamlet in this parish.

DOLLAR

DOLLAR is a burgh and parish in Stirling poor combination and in the small debt court district of Alloa, situated at the base of the Ochil hills, near the eastern extremity, on the road from Stirling to Kinross, 8 miles north from Clackmannan, 7 north-east from Alloa, 12 north-east from Stirling and 12 south-west from Kinross; it has a station on the Devon Valley branch of the North British railway. The climate is very mild and salubrious. The burgh is under the control of a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. A great proportion of the importance of this place is to be ascribed to its Academy, which was erected and endowed by the munificent bequest of John Macnab, a native of the parish, who, though originally a herd boy, acquired by industry and perseverance a large fortune. He died in January, 1802. By his last will he directed that one half of that fortune (about £90,000) should be vested in the public funds, or some such security, in order that it might yield an annual income "for the endowment of a Charity or School for the Poor of the Parish of Dollar." The bequest was made to the minister and elders of the parish, for the time being, as trustees. The sum thus bequeathed so far exceeded the requirements of the case that the trustees wisely laid the foundations of the institution on a broader basis. After a protracted litigation in Chancery a very handsome edifice was erected in 1819, and masters appointed to give a classical and modern education. The building, designed by Mr. W. H. Playfair, architect, is in the Classic style, with a pedimented portico, supported by six massive columns of the Doric order. In the centre of the building is a large hall, containing a library of upwards of 6,000 volumes, lent to pupils and residents in Dollar free of charge. The number of pupils at the present time (1921) is about 400, including over 150 boarders: boys are prepared either for the universities, the army, the Indian police, commercial pursuits, or for civil engineering, and the general administration of the academy. The academy is in the hands of a school management committee under the Education Authority of the County of Clackmannan. There are separate departments for boys and girls: numerous scholarships are annually offered for competition, and there are three leaving scholarships of £30, tenable for three years; Charles Shirra Dougall M.A. head master, with a staff of 23 assistant masters and mistresses. In the town are also schools and a private educational establishment, for younger children, which prepare pupils for the Academy.

The burgh is lighted by both electric and gas lamps, supplied by private companies.

There is an Established church, erected in 1841, and having a square tower, and a United Free church. The Episcopal church of St James the Great, built in 1883, will seat 200 persons; the rectory is now held by the Rev. J. Woodsmith. Here is a branch of the Clydesdale Bank Limited. About a mile from the village are the venerable ruins of Castle Campbell, once one of the chief residences of the Campbell family, Dukes of Argyll, and captured in 1645 by the Marquis of Montrose. The remains occupy the summit of a high and almost insulated rock, and in the hill itself is a remarkable chasm, called "Kemp's Score," which still bears some marks of a stair. Originally called "Castle Gloom," the name was changed by Act of Parliament in 1489 to its present designation. The view from the top of the ruins is singularly beautiful and extensive, and includes some of the loftiest of the Ochil hills, which rise to a height of over 2,000 feet above the sea level. The name of John Knox, the Scottish reformer, is intimately associated with Castle Campbell, and a ruined archway, forming one of the out-works of the castle, is popularly, though erroneously, known as "John Knox's pulpit." In 1861, by permission of the late Sir Andrew Orr, then proprietor of the estate, a new footpath, making access to the ruins more easy, was constructed at a cost of £300, and opened in May, 1865. It is fully a mile and a half in length, and affords views of several fine waterfalls. Harviestoun Castle is the seat of John E. Kerr esq. J.P. Half-yearly fairs are held here on the second Monday in May and third Monday in October. The principal landowners in the parish are William H. Dobie esq. J.P. Col. Robert Haig J.P., J. Ernest Kerr esq. J.P. and John Moir esq. The parish of Dollar, which has an area of 4,772 acres, is bounded on the north by Glendevon, on the east by Muckart and Fossoway, and on the west by Tillicoultry; a portion of this parish forms ecclesiastically a part of the quoad sacra parish of Blairingone; rateable value, burghal, £8,931 17s.; landward, £4,401; the population in 1911 was 1,871 civil parish; burgh, 1,497 and 1,811 in the ecclesiastical parish; area of burgh, 219 acres.

MENSTRIE is a village, situated at the base of the Ochil hills, on the road from Stirling to Dollar, 5 miles north-east from the former, 5 east from Bridge of Allan and 2 west from Alva, in the small debt court district of Alloa, and having a station on the Alloa and Alva branch of the North British railway; it was originally in the parish of Logie (Stirlingshire), but on the transfer of Alva parish from Stirling to Clackmannanshire, this village was, by Boundary Order No. 124, transferred into Alva parish, where it still continues for civil purposes. The Established church here was enlarged in 1897, and the parish was then constituted a quoad sacra parish. There is also a United Free church. Here is a large distillery, extensive wood carving and moulding mills, and a furniture manufactory. The County Council have constructed a reservoir here, at a cost of £20,000, for supplying the villages of Tullibody, Cambus, Fishcross and Upper Sauchie with water. An old house in the village is pointed out as having been the birth-place of Sir William Alexander kt. a statesman and poet during the reign of James VI. subsequently created by Charles I. Viscount Canada, and first Earl of Stirling, at the coronation of Charles I. at Holyrood, in consideration of his services and of having been the founder of the colony of Nova Scotia: the estates at a subsequent period passed into the possession of the Abercromby family, and here in 1738 was born Maj.-Gen. Sir Ralph Abercromby K.B. who died of wounds received at Alexandria, Egypt, 28th March, 1801, his widow being subsequently raised to the peerage as Baroness Abercromby of Aboukir and Tullibody. Lord Abercromby D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner; population 1911, 861.

SAUCHIE (New and Old) are populous villages immediately contiguous to each other, in the civil parish of Alloa, nearly 2 miles north of Alloa, on the road to Alva, with a station locally in Fishcross, on the Stirling and Kinross branch of the North British railway. There is an Established church here, built in 1842, and the district is now formed into a quoad sacra parish. A number of colliers, employed by the Alloa Coal Company, reside in these villages, and there is a Sunday school for their children, maintained by an endowment known as Lady Charlotte Erskine's. There is also a Public Hall, with billiard room and reading room, accommodating 800.

FISHCROSS, adjoining Sauchie to the east, contains Sauchie railway station and a United Free Mission church. A large hut, presented by the Red Cross Society, in gratitude for contributions from the miners, is used as a Public Hall, recreation room and reading room.

HOWTON is at the north-west of the village of Sauchie.

The population in the quoad sacra parish of Sauchie in 1911 was 3,193.

TILLICOULTRY,

WITH COALSNAUGHTON.

TILLICOULTRY is a parish and police burgh, in Stirling poor combination and in the small debt court district of Alloa, on the road from Stirling to Kinross, south-east of the Ochil hills, 3 miles north-east of Alloa, 2 east of Alva, 9 north-east from Stirling and 13 south-west from Kinross, with a station on the main line between Glasgow and Perth of the North British railway. Ben Cleuch, the loftiest of the Ochil range, rises to 2,369 feet above the sea level a few miles to the north of the town, and the view from the summit of this mountain is one of the most extensive in Scotland, stretching from the North Sea on the east, to Goat Fell, in the Isle of Arran, on the west, and including the Lammermoor Chain, the Bass Rock, Edinburgh, Arthur's Seat, the Pentland Hills and the river Forth. The Devon river winds along the north border of and through the parish. The inhabitants adopted the "Police and Improvement Act (1862)" in 1871, and the town is governed by a provost, two bailies and six commissioners. In 1901 the parish council made a splendid road over the hills immediately to the north of the town, at a cost of about £200. The town is well supplied with water from a stream which comes from the hills on the north. The name of the parish is supposed to be derived from the Gaelic, "Tullich-cultir," signifying the hill at the back of the land. There are several woollen manufactories established here and at Devonside, chiefly for making shawls, fancy plaids, tweeds &c. The parish abounds in coal, and the hills to the northward are said to contain various kinds of minerals, and about a century ago a silver mine here was wrought by a London company; but from the thinness of the seams the works were abandoned. The Popular Institute, on the north side of the town, has a tower with spire, erected with a sum of £1,500, presented by the late James Archibald esq. and an illuminated clock and bell. The orphanage, founded by the liberality of the late James Paton esq. who bequeathed £5,000 towards the endowment, stands on the north side of the town: it was opened 21st March, 1879, and is available for 30 inmates. The principal antiquities are the ruins of a circular building on a steep and rugged basaltic eminence which rises to the north of the town, and the remains of a Druidical circle on the south end of a rising ground lying to the east of it, called "Cuninghar." In 1862 two urns, each about 18 inches in diameter and the same in height, containing human bones, were found in making excavations within this circle; and again in 1894 another urn was discovered, as well as a very complete grave of the Stone period containing a food urn. There is a Parish church, three United Free churches, Baptist, Evangelical Union and Congregational chapels. Board schools were erected in the centre of the High street in 1875, at a cost of about £3,000. These are now controlled by the County Education Authority. Branches of the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited are established in the town. Tillicoultry House is the residence of Robert Wilson esq. The principal landowners in the parish are Robert G. Wardlaw Ramsay esq. J.P.; J. Ernest Kerr esq. J.P. Charles Blair esq. J.P. Miss C. E. Johnstone and the Earl of Mansfield.

The area of the parish of Tillicoultry is 6,946 acres; rateable value, burghal and landward, £17,943; in 1901 it had a population of 4,986, the burgh containing 3,338, and in 1911, parish, 4,649; burgh, 3,105, and 1,124 inhabited houses.

COALSNAUGHTON is a small hamlet in the parish of and about a mile from Tillicoultry, and has a United Free church and schools, erected in 1873.

DEVONSIDE is a hamlet in the parish.

DUMBARTONSHIRE,

ANCIENTLY designated Lennox, and subsequently Dun-bar-tonshire (which latter, though not the most popular, is the proper appellation), is a small county in the west of Scotland, and considered as within the boundary of the Highlands. From Inverannan Hotel, Perthshire, in the north, it runs trending eastwards from near Dumbarton to Maryhill, a little north of Glasgow, being a length of 39 miles, by a breadth varying from 2 miles at Arrochar, between Lochs Long and Lomond, to 9 between Dumbarton and Kilmarnock; its boundaries are, north Argyllshire and Perthshire, west Loch Long, south the Clyde, east and north-east Stirlingshire and Loch Lomond; the parishes of Cumbernauld and Kirkintilloch, however, are not included in this measurement, being detached from the main portion on the south-east, and lying between the counties of Lanark and Stirling. This severed portion of the county is 12 miles long by from 2 to 4½ broad, and was annexed to the district in the reign of Robert I. The entire shire embraces an area of 157,433 acres of land and 13,489 of water. The population of the county in 1901 was 113,865 and in 1911, 139,831, viz.: males, 69,718; females, 70,113. The number of inhabited houses in 1911 was 28,238; uninhabited, 3,261; and building, 193. In point of size this county stands as the twenty-eighth, and in population as the tenth.

Name and Early History.—In ancient times the name of the shire was "Levanach," signifying "the county of Leven," which was corrupted in the course of years to "Levenax," and more latterly to "Lennox." Originally this district was the residence of a British tribe designated the "Attacottie" or "Eithacacti," a word importing "dwellers along the extremity of the wood. The descendants of this people were not enslaved or expelled from their hunting grounds by the Romans, who erected a wall or dyke from near Dunglass Point, in this county, to the Firth of Forth, some remains of which can be traced at Cumbernauld and in the town of Kirkintilloch; they became known as the Britons of Strath-Clyde, and, though almost perpetually at variance with their neighbours, they remained a distinct race till the reign of Malcolm IV. From these people the name of Dumbartonshire is said to be derived, and taken from the appellation of the castle, signifying "the hill of the Britons." This region, until the early part of the 18th century, continued to be the ready prey of certain lawless Highland clans, who lurked in the recesses of its interior, and were finally extirpated or reduced to quiescence and subordination only by the most vigorous measures that could be adopted by the civil government of the country. It was at one period the property of a powerful family of Saxon origin, one of whom, called Alwyn, the son of Arkil, was elevated to be Earl of Lennox in the reign of William the Lion, and his descendants for several centuries were at once heritable sheriffs of the county and chief possessors of its lands. The Earldom of Lennox was raised to a Dukedom in 1581; but Charles, the sixth Duke, dying without issue in 1672, the honours of the family, including the Earldom of Darnley, developed upon Charles II. as nearest male heir, who bestowed them on his natural son, Charles Lennox, after whose demise the estates were sold.

Soil, Produce &c.—The soil is various, consisting in the north and west of mountain and moor, and south and east of Loch Lomond of deep black loam, clay, gravel and bog and peat. The climate generally is good; along the vale of the Leven and the Clyde it is mild, but on the Kilpatrick Braes and among the mountains of Arrochar and Luss the cold is rather severe, and stormy weather is experienced. A large part of the county is planted with wood, the soil and climate having been found favourable to the growth of timber. The chief crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1920," are:—Oats, 8,621 acres; wheat, 838; barley, including bere, 31; total of corn crops, 9,504 acres; potatoes, 2,989 acres; turnips and swedes, 1,415; cabbage, 43; rape, 203; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. 113; hay from rye grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 6,145 acres; permanent pasture (not for hay), 19,562 acres. The area of the county is 156,927 acres, of which mountain and heath land used for grazing was 80,229 acres; permanent grass, 21,573 acres; arable land, 25,849 acres.

The live stock in 1920 comprised 1,343 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 497; cows in milk, 5,359; cows in calf but not in milk, 953; heifers in calf, 818; other cattle, two years and above, 2,470; one year and under two, 1,846; under one year, 1,585; ewes kept for breeding, 29,671; other sheep, one year and above, 9,102; under one year, 24,834; sows kept for breeding, 181; other pigs, 934. The cattle of the shire are chiefly of the West Highland breed, some of which are reared in the county.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 86; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 87; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 60; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 48; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 44; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 70; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 106; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 90; above 300 acres, 8; total, 599.

More than a century has elapsed since the manufacturing industry was introduced into this part of Scotland—bleachfields about that period making their appearance on the banks of Loch Lomond and the Leven. About 1768 the first printworks were established on the Leven, but now calico printing and Turkey-red dyeing are very extensively pursued at several places. Ship building, both iron and wood, is a branch of some importance, as is also the manufacture of chemicals.

Dumbartonshire does not contain numerous minerals, but it has some clay, sandstone, limestone, coal and iron ore. The production in 1919 was:—Fire-clay, 40,286 tons; coal, 380,167 tons; gravel and sand, 80 tons; igneous rocks, 41,279 tons; iron ore, from coal mines, 2,890 tons; sandstone, 2,986 tons.

The number employed in the mines in 1919 was:—Underground, 1,594; above ground, 510; total, 2,104.

Mountains, Lakes, Railways &c.—Of hills, most of which lie in the northern part of the county, between Loch Lomond and Loch Long, the chief are those of Arrochar, Luss, Row and Roseneath, which are inaccessible to the plough, and abound with moors, mosses and woods; the hills of Kilpatrick, on the south, are of much less height, Ben Voirlich, adjoining Perthshire, having the greatest altitude, rising 3,300 feet above the level of the sea. The other principal elevations are Ben Vane, 3,004 feet; Ben Eich, 2,302 feet; Ben Breach, 2,233 feet; Ben Reoch, 2,168 feet; and Tullich, 2,075 feet. The precipitous and rugged summits of these mountains, constituting the Highland district, are frequently capped with snow, and in the finest weather hid amidst the clouds; some of these eminences are apparently volcanic, particularly the rock on which Dumbarton Castle stands. There are about ten lakes or lochs, among which are Loch Long and Loch Gare, projecting into the Highland territory from the Firth of Clyde; but the most extensive is Loch Lomond. It lies at the foot of the Grampian mountains, which terminate here, but seem to rise in many islands that appear a continuation of them. These islands, thirty-two in number, are lofty and picturesque. On Inch Cailoch (or the island of Nuns) are the remains of a conventual church, and on Inch Murrins (or the island of St. Murrinus, 2 miles long, and converted into a deer park) are the ruins of a house once belonging to the Lennox family. This loch is 30 miles long, in some places 8 broad, and covers a surface of 20,000 acres; the depth varies from twenty to one hundred fathoms. It abounds with delicious trout, and the southern part has salmon. The lake discharges its waters into the Clyde by the river Leven, which is the only stream of any note in the district. The Forth and Clyde Canal, about 35 miles in length, extends from Bowling on the Clyde to Grangemouth on the Forth. The North British railway enters the county from Glasgow, a little west of Maryhill, throwing off a branch to Bearsden and Milngavie, and continuing on to Dumbarton, where it divides, one branch going north to Balloch on Loch Lomond and north-east to Drymen, the other passing on to Helensburgh, where it joins the West Highland line; this latter runs by Garelochhead, Arrochar and Ardlui (head of Loch Lomond) to Fort William; the two detached parishes of Kirkintilloch and Cumbernauld, lying north-east of Glasgow, are traversed by the North British and the Caledonian railways, and the last named has a line by the north of the Clyde to Dumbarton &c.

Divisions, Representation &c.—Dumbartonshire is divided into 12 civil parishes and 25 complete and parts of 5 ecclesiastical parishes; it contains but one royal burgh—Dumbarton—and five police burghs, Clydebank, Cove and Kilcreggan, Helensburgh, Kirkintilloch and Milngavie. The county, inclusive of all burghs situated therein except the burghs of Dumbarton and Clydebank, returns one member to the Imperial Parliament. The constituency numbered in 1919 35,234 electors.

ALEXANDRIA is a town and quoad sacra parish in the parish of Bonhill and in Dumbarton small debt court district and poor combination, on the west side of the river Leven, here crossed by a fine girder bridge, erected in 1897-8 by the County Road Board, at a cost of £8,000, in place of the former suspension bridge of 1836, and opened 2nd July, 1898. The town is 3 miles from Dumbarton, 17 from Glasgow and 64 from Edinburgh; it contains several well-built streets, and has a station on the Dumbarton and Balloch joint railway. The trade consists largely in the printing and dyeing of fabrics, and there are several extensive print works on the banks of the river. There are Established, United Free and Catholic churches and various chapels. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Mungo will seat 228 persons; the Rev. William Smith Robinson L.Th. of Durham University, has been rector since 1918. The Public Hall is centrally situated at the bridge end. The Ewing Gilmour Institute, presented to the town by W. Ewing Gilmour esq. at a cost of about £12,000, consists of library, reading and recreation rooms. A fine stone monument, erected by Messrs. J. A. Paton and Sons, Alexandria, to the memory of those who fell in the Great War (1914-1918), has been placed in Christie Park. The public drinking fountain in Main street was erected in 1870, in honour of the late Alexander Smollett esq. of Bonhill, by his friends and tenants. The Vale of Leven Young Men's and Women's Christian Association has premises in Bridge street. Tullichewan Castle is now (1921) unoccupied; Cameron House, the residence of H. W. M. Christie esq.; Auchendennan, of William James Chrystal esq. and Auchenheglish, of David J. Hamilton esq. The area comprises, with Bonhill and Jamestown, 8,373 acres; gross rateable value, £83,386. The population of Alexandria East and West Wards in Bonhill civil parish in 1911 was 6,143, and the ecclesiastical parish, 9,849.

ARDLUI, see ARROCHAR.

ARROCHAR (more properly Arroquhar) is a parish lying between Loch Lomond and Loch Long, and bounded on the south by Luss; it is nearly 16 miles in length and varies from 1½ miles to 3 in breadth, and has stations at Arrochar and Ardlui, at the head of Loch Lomond, on the West Highland section of the North British railway from Craigendoran to Fort William and Mallaig. The village, situated at the head of Loch Long, is 10 miles north from Luss, about 1½ west from Tarbet, 17½ from Balloch and 40 from Glasgow. Here is an Established church. In the parish is the celebrated Loch Sloy, much resorted to by tourists. Ardlui, 8 miles north, is the terminus of the Loch Lomond steamers. The area is 25,858 acres; rateable value, £7,515; population in 1911, 537.

BALLOCH is a village in the parish of Bonhill, at the south end of Loch Lomond, and about a mile north-west from Bonhill, and has a terminal station on the Dumbarton and Balloch Joint Railway. In 1842 Sir James Colquhoun bart. of Luss, erected an elegant suspension bridge across the Leven water, in place of the ferry previously in use. The old bridge has been superseded by a substantial iron girder bridge, supported from the bed of the river by stone pillars, and opened for traffic in 1888. The bridge toll ceased on May 15, 1895. There are two hotels—the Balloch hotel at the foot of Loch Lomond, and the Tullichewan temperance hotel, both adjoining the station. Balloch Castle and estate were in 1916 acquired by the Glasgow Corporation, and opened as a public park. A fair is held at Balloch on the 15th of September for horses. The children here attend the School at Jamestown

BEARSDEN, or New Kilpatrick, is a town in the parish of New or East Kilpatrick, 5 miles west from Glasgow, and having a station on the Milngavie and Glasgow section of the North British railway; it consists principally of villa residences, with some shops, and has a branch of the Bank of Scotland. It closely adjoins the kirktown of New Kirk, and the united villages bear the name of Bearsden or New Kilpatrick. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches; there is also an Episcopal church dedicated to All Saints. St. Peter's Roman Catholic College (for advanced students), opened in March, 1892, was the gift of the Archbishop of Glasgow to his diocese, and is a building of stone, erected at a cost of upwards of £30,000. The Buchanan Retreat, completed in 1891, was erected by the Misses Buchanan, of Bellfield House, Kilmarnock, at a cost of about £30,000, for the reception of aged men. The Schaw Convalescent Home, opened in 1895, at a cost of £46,000, was the gift of the late Miss Margery Shanks Schaw, in memory of her brother, A. Schaw esq. and is now used for patients from the Royal Infirmary, Glasgow.

BONHILL is a parish and small town, in Dumbarton poor combination and small debts court district, 1 mile from Loch Lomond, 64 west from Edinburgh, 17 north-west from Glasgow and 3 north from Dumbarton, on the east side of the Leven, and connected with Alexandria by a girder bridge, constructed in 1897-8 by the County Road Board, at a cost of £8,000, and opened 2 July, 1898. The nearest station is at Alexandria, on the Dumbarton and Balloch Joint railway. The parish church, which stands nearly in the centre of the town, on the margin of the Leven, was erected in 1835-6, at a cost of nearly £3,000, and is a fine building in the Gothic style, with a square tower containing a clock, and affords about 1,000 sittings. The United Free church, erected in 1844, is an edifice of red freestone, with a tower and tapering spire, and was enlarged in 1885, and again in 1892. The United Presbyterian (now the United Free) church was built in 1830. Major A. P. D. Telfer Smollett D.S.O., M.C. and Humphry Crum-Ewing esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises, with Alexandria, Jamestown and Balloch, 8,380 acres; rateable value, £83,386; the population in 1901 was 14,379, and 15,969 in 1911, including 6,143 in Alexandria wards and 3,333 in Bonhill ward; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 3,725.

CASTLECARY, see CUMBERNAULD.

CLYDEBANK, a district in the parish of Old Kilpatrick, was constituted a burgh 21st Dec. 1886, and includes Dalmuir, Kilbowie, part of Yoker and Radnor Park. A branch line of the North British railway from Clydebank to Partick was opened in Dec. 1882, and continued to Yorkhill, Feb. 1885, and at Stobcross junction this line joins the underground railway for Glasgow (Queen street). The station here on the Caledonian railway was opened in Oct. 1897. Here are a ship building yard and engineering works, which give employment to a number of men. The municipal government is vested in a provost, 4 bailies and 10 commissioners. The burgh is supplied with water by the Clydebank and District Water Trust. There is an Established church, the Hamilton Memorial United Free church, erected in 1884, the West United Free church, built in 1887, and two others, a Roman Catholic church, built in 1903, a Wesleyan chapel, erected in 1886, Baptist and Congregational chapels, Mission halls and Salvation Army barracks. St. Columba's Episcopal church will seat 460 persons; the Rev. John Smith has been priest in charge since 1912.

The Town Hall and Municipal buildings, erected in 1899-1902, at a cost of about £50,000, are of stone in the Renaissance style, and include a large council chamber with gallery, committee rooms, a concert hall, seating about 1,600 persons, police department, with 13 cells and a house for the superintendent, and a clock tower, 109 feet in height, the upper part of which forms an open belfry. The main entrance and corridors are panelled and finished in oak. Behind is a lesser hall, with a gallery, seated for 400 persons, and beyond this is the burgh court room, with magistrates' and fiscal's rooms, witness rooms &c. Public baths and a fire station were erected on the opposite side of a new street to the west of the Municipal buildings, and include a bath-keeper's house and eight houses for the firemen. In 1913 a Public Library was opened at a cost of about £10,000, the gift of the late Andrew Carnegie esq. LL.D.

The area of the burgh is 1,330 acres; population in 1891 was 9,998, in 1901, 18,670, and in 1911, 37,548. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 25,626.

The population of the wards in 1911 was:—First, 4,448; Second, 6,321; Third, 7,437; Fourth, 7,420; Fifth, 11,913.

DALMUIR, a quoad sacra parish, formed Nov. 12th, 1909, from Old Kilpatrick civil parish and St. James, Clydebank, ecclesiastical parish, is about 7 miles east from Dumbarton and 8 miles west of Glasgow, in the parish of Old Kilpatrick and partly in the burgh of Clydebank, with stations on the North British and Caledonian railways, and occupies an elevated site commanding fine views of the Clyde and the surrounding country, and has an Established church, built in 1903, and a Masonic hall. There are engineering works and a ship building yard, as well as gas works and an electric power station. Population in 1911, 7,784.

RADNOR PARK is a village about three-quarters of a mile from Dalmuir and Kilbowie stations on the North British and Caledonian railways, and has Established and United Free churches. Population in 1901, with Dalmuir Hill, 1,897. It is now annexed to the Burgh of Clydebank.

At KILBOWIE is an Established church, and here also are the extensive works of the Singer Manufacturing Co. Limited. Kilbowie cemetery of 8 acres was opened in January, 1897. The population of Kilbowie in 1901 was 7,312.

CUMBERNAULD

CUMBERNAULD is a parish and ancient village on the main road between Glasgow and Edinburgh, in a detached portion of the county and in the small debt court district of Dumbarton, 33 miles west from Edinburgh, 29 east from Dumbarton, 14 north-east from Glasgow, 13 south from Stirling, 9 west from Falkirk, 7 east from Kirkintilloch and 7 north from Airdrie, with a station at Dullatur on the North British railway, and one (Cumbernauld) on the Caledonian railway, about 2 miles from the village. The staple business of the district is mining, there being several coal and lime works and many quarries of good freestone in the neighbourhood, as well as several fire-clay works. Traces of Roman stations &c. are to be found in the district. The parish church stands on an eminence embosomed in trees at the west end of the village; there is also an Established church at Condorrat, United Free Church, a Mission Hall and a good Public Library and a subscription news room. Cumbernauld House is the property and residence of Capt. Alan Burns J.P. Capt. Alan Burns J.P. Alexander Whitelaw esq. D.L., J.P. The Carron Company and the trustees of the late John Motherwell are the principal landowners. The parish has an area of 11,675 statute acres; rateable value, £25,173. Population in 1911, 5,120 in the civil parish, including 2,600 in the ward, and 3,488 in the ecclesiastical parish, of which 118 were in Stirlingshire.

CONDORRAT is a small village in this parish, and about 3 miles west from Cumbernauld. Here is an Established church. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in the coal and ironstone mines and quarries here. The population of the ecclesiastical parish, which extends into Kirkintilloch parish, in 1911 was 2,119.

DULLATUR is a hamlet in this parish, on the borders of Stirlingshire, and has a railway station on the North British railway, about 1½ miles distant.

CASTLECARY is a small hamlet in this parish, about 1½ miles north-east of Cumbernauld, but in the county of Stirling. CROY is a hamlet in this parish, and distant from Cumbernauld about 3 miles: here is a Catholic church: each of these two places has a station on the North British railway.

AUCHENSTARRY (population in 1901, 587), Molinburn and Smithston (population in 1901, 375) are mining villages in this parish.

DUMBARTON

DUMBARTON ("dun Bretann," the Welshmen's fortress) is a town and royal burgh, the capital of the county, head of a poor combination and a parish, 59 miles west from Edinburgh, 15 north-west from Glasgow, 8 south-east from Helensburgh and 3 south from Alexandria, with a station on the Dumbarton and Balloch joint line of the North British and Caledonian railways, and another at the east end of the town on the Caledonian railway. The town is principally built on low ground, nearly encompassed on its western quarter by the river Leven, about half a mile from its junction with the Clyde, and almost secluded from the view of persons on the latter river by the intervention of Dumbarton rock, a huge rocky eminence on the edge of the Frith, and about half a mile from the town. From 1675, Dumbarton gave the title of Earl to a branch of the Douglas family, but it became extinct on the death of George, 2nd Earl, some time after 1716. The present town, which stands at a short distance up the river Leven, is chiefly composed of one main street, disposed in a semicircular form around the head or north end of the peninsula; there are, however, some beautiful avenues lined with detached houses, and an extensive suburb on the west side of the Leven leading to Renton and Helensburgh, which is connected with the town by a good stone bridge of five arches, 300 feet in length. The waters of the Leven form a commodious harbour, and an excellent quay and private dock have been constructed. The pier, which belongs to the corporation, was erected at a cost of £12,000, and opened in May, 1875, but is now in ruins. The Clyde Navigation is controlled by a body of trustees. The principal trade, and that on which the prosperity of the town now chiefly depends is comprised in shipbuilding and engineering, both of which are carried on extensively, and in ordinary times about 5,000 men are employed at the different works. Brewing, ironfounding, and rope making are also pursued to a limited extent, but the manufacture of crown glass, once an important craft here, ceased in 1848. Dumbarton was erected into a royal burgh by Alexander II. in the year 1222, and its privileges (including the right of fishing in the Leven) were confirmed by a charter of James VI. The municipal government is vested in a provost, three bailies, a dean of guild a treasurer and eight councillors. The sheriff ordinary court and the commissary court are held every Tuesday and Friday during session, the sheriff small debt court every Tuesday during the session, and on vacation court days, and the debts recovery court every Friday. Quarter sessions are held on the first Tuesday in March, May and August, and last Tuesday in October. Under the "Representation of the People Act, 1918," Dumbarton, together with Clydebank, forms the Dumbarton district of the burghs, returning one member. The town is lighted with gas and electricity from works in the hands of the corporation. A plentiful supply of water is obtained from the Long Craigs and Loch Humphrey, and the drainage of the town is being gradually completed. An electric tram service was opened February 20, 1907.

The County buildings and Court house, completed in 1825, at an expense exceeding £5,000, were reconstructed and two spacious wings added in 1863, at a cost of £5,170, in 1896 a sum of £2,200 was expended in enlarging the court house, and in 1898 a further sum of £6,000, for additions to County buildings. The buildings comprise court rooms, various offices, and a gaol, but prisoners are now sent to Glasgow. The Sheriff and Commissary Courts, and the meetings of the Commissioners of Supply and County Council are all held here; and here also is the Justice of the Peace office. The County Police offices, in rear of the County buildings, were completed in 1896, at a cost of £2,700. New Municipal and Police buildings were erected in 1899-1903, on the site of College Park, presented to the burgh by Lord Overtoun; the buildings are of red freestone, in the Scottish Baronial style, and the cost, exclusive of the site, was £19,000. The main building contains on the ground floor the town clerk's offices, burgh chamberlain's offices, magistrates' room and police court room, witnesses' rooms &c.; the front entrance hall is paved with marble and the walls are lined with richly coloured tiles: on the first floor is the council chamber, 41 by 28 feet, committee and waiting rooms, provost's room and the offices of the burgh surveyor; at the north end of the main building is the police section, containing a court room, charge room, superintendent's room, inspectors' and muster rooms and cell for prisoners. The grounds surrounding the building have been enclosed and tastefully laid out at a cost of upwards of £3,000, defrayed by Lord Overtoun: in the grounds is a fine bronze statue of the late Peter Denny LL.D. shipbuilder and engineer, died 1895, erected by friends and fellow townsmen; there is also a granite cross, erected to the memory of the officers and men of Dumbarton who fell during the South African war, 1899-1901. The Post Office, in College street, is a stone building erected in 1907-1908 at a cost of about £4,200. The William Denny Memorial Institute, in Church street, a fine edifice of stone, was opened on the 26th January, 1892, at a cost of upwards of £7,600, as a memorial to William Denny esq. who died at Buenos Ayres, 17th March, 1887. The Dumbarton Free Public Library, in Strathleven place, is a building of stone, erected in 1909 at a cost of £6,000, provided by the late Andrew Carnegie esq. LL.D. Public Baths were erected in 1914 by the trustees of Walter Brock esq. at a cost of over £10,000, on a site provided by the Dumbarton Corporation, and were handed over to the Corporation in 1914 as a memorial gift. There is also a Literary and Philosophical Society. In High street are branches of the British Linen Co. Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and in Church street the Bank of Scotland. The principal hotel is the "Elephant." Two weekly newspapers are published here—the "Dumbarton Herald" and the "Lennox Herald." The New Joint Infectious Diseases Hospital for the county and burgh, erected in 1899-1901, at a cost of about £25,000, exclusive of the site, occupies an elevated position on the Cardross road; the buildings are of stone, and consist of three wards with pavilions, an administrative block, steam laundry, disinfecting and washing houses &c.; there is also a Cottage Hospital at Braehead. The combination poor house, at Townend, was completed in 1865, at a cost of about £7,000, and is situated on the outskirts of the town, in a healthy and pleasant locality.

The parish church, at the east end of High street, erected in 1811 at a cost of £6,000, is a handsome edifice, with a fine spire and clock. There are also four United Free churches and a Free (High) church; the Episcopal church of St. Augustine's, in High street, erected in 1873, is an edifice of stone in the Gothic style, and affords 800 sittings: the incumbency, net £300, has been held since 1912 by the Rev. William Brews M.A., of Trinity College, Dublin. The Mission hall, in Church street, was built at a cost of £1,500, and there are also Wesleyan Methodist, Evangelical Union and Baptist chapels and a Catholic church. Of the ancient collegiate church, founded in 1450 by Isabella Duchess of Albany and Countess of Lennox, and dedicated to St. Mary, all that now remains is one of the tower arches, which was removed and placed at the entrance to the rectory of the Episcopal church in Church street, from whence it was taken in 1908 and placed in front of the main entrance to the Municipal buildings; the Dumbartonshire railway now passes over the site of the church. In 1911 a new Academy was erected, at a cost of over £32,000, at Braehead to replace the old building in Church street. In the elementary and secondary departments there are sixteen classrooms, as well as various special rooms; there is also a large assembly hall, and detached from the main building is a gymnasium. There are seven schools, including the Dumbarton Academy, and a Catholic school. Levengrove Park, covering about 35 acres, was presented to the town by the late Peter Denny esq. of Helenslee, and the late John Macmillan esq. of College Park, and was opened as a public park 30th May, 1885. It is pleasantly situated, and bounded by the Clyde and Leven, and the grounds have been tastefully laid out at a cost of about £20,000. A cattle market is held on Monday, and is well attended; a large cattle market is held on Monday, and is well attended; a large cattle fair is also held on Carman Moor on the first Wednesday in June.

The rock of Dumbarton, the most striking and famous feature of this town, is an isolated mass of basaltic rock, on the margin of the river Clyde, a mile in circumference at its base, but diminishing in breadth near the top, which is cloven into two summits, one higher than the other; these are almost perpendicular, and rise to a height of more than 300 feet above the level of the stream. It has been occupied by defensive works of varied character for many centuries, but of the ancient castle no remains now exist. In Bede's time it was deemed almost impregnable; but it was reduced by famine in 756, and in 1291 was surrendered to Edward I.; John Balliol regained it in 1292, and Bruce held it in 1309; in 1481 it was besieged by the English, and having been taken, was annexed to the Crown in 1485; in 1540 it was visited by James V. and in 1547-8 served as a place of refuge for Queen Mary; in 1571, May 2, it was invested and captured by the troops of the Regent Lennox; from 1639 to 1640, it was alternately held by the Covenanters and the king, but in 1652 fell into the hands of Cromwell. On the union of the kingdoms in 1707, it was named as one of the four fortresses agreed to be kept in repair.

Overtoun is now (1921) the residence of D. H. L. Young esq.; Dalmoak Castle is the seat of James Aiken esq. J.P. and Strathleven of Humphrey Ewing Crum-Ewing esq. D.L., J.P.; Col. John McAusland Denny C.B., D.L., J.P. of Helenslee; Dr. John Douglas C. White and Humphrey Ewing Crum-Ewing esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 8,324 acres; rateable value, £107,385; the population in 1901 was 15,167 and in 1911, 16,912, of which 16,761 were in the royal burgh. Area of the burgh, 1,123 acres; population in 1911, 21,989, which includes 4,794 in Cardross parish and 434 in Old Kilpatrick parish. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 11,627. The population of the municipal wards in 1911 was:—First, 4,794; Second, 3,525; Third, 3,459; Fourth, 4,509; Fifth, 5,702; total, 21,989. Included in the population of the parish are 8 officials and 224 inmates of the Dumbarton combination poorhouse.

The population of the parliamentary borough in 1911 was 18,957. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1919 was 8,863.

DALREOCH is a quoad sacra parish, formed from that of Cardross, within the burgh of Dumbarton, but separated from it for ecclesiastical purposes, and has a station on the Dumbarton and Balloch joint railway. The parish church was erected in 1873, at a cost of £3,000. Population in 1911 was 4,850.

KNOXLAND is a quoad sacra parish within the burgh of Dumbarton, but separated from it for ecclesiastical purposes. The parish church, erected in 1883-4 at a cost of £4,500, is an edifice in the Gothic style, and will seat 800 persons. The Rev. Archibald Montgomery is parish minister. Population in 1911 was 5,285.

DUNTOCHER, including Hardgate, is a considerable village and quoad sacra parish in the civil parish of Old Kilpatrick, 2 miles north from Clydebank, 52 west from Edinburgh and 9 from Glasgow. The principal part of the village is lighted with gas supplied by the corporation of Glasgow, and is governed by a landward committee of the parish council of Old Kilpatrick. Here is an ancient bridge over the Duntocher Burn, a small river issuing from Loch Humphrey; the bridge is said to have been built under the auspices of the Emperor Antonius Pius by Quintus Lollius Urbicus, his lieutenant; it was restored by Lord Blantyre in 1772, and near it is a stone with a Latin inscription recording these things. The Established church here was erected in 1836 at an expense of £1,700; there are also United Free and Catholic churches. The population in 1911 of the ecclesiastical parish was 3,238, and of Duntocher Parish Ward, 3,369.

GARELOCHHEAD is a village and quoad sacra parish in the parishes of Row and Roseneath, prettily situated at the head of a loch, a screen of hills rising behind separating the Gare Loch from Loch Long; it is about 6 miles from Row and has a station on the West Highland section of the North British railway. The interesting and beautiful spot called "Glenfruin" is approached from this place. There are Established and United Free churches. The village has a good pier, at which pleasure steamers arrive and depart, and facing it is the Garelochhead Hotel. There is a motor car service between Helensburgh and Garelochhead, the cars running at frequent intervals daily. About a mile and a half on the road to Arrochar, on an eminence called "Whistlefield," splendid views may be had of Lochs Goil and Long and the Gare Loch. There are many seats of gentry, and this neighbourhood is a favourite resort from June to September. Population in 1911, 1,042.

HARDGATE, see KILPATRICK.

HELENSBURGH is a modern town, burgh of barony, police burgh and seaport in the civil parish of Row, 22 miles west-north-west from Glasgow, 9 south from Luss, 5 from Greenock and 8 north-west from Dumbarton, with a terminal station on the North British railway, and one half a mile north of the town is a station on the West Highland section of the same system. The town, which lies on the Firth of Clyde, and is a perpetual feu from the trustees of the late Sir James Colquhoun bart. of Luss, was commenced in 1777, and is now the most agreeable watering place on the Clyde. Helensburgh was elevated to the rank of a burgh of barony in 1802; its municipal government is vested in 12 police commissioners, being three for each of the four wards into which the town is divided. A Police Court is held every Monday, and at other times when required. The town is lighted with gas and supplied with water from works the property of the Corporation. The original pier is now called the Old Pier, another having been erected by the North British Railway Co. in 1882, at Craigendoran, about one mile east of the town, in connection with the station there, which is the starting point of the West Highland railway, opened in 1893, to the Western Highlands. The quay, erected in 1817, was greatly enlarged in 1872 and reconstructed in 1898, and extends from the centre of the town into the river for a considerable distance. Helensburgh was created a quoad sacra parish in 1862, and a west quoad sacra parish was formed in 1872. There are two Established and three United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church and Baptist and Congregational chapels. The Episcopal church of St. Michael and All Angels, built in 1867, will seat 500 persons; the Rev. Charles Bernard Beard M.A. of Glasgow University, has been rector since 1905. The Municipal Buildings, in East Princes street and Sinclair street, form a handsome modern edifice, embracing a court hall, council chamber, and general public offices, with police station and cells in the rear. There is also a Fire Brigade. The Victoria Hall, in Sinclair street, was built at a cost of £6,000, and there are Town, Mission, Masonic and Oddfellows' halls, reading rooms and circulating libraries. The Victoria Infirmary and the Fever Hospital are both in North King street; the latter, built at a cost of £3,000, is for infectious diseases. The Bank of Scotland, in West Clyde street, is a fine stone building in the Baronial style, and was erected at a cost of £3,000; the Union Bank Limited, in Colquhoun square, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, in James street, are also both substantial buildings of stone, and there is a branch of the National Bank of Scotland, in West Clyde street. The chief hotels are the Imperial, opposite the Old Pier, and the Queen's, some distance east of the town. On the Esplanade stands an obelisk, erected as a memorial to Henry Bell, the engineer, d. 14 Nov. 1830. Kidston Park, presented to the town by William Kidston esq. and the late Sir James Colquhoun bart. is situated at the foot of the Gare Loch, and commands an excellent view of the surrounding scenery. There is also a public park and recreation grounds in East King street. In the neighbourhood of Helensburgh resided for 25 years the celebrated Henry Bell, millwright and engineer, to whose fertile and persevering genius Europe is indebted for the first successful application of steam to the propelling of vessels by his production of a steamboat of 25 tons, called the "Comet," in which he made a trip from Port Glasgow to Helensburgh, in Jan. 1812, at a speed of 7 miles an hour. Mr. Bell was born in the parish of Torphichen, county of Linlithgow, April 7th, 1767, and died at his house (now the Queen's Hotel), in Helensburgh, Nov. 14th, 1830, and was interred in the parish churchyard of Row, where there is a memorial to him. The area of the burgh is 1,093; rateable value, £82,224; population in 1911, 8,529. Population of the wards in 1911:—First, 2,085; Second, 2,312; Third, 1,450; Fourth, 2,682; the population of the ecclesiastical parish of Helensburgh in 1911 was 5,847, and that of West Church (Helensburgh), 2,682.

KILMARONOCK is a parish in Dumbarton poor combination, at the foot of Loch Lomond, lying north of Bonhill parish, and its kirktown is situated about 6 miles north-east of the village of Bonhill; it contains Established and United Free churches and two schools. Ross Priory is the residence of Sir John Traill Cargill bart. The small island of Inchmurrin is in this parish; it is well wooded and at one end stand the ruins of an old castle of the Lennox family. The Duke of Montrose K.T. Sir Alexander Wellesley G. T. Leith-Buchanan bart. D.L., J.P. Robert Mackenzie esq. and Robert E. Findlay esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 10,339 acres; rateable value, £10,880; the population in 1911 was 847.

GARTOCHARN is a hamlet, in the parish of Kilmaronock, 2¼ miles from Caldarvan railway station, on the Stirling and Balloch section of the North British railway, 5 from Bonhill and 8 from Dumbarton.

CROFTAMIE is a district in the parish of Kilmaronock, and about 1½ miles from the village of Drymen: the Forth and Clyde section of the North British railway runs through it, and Drymen station, on the Stirling and Balloch section of that system, is locally in Croftamie. A Cottage Holiday House was erected here in 1898 by William Ewing Gilmour esq. of Balloch, as a memorial to his daughter; it is intended for the benefit of girls who are members of the institute at Alexandria. Population returned with the parish.

Post, M. O. & T. Office, Gartocharn; John Cooper, jun. postmaster. Letters received through Alexandria
Post, M. O. & T. Office, Croftamie; Alex. McGregor, postmaster. Letters for Croftamie should be addressed "Drymen Station, by Glasgow"

KILPATRICK

KILPATRICK (Old, or West) is a parish and village in Dumbarton poor combination, 53 miles west from Edinburgh, 10 north-west from Glasgow, and 5 east-south-east from Dumbarton, with stations on the North British and Caledonian railways. The water works at Cochno, constructed in 1874, supply Duntocher, Dalmuir and Clydebank, the area of the water district being 2,560 acres. The parish church, a neat edifice of stone, erected in 1812, has a square tower with a clock. At DALNOTTAR is a cemetery of 10 acres, opened in 1911.

BOWLING is a small village about three-quarters of a mile west from Kilpatrick, with stations on the North British and Caledonian railways, and a landing stage for passengers and goods on the Clyde. The Forth and Clyde canal (now owned by the Caledonian Railway Co.) begins at Bowling Bay, and extends along a course of 35 miles to the Forth at Grangemouth. The canal, begun in 1768, and opened throughout on the 28th July, 1790, is available for vessels drawing 8 feet of water, having a 19 feet beam and a 73 feet keel. An outer basin, admitting vessels drawing 19 feet of water, has been constructed for the discharge and shipment of cargoes for transit by the canal or rail. Auchintorlie is the seat of Col. George James Fergusson-Buchanan D.L., J.P. The Trustees of the Clyde Navigation have also a harbour here, for vessels laid up during the winter, or for sale. The United Free church in Bowling was erected in 1869. The Buchanan Institute, presented to the village by the late Andrew Buchanan esq. of Auchintorlie, at a cost of about £1,000, and opened Dec. 13th, 1884, comprises a library and reading and recreation rooms. A stone cross has been erected by public subscription to the memory of those who lost their lives in the Great War 1914-1918. Population of Bowling ward in 1911, 1,673, including 53 shipping.

At LITTLEMILL is a distillery and shipbuilding yard.

At DUNGLASS, half a mile west of Littlemill, are the ruins of some defensive works known as "Dunglass Castle," and in the grounds stands a memorial column, erected to Henry Bell, the eminent engineer, who ran the first steamboat on the Clyde in 1812.

MILTON and Dumbuck are places on the road to Dumbarton. Milton House, the residence of Henry M. Napier esq. J.P. is pleasantly situated on a declivity, commanding an extensive and beautiful view of the Clyde.

HARDGATE is about a quarter of a mile east from Duntocher, and Faifley about the same distance north. William Baird esq. Col. G. J. Fergusson-Buchanan D.L., J.P. and W. G. Black esq. are the principal landowners. The area of the parish comprises 12,609 acres; rateable value, landward, £56,285; burghal (Clydebank), £256,732. The population in 190- was 27,448, and in 1911, 43,345, viz.:— Clydebank police burgh, 37,548; Dumbarton burgh, 434; landward, 7,363 and 164 shipping. The population of Old Kilpatrick Ward in 1911 was 2,321.

The population of Old Kilpatrick ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 7,049.

NEW (or EAST) KILPATRICK is a parish in Dumbartonshire poor combination, formerly partly included in Stirlingshire, but in 1891 wholly transferred to the county of Dumbarton; it is upwards of 7 miles in extent from north to south, with a breadth of about 6 miles, and has stations called Bearsden and Hillfoot, on the Glasgow and Milngavie section of the North British railway. The Forth and Clyde canal intersects the south-western part of the parish, entering it on crossing the Kelvin by a stupendous aqueduct. The district was separated from Old Kilpatrick, which bounds the parish on the west, in the year 1649. The parish church was erected in 1807. The village of New Kilpatrick adjoins that of Bearsden, and is sometimes called by that name. The Reformatory for Girls at East Chapelton is a fine building of stone, and was erected in 1882. Garscube House, the seat of Sir Archibald Spencer Lindsey Campbell bart. D.L., J.P. is pleasantly situated on the west side of the Kelvin. Canniesburn is about a quarter of a mile south from Bearsden station. Garscadden is a district about 2 miles north-west from New Kilpatrick. Garscadden House, the residence of Capt. Archibald John Campbell-Colquhoun, is a fine old mansion, standing in a well-timbered park. The area comprises 11,974 acres; rateable value, £90,272; burghal (Milngavie), £25,299; population of the civil parish in 1901, 10,815, and in 1911, 13,798, of which 4,530 were in Milngavie police burgh. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 5,386.

By the Glasgow Boundaries Act, 1912, which came into operation Nov. 5, 1912, part of New Kilpatrick civil parish, with a population at the 1911 census of 3,598, was added to Glasgow City.

DRUMCHAPEL is a village in this parish, with a station on the North British railway, 7 miles west from Glasgow.

GARSCADDEN is a village in the parish.

TEMPLE is a quoad sacra parish formed from New Kilpatrick and Govan, Lanarkshire parish; the population in 1911 was 3,598 in Dumbartonshire, and 1,505 in Lanarkshire and Glasgow City; total, 5,103.

The villages of Knightswood, Netherton and Temple have been annexed to Glasgow for municipal purposes.

KIRKINTILLOCH is a police burgh, a parish and an ancient town, situated in a detached portion of the county, 40 miles west from Edinburgh, 20 south-south-west from Stirling, 16 east from Dumbarton, 16 west from Falkirk, 7 north from Glasgow, 7 west from Cumbernauld, 5 south-west from Kilsyth, 4 south-east from Campsie and 5 south-east from Campsie Glen, with a station on the North British railway. The town is situated on the verge of a ridge by the water of Luggie, near to its junction with the Kelvin, and is lighted with gas from works originally erected by a private company, but acquired by the town under the Burgh Gas Supply Act, 1876. The Forth and Clyde canal, which passes through the town, affords a speedy and certain transit to the east or west coast of Scotland. The Monkland and Kirkintilloch railway, which extends to Airdrie and joins the Ballochnie railway about a mile from that town and also unites with the Garnkirk and Glasgow railway, has a terminal station here. The Edinburgh and Glasgow line passes over the Monkland and Kirkintilloch, a mile south of the town, and near this is Lenzie Junction station, from which the North British line runs through Kirkintilloch, and then branches off to Kilsyth and Aberfoyle. The inhabitants are chiefly employed at the different iron works and collieries. There are also nickel works, where the ore brought from New Caledonia is melted, and in the vicinity are coal and ironstone mines. Kirkintilloch is a free burgh of barony, its first charter, dated from Forres, having been conferred by William the Lion (1165-1214), when it was granted to William Cumyn, of Cumbernauld and Kirkintilloch, and this charter was subsequently confirmed and its privileges enlarged. The town was formerly governed by a senior and a junior magistrate, otherwise bailies, ten councillors, a treasurer and a town clerk, but in 1871 the inhabitants adopted the General Police and Improvement (Scotland) Act, 1862, and their affairs are now administered by a provost, four bailies and seven councillors. Burgh police courts are held fortnightly, or more frequently if occasion requires. The magistrates act also as dean of guild; justice of the peace courts are held only as may be required, and the sheriff's small debt circuit court on the fourth Mondays of January, July and October, and on the second Wednesday in May. The Town Hall, in Union street, erected in 1906, from designs by Messrs. Walker and Ramsey, architects, of Glasgow at a cost of nearly £10,000, is a good building of freestone, and has a large hall seating 1,200 persons. The Court House, a substantial building at the cross, has a tower with spire, containing a clock with four dials. The police office is in Cowgate street, and there is a Fire Brigade station in Kerr street. The Unionist Association occupies a building of red sandstone in East High street, erected at a cost of £2,000. There are branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, a local Savings Bank and a Municipal Bank. The Broomhill Home, for the relief of incurables in Glasgow and the West of Scotland, besides maintaining patients in the home, affords relief to many others at their own residences; the original building, formerly the residence of the late R. J. Bartholomew esq. has been enlarged from time to time, and will now hold 118 patients, and a nurses' wing, opened in May, 1895, by the Duchess of Montrose, was enlarged in 1906. The Lanfine Home for Consumptives, provided through a bequest by the late Miss Martha Brown, of Lanfine, Ayrshire, stands within the grounds of the Broomhill Home, and is under the same management; it was opened in May, 1904, by the Duchess of Montrose, to hold 18 patients; in 1910 a new wing was opened, giving accommodation for 15 additional patients. On the bank of the Luggie and near the bridge, stands an inscribed monument of red Aberdeen granite, erected by public subscription, to Mr. Hazleton Robson, of Glasgow, who, in endeavouring to save the life of a child who had fallen into the river, failed in the attempt and lost his own life. About a mile to the east of the town, on the Inchbelly road, is the Martyrs' stone, erected as a memorial to John Wharry and James Smith, two Covenanters, who having been captured at Stevenson Wood, Inchbelly, and taken to Glasgow, were there tortured and then executed and their remains afterwards carried to Inchbelly Wood and buried in the moss. The parish church, reconstructed in 1644, is a cruciform structure, and stands near the centre of the town. It is now used as a children's church. A new parish church has been erected on a site in Cowgate street, near the manse. It is cruciform in shape and its style of architecture is that which prevailed in the 14th century. Its prominent feature is a tower on the south-east front rising to a height of 120 feet. St. David's is the church of a quoad sacra parish at TWECHAR, where there is also a new church, erected in 1903, at the cost of Messrs. Baird and Co. Limited. Adjoining the church, two halls, to seat 300 and 100 respectively, were erected in 1911, at a cost of £1,000. There are four United Free churches, Roman Catholic, Baptist and Wesleyan chapels, several Mission Halls, and Salvation Army Barracks. The Vallum Antonini, or wall of Antoninus, a rampart of earth and turf, now called Graham's or Grime's dyke, was constructed about A.D. 140 by the Propraetor Lollius Urbicus, in the reign of Antoninus Pius, 138-161, on the line of an earlier series of defences, raised by Agricola; it passed through this town and one of the principal forts stood on the summit of a hill, a little west of the parish church; the site of this fort, now commonly called the "Peel," is still traceable by the deep moat which surrounded it, and was in 1897 converted into a public park. In 1893 (Aug. 28), a workman at the Lion foundry, which stands near the line of the wall, while engaged in digging sand, at a depth of about 15 feet from the surface, came upon over 50 Roman coins of the Emperors Augustus (B.C. 31 to A.D. 14), Vespasian (A.D. 69-79) and Hadrian (A.D. 117-138), the whole being in a remarkable state of preservation; on further search more were discovered and also the steel head and part of the shaft of a spear. Alexander Whitelaw esq. D.L., J.P. the Glasgow Parish Council, the trustees of the late Capt. William McFarlane esq. and the trustees of the late Charles G. H. Kinnear esq. are the principal landowners. The boundaries of the burgh were a few years ago extended. The entire parish of Kirkintilloch comprises an area of 7,156 statute acres; assessable value, £65,088; gross rental, £82,841; population in 1901, 14,401, and in 1911, 16,530, including 11,932 in the burgh and 207 in Broomhill and Lanfine Homes for Incurables, and 1,034 inmates and 154 officials in Woodilee Mental Hospital; area of burgh, 841 acres; the population of the ecclesiastical parish (parish church) in 1911 was 8,841, and of St. David, 5,301. The population of the wards in 1911 was:—First, 2,995; Second, 3,034; Third, 5,008; Fourth, 895. Twechar is a village in this parish. Population of the ward in 1911, 1,878.

WATERSIDE is a village in Kirkintilloch civil parish; the population of the ward in 1911 was 2,720.

KNOXLAND, see DUMBARTON.

LENZIE is a residential district and quoad sacra parish, 6 miles north-east from Glasgow and about 1 mile south of Kirkintilloch, with a junction station on the main line of the North British railway, which divides it into two parts—North and South, the northern portion being in the parish of Kirkintilloch and county of Dumbarton, and the southern portion in the parish of Cadder and county of Lanark. The northern portion of Lenzie forms part of the police burgh of Kirkintilloch. A new reservoir for the supply of water to Lenzie, Kirkintilloch and Waterside was constructed about 1906 in the parish of Kilsyth, at a cost of £24,000. The parish church, situated near the railway station, was built and endowed in 1874, and has a tower with spire; about 1907 it was renovated, when a chancel with suitable fittings was added, and a bell, font and other gifts have been made: the church will seat 500 persons, exclusive of the choir stalls. Attached is a suite of halls, capable of holding 300 persons, a vestry and a session room, and connected with the church are Sunday schools, young men's and women's guilds and a bible class. The United Free church was erected in 1875, at a cost of £4,000, for a congregation originally formed 23 Sept. 1873, and until Oct. 1900, was known as the Lenzie Union Church: in 1906 the church was enlarged by the addition of a north transept, from designs by Mr. John Keppie, architect, of Glasgow, at a cost of about £1,300, and will now seat 618 persons: in 1887 an organ was provided at a cost of £640. The Episcopal church of St. Cyprian, built in 1873 at a cost of £4,000, is an edifice of stone in the Early English style, from designs by Dr. Alexander Ross, architect, of Inverness, and consists of chancel and nave under a single roof, south porch and a tower on the south side, with pyramidal broach spire, and an octagonal turret at one angle surmounted by a spirelet; the stone altar was presented by the Rev. Francis Patrick Fleming LL.D. rector 1872-4, and the font, of Caen stone, by Lady Edmonstone, of Duntreath Castle, Stirlingshire; several of the windows have been filled with stained glass by members of the congregation, and include a memorial window to Major and Mrs. Graham-Stirling, presented by their daughter, Mrs. Miller-Stirling, of Craigbarnet, Campsie Glen: the church affords 200 sittings. The value of the living is about £200, with a house, situated at a short distance from the church: the Rev. William Collins, the present rector, was appointed by the vestry in 1915. The Lenzie Public Halls, situated opposite the Academy, and opened 31 Aug. 1892, are in the Conventional Scottish style, with stepped gables and mullioned windows, from designs by Mr. William Tennant, architect, of Glasgow, and comprise a large hall, holding about 600 persons, two smaller halls, kitchen, cloak rooms and offices: the total cost, including furnishing, was £3,448, and the management is vested in six trustees. The Glasgow District Mental Hospital, at Woodilee, Lenzie, in connection with the parish of Glasgow, erected in 1874-5 at a cost of £150,000, and opened 22 Oct. 1875, is a structure in the Elizabethan style, from designs by Messrs. James Salmon and Son, architects, of Glasgow. The buildings include a recreation hall, about 90 feet square, with a ceiling panelled in Kauri wood, and a stage for musical and dramatic performances, a dining hall, recently enlarged, 120 single rooms, dormitories for 1,160 patients, an administrative department, and a chapel with a stained window, and an elegant flèche on the roof, and seating 400 persons. The estate, comprising 800 acres, was purchased by the Barony Parochial board for a sum of over £42,000, and the various additions and improvements made to the buildings, including a sanatorium for consumptives and a separate department for children, have brought their total cost up to £350,000. The Glasgow Convalescent Home, situated here, about half a mile to the south-east of the railway station, is available for 87 patients, 30 of whom are received from the Glasgow Royal Infirmary, 47 from among residents in Glasgow and neighbourhood and 10 from the Western Infirmary of Glasgow: the board of management consists of members selected by the subscribers and various public and charitable bodies in the city of Glasgow. Lenzie Academy is under the management of the Kirkintilloch School Management Committee of Dumbartonshire Education Authority: the new buildings, erected in 1910, at a cost of about £6,000, comprise a central hall, class rooms, science laboratory, art room, cookery room, drill hall, workshops, music rooms &c. There are sub-branches here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the National Bank of Scotland Limited; there is also a local Club, and Bowling, Golf and Tennis Clubs. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 1,986 in Kirkintilloch parish and 1,323 in Cadder parish (Lanarkshire); total, 3,309, and in 1911, 3,532, viz.: Dumbartonshire, 2,292; Lanarkshire, 1,240; this number included 154 officials and 1,034 inmates in Glasgow District Mental Hospital.

LITTLEMILL, see KILPATRICK.

LUSS is a parish and small village, in the Dumbarton small debt court district, 69 miles west-north-west from Edinburgh, 28 north-west from Glasgow, 12½ north-north-west from Dumbarton, 10 north-north-west from Bonhill, 9 north-north-east from Helensburgh, 8 from Tarbet station on the West Highland section of the North British railway and 8 from Balloch station on the Dumbarton and Balloch joint railway. The village is delightfully situated on the western margin of Loch Lomond, and during the summer is much visited by tourists and pleasure parties. A fine view of the loch, with its numerous islands, is obtained from Strone hill, a considerable elevation about half a mile north of the inn. The only business of any importance carried on here is the quarrying of slate at the Camstraddan and Luss slate quarries, from which considerable quantities of both blue and green slate are obtained, and conveyed to distant parts of the country by means of steam lighters on Loch Lomond to Balloch, and thence by rail. The parish church was dedicated to St. Mackessog, a native of Lennox and a bishop and confessor, who suffered martyrdom about the year 520, at a place below Luss, on the side of the lake, where a large cairn of stone was raised to his memory: he is said to have been buried in the church. Here is also a United Free church. This place was sometime the residence of the learned Alexander Stewart D.D. a Gaelic scholar, who translated the Bible into the Gaelic language, and died in May, 1821. Rossdhu House, about 2½ miles south of Luss, the seat of Lieut.-Col. Sir Iain Colquhoun bart. who is the principal landowner, is a mansion, with a fine portico, seated on a low point of land and surrounded on three sides by Loch Lomond. The area comprises 24,236 acres; rateable value, £8,101; population in 1911, 553.

MILNGAVIE, a town and police burgh (generally called Millguy), is a quoad sacra parish, erected out of that of New (or East) Kilpatrick, in the small debt court district of Dumbarton, and formerly partly included in Stirlingshire, but in 1891 was wholly transferred to the county of Dumbarton. The station here is the terminus of a branch line of the North British railway. The town is 12 miles east from Dumbarton, 5 north-east from Duntocher, 21 south-west from Stirling, 7 north from Glasgow, 51 west from Edinburgh and 2 north-east from New Kilpatrick, and is governed by a provost and town council. There are Established, United Free and Catholic churches and an Episcopal mission room. In the town is a paper mill, and in the neighbourhood are two bleach fields and dye works. Archibald C. Douglas esq. D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner. The area of the burgh is 340 acres; rateable value, £27,819; the population in 1911 was 3,481 in the burgh, and 3,984 in the ecclesiastical parish, and in 1911, burgh, 4,530 and ecclesiastical parish, 4,814.

RADNOR PARK, see CLYDEBANK.

RENTON is a large village and quoad sacra parish in the civil parish of Cardross, one mile south-south-west from Bonhill, like distance south from Alexandria and 2 north from Dumbarton, with a station on the Dumbarton and Balloch joint line of the North British and Caledonian railways. The village is on the west bank of the Leven, and contains part of the extensive print works of the United Turkey Red Co. Limited. There is an Established church, two United Free churches, a Free Church of Scotland and a Roman Catholic church. The Victoria Institute, in Lennox street, was built in 1887, at a cost, including the library, of about £2,000, as a memorial of Queen Victoria's Jubilee, and opened on the day of that commemoration; it consists of a library of from 3,000 to 4,000 volumes, lecture hall and recreation rooms, and also comprises a working men's club. The Public Hall (now used as a cinema), in Main street, was erected in 1882. In the village stands an ornamental stone column, 60 feet in height, on a square base and erected as a memorial to Tobias Smollett M.D. the famous author of "Roderick Random," "Peregrine Pickle" and other productions. He was born here in 1721 and died near Leghorn, 21 Oct. 1771. The population of East and West Renton wards in 1911 was 4,969 and of the ecclesiastical 4,961; rateable value included with Cardross.

ROSENEATH is a village and parish, in Dumbarton poor combination, occupying the peninsula of Roseneath, and extending for about 7 miles from east to west, and from 1 to 4 broad, and is about 3 miles west from Helensburgh station (by ferry across Gare Loch) on the West Highland section of the North British railway. The parish church, a small Gothic edifice, stands within a quarter of a mile of the ferry and pier. There is also a United Free church in the neighbourhood, and another at Clynder, which latter place and Rahane are districts in this parish, the former one mile and the latter 3 miles north from Roseneath village. The mansion of Roseneath, the property of the Duke of Argyll, is the principal object of interest. Kilcreggan is a village about 2 miles distant from Roseneath, over the hills, and has Established and United Free churches. COVE is a village a mile further west, at the entrance of Loch Long; both are resorted to for sea bathing, and consist of a series of villas and mansions extending for 4½ miles along the shore; at each is a pier for the convenience of passing steamers. These two villages were formed into a police burgh in 1865, and are ecclesiastically in the quoad sacra parish of Craigrownie, which is separated from Roseneath and includes the whole burgh of Kilcreggan and Cove; the parish extends about 3 miles beyond Cove, and has an Established church. The area of Roseneath parish comprises 8,467 acres; rateable value of landward, £9,896; the population of the civil parish in 1911 was 1,783, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 618; the population of the ecclesiastical parish of Craigrownie in 1911 was 1,059. The police burgh of Cove and Kilcreggan has an area of 447 acres; rateable value, £21,575, and in 1911 had a population of 861.

ROW is a parish and small village, in Dumbarton poor combination and small debts court district, about 2 miles west from Helensburgh, with a station on the West Highland railway. The parish of Row is chiefly of a hilly and pastoral character, and the low grounds are fertile and beautiful. Ardencaple Castle, on the north-west bank of the Gare Loch, was the birthplace (30 April, 1823) of the late Duke of Argyll K.G., K.T., P.C. (d. 1900). A portion of the castle is of ancient date, but the greater part is comparatively modern; it commands a good view of the Clyde and the Gare Loch, to a distance of 7 miles into the mainland, and is now the residence of Francis Henderson esq. J.P. The parish, exclusive of a narrow strip on Loch Long, is about 6 miles in length by 4 in breadth, bounded by Luss on the east, Helensburgh on the south-east, on the west by Gare Loch, and its south end is washed by the Firth of Clyde. The parish church stands in the village, near the ferry across the Gare Loch to the peninsula of Roseneath. Acreage of the parish, 20,120; rateable value of landward, including Shandon and Garelochhead, about £24,840; population of the parish in 1911, 11,111, of which 8,529 are in Helensburgh police burgh and 280 on the Industrial School ship "Empress." The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 1,646.

SHANDON is a district in the parish of Row, and about 3 miles north from the village of Row, with a station on the West Highland railway. A sea-side home for city children was erected here by the late Sir Archibald Orr-Ewing bart. (d. 1893), and here is also the "Agnes Wilson" home for city children. Here is a United Free church. Faslane, a little to the north, contains the ruins of an ancient chapel, surrounded by a burial ground.

DUMFRIES-SHIRE

THIS is a large and important county in the south of Scotland, bounded on the east by the counties of Roxburgh and Selkirk, on the north-west by Ayrshire, on the south-west by the stewartry (or county) of Kirkcudbright, and on the north by the counties of Lanark, Peebles and part of Selkirk; its south and south-eastern boundary is washed by the Solway Firth, and its south-eastern base is skirted by Roxburghshire and the English county of Cumberland. The length of the county, from north-west to south-east, is nearly 55 miles, and its extreme breadth, from the south to where it touches Peebles-shire on the north, is nearly 30 miles. According to the latest and best surveys it embraces an area of 1,072.3 square miles, or 686,302 acres of land, and 3,992 of water. The population in 1901 was 72,571, and in 1911, 72,825; males, 35,024; females, 37,801; there were in 1911, inhabited houses, 16,434; uninhabited, 975; and building, 121. In size Dumfries is classed as the eighth and in population as the fourteenth of the Scotch counties.

Early History.—At the epoch of the Roman invasion under Agricola, in the year 80, this part of Scotland was inhabited by a race called the "Selgovæ," who spread themselves as far as the banks of the river Dee, in Galloway. These people continued independent till the year 875, when they were overpowered by the Northumbrian Saxons, who retained the ascendency for two centuries. During the lapse of this time, however, numbers of adventurers from Ireland and Cantyre effected a settlement, and from these intermixtures sprung the Picts, who progressively acquired the paramount sway. At this period Dumfries-shire is understood to have formed part of Cumbria, which district Edgar bequeathed to his youngest brother, David, who encouraged many opulent Anglo-Norman barons, and the county was then divided into extensive baronies. The almost interminable border warfare was a frightful calamity to the inhabitants of Dumfries-shire, who for centuries were subjected to all the horrors attendant upon barbarous incursions and feudal hostility. When the civil war broke out in the reign of Charles I. the common people entered heartily into the Covenant, and the shire was disturbed by the exertions made by loyal noblemen and gentlemen in quelling the insurrection, and attachment to the house of Stuart ruined several of the great families. The Maxwells were completely ruined by the attainder of the Earl of Nithsdale, in 1715. The Douglases of Queensberry and the Johnstons of Annandale have merged in other families, and out of the general wreck the noble house of Scott, Dukes of Buccleuch, has risen to great influence. From being thus so frequently subjected to early invasion and predatory warfare, the shire exhibits, to this day, the remains of some important castles and places of security. It gives the title of Marquess to the family of Scott.

Soil and Surface, Produce, Manufactures &c.—The lower parts of Dumfries-shire are based with brown, red, yellow or white sandstone, which dips generally to the Solway; a considerable body of limestone also lies in this quarter, and beds of ironstone are occasionally found to accompany the other strata. Coal prevails in great plenty in the upper portions of Nithsdale and lower parts of Eskdale, the two extreme points of the county. The limestone of the shire has been of great value in improving the land; marl likewise abounds in various tracts, and of freestone and whinstone there is a sufficiency in all directions; marble is also procured for different useful and ornamental purposes, and near the northern confines of the county, at Wanlockhead, there are inexhaustible mines of lead. As in most districts in the south of Scotland, there is a general mixture of arable and pasture land. The soil is of great variety, that in the south being a light covering over a rocky and gravelly subsoil, producing thin crops; but in the north, where the subsoil is peaty, vegetation is rank. This county is famed for agriculture, its capacities in this respect being highly developed. The land is well tilled and drained, strongly fenced, and produces good crops of oats, potatoes, turnips and hay. About 260,000 acres are under cultivation. Though changeable and moist, the climate is upon the whole mild and salubrious. The principal hills are Hartfell (near Moffat), 2,629 feet; Etterick, or Phawhope Penn, 2,220; Cair-Kennow (near Drumlanrig), 2,080; Queensberry hill, 2,250; Black Larg (border of Ayrshire), 2,890 and Lowthers (near Wanlockhead), 3,150.

The chief crops in 1920 as appears from the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland," were:—Oats, 44,663 acres; barley, including bere, 742; wheat, 116; the total of corn crops being 45,646 acres; turnips and swedes, 16,211 acres; potatoes, 4,962; mangolds, 220; cabbage, 115; rape, 1,694; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. 76; hay from rye-grass and rotation grasses and clover, 21,351 acres; permanent pasture (not for hay), 94,223. The area of the county is 686,302; mountain and heath land used for grazing being 391,106 acres; permanent grass, 112,129; arable land, 135,444.

The live stock in 1920 comprised 5,045 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; stallions, 32; unbroken horses, one year and above, 1,660; under one year, 672; other horses, 1,311; cows in milk, 18,263; cows in calf but not in milk, 1,640; heifers in calf, 4,868; other cattle, two years and above, 11,187; one year and under two, 15,660; under one year, 13,306; ewes kept for breeding, 229,355; other sheep, one year and above, 62,857; under one year, 217,869; sows kept for breeding, 984; other pigs, 7,406. In Annandale the improvement in the breed of cattle has been most apparent; at the Highland Society's meeting some of the choicest specimens of the pure breed of Galloway cows, heifers and bullocks are exhibited.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 508; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 505; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 241; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 152; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 189; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 217; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 315; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 472; above 300 acres, 144; total, 2,743.

The minerals raised in the county in 1919 were—dressed lead ore, 1,860 tons; limestone, 10,101 tons; sandstone, 15,819 tons; brick clay, 12,000 tons.

The fishing boats are included with the returns for Ballantrae, Ayrshire. As regards trade, the number of oxen, sheep and pigs reared in this county is usually more than adequate to the demands of its population; and exportation, therefore, of the excess product takes place; and the same may be observed of corn, wool, hides and skins. Dumfries-shire cannot be ranked as a manufacturing county; the principal branches under this head are the production of hosiery goods and tweeds, the chief seat of these being its capital. There are also distilleries, agricultural implement works, dye works, tanneries &c. This county is also noted for bacon curing, a large number of carcases of pork being cured annually.

Rivers &c.—The chief, indeed the only, rivers of consequence are the Nith, the Annan and the Esk. From these streams the principal divisions of the county obtain their names; from each of these greater divisions diverge vales, which likewise have denominations taken from the waters that are poured through them, such as Moffatdale, Dryfesdale and Ewesdale. The Nith, 60 miles in length, rises in the eastern hills of Ayrshire, enters Nithsdale by the foot of Carsoncone hill, in the parish of Kirkconnel, and descends into the valley of Sanquhar; having forced its way through the hills which surround this valley, it receives the Crawick water from the north, and the Euchan from the south. The river Cairn, which forms the western boundary of the county, unites its stream with the Nith a little above Dumfries, a short distance southward from which the latter river empties itself into the Solway Firth. Near to Jarborough Castle, on the banks of the river Cairn, are to be seen those earthern mounds called "Bowbutts," where the barons of Glencairn, with their vassals, used to practice archery. The river Annan, the length of which is 40 miles, takes its rise in the mountains above Moffat, and runs through the flat part of Annandale for upwards of 23 miles; in its course it receives the Evan and the Moffat waters and the Wamphray stream, which irrigates a pleasant valley of that name. Passing Johnstone, some other tributary rivulets increase its volume: at Lochmaben it is enlarged by the Ae, and a little lower by the Dryfe, which courses through the vale of Dryfesdale, considered the termination of the vale of Annan. The higher part of Eskdale, for nearly twenty miles, is mountainous. The Esk, in its progress through the district, is joined by the Black Esk, the Maggot, the Ewes, and the Wauchope. After reaching Broomholm, the river traverses a flat country, and a part of Cumberland, before it reaches the Solway Firth; during this portion of its course it receives the Liddal from Roxburghshire, and the Line water from the county of Cumberland; its entire length is about 43 miles, thirty of which are in the shire of Dumfries. The Solway differs very materially from other estuaries receiving in Scotland the appellation of "Firths;" its waters are shallow, and have long sandy reaches at the ebbing of the tide. The ebbs and flows of the Solway are proverbial for the rapidity of their action, and that is particularly the case during the spring tides and the prevalence of gales from the south-west, and borderers have, in numerous instances, been overwhelmed and drowned when returning from the Cumberland fairs, in crossing the bed of this estuary—the most experienced persons being liable to be overtaken by the tides even when they have the best expectation of fording it in safety. The navigation of the Solway Firth is closed above Bowness and Annan by the Solway Viaduct. Railways from the south enter the county at three points from Bowness; across the Solway Firth to Annan and Kirtlebridge, from Carlisle to Gretna Junction (Caledonian line), whence it runs through the county northward, via Lockerbie and Beattock, where there is a branch to Moffat, one from Lockerbie, going to Dumfries, and thirdly a short line on the North British system from Riddings via Canonbie to Langholm. From Gretna Junction a line leaves the Caledonian system and runs on the Glasgow and South Western line via Annan to Dumfries and on to Thornhill and Sanquhar to Ayrshire, the line of the same railway to Castle Douglas, Wigtown, Stranraer and Port Patrick leaving the county at Dumfries.

Divisions, Representation &c.—The whole county is now popularly apportioned into three districts, namely—Eskdale on the east, almost the whole of which belongs to the Duke of Buccleuch; Annandale in the middle, and Nithsdale on the west. It is ascertained that Dumfries-shire was placed under the government of a sheriff in the 13th century, at which period it included the stewartry of Kirkcudbright. The district of Annandale, however, continued to be a stewartry from the period when it merged in the Crown by the accession of Bruce, till the abolition of the heritable jurisdiction. Up to the era of the Reformation, Dumfries-shire formed part of the extensive diocese of Glasgow, and was divided into the two deaneries of Nithsdale and Annandale; it now possesses 43 entire civil parishes and 49 entire ecclesiastical parishes, the whole being included in the five presbyteries which form the synod of Dumfries. There are four royal burghs in the county—Annan, Dumfries, Lochmaben and Sanquhar; and three police burghs, Langholm, Lockerbie and Moffat. The shire at large sends one member to Parliament. The county parliamentary constituency for 1919 numbered 35,017.

ANNAN is an ancient royal burgh, a parish and town and the seat of a presbytery, 79 miles south of Edinburgh, 87 south-east of Glasgow, 43 north-east of Kirkcudbright, 27 south of Moffat, 16 south-east of Dumfries and 6 from Ecclefechan, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and another, about a quarter of a mile from the town, on the Caledonian system, situated on the east bank of the river Annan. The old bridge, consisting of five arches, was removed in 1826, and a new and substantial one erected on the same site, towards which a grant of £3,000 was obtained from Government, and the remainder supplied by the county. Annan was a Roman station, and is supposed by some to have been identical with the northern station, Veromum. After the departure of the Romans it seems to have been held by the Britons, till they were subdued by the Saxons of the Northumbrian kingdom. It afterwards became a principal port, and was granted with the territory of Annandale and the port of Lochmaben to the ancestors of Robert Bruce, by some of whom a castle was erected, and in part used as a church, but this fortress afterwards went to ruin, some fragments of its walls being incorporated with the gaol and the old town hall. Upon the death of David II. 22 Feb. 1371, the castle of Lochmaben and the lordship of Annandale came to Agnes, sister of John (Randolph), 3rd Earl of Moray, whom she succeeded as Countess of Moray, and having married Patrick (Dunbar), 10th Earl of Dunbar and March, carried it into that family; after their forfeiture it was bestowed upon the Douglases, Archibald Douglas, third son of the 7th Earl of Douglas, being created Earl of Moray: he fell at Arkinholm, 1st May, 1455, and was attainted, and his possessions thereupon reverted to the Crown: this lordship was subsequently granted to Alexander, Duke of Albany, second son of James II. who, for rebellion against his brother King James III. and for plundering the fair of Lochmaben in 1484, also forfeited it; the castle thereupon again reverted to the Crown, and became the great key to the western border. In September, 1547, the town was attacked and partially destroyed by Thomas, 1st Baron Wharton, who, with Lord Dacre, had marched a force into Scotland to effect reprisals. The port, or harbour, of Annan, is free, and vessels of 250 tons can come within half a mile of the town, but vessels of much larger burthen can enter the river at its confluence with the Solway, rather more than a mile from the town; at this place are wooden wharves, or jetties. The local industries comprise stone quarrying, nursery work and corn milling, which furnish employment to a large number of hands; there is also a distillery situated about a mile north of the town. Limestone and freestone are abundant in many parts of the parish; freestone is worked at the Coreshill Quarries by Messrs. J. Murray and Sons. The town was constituted a royal burgh on the accession of Robert Bruce to the throne at the beginning of the 14th century. The existing charter, dated July 10th, 1612, was granted by James VI. of Scotland, and confirms previous charters, particularly reciting one conferred by James V. dated 1st March, 1538, which stated that Annan had with other towns been burned and destroyed by sieges and the inroads of the English, especially in 1298, when they entered Annandale and burned the town with its churches. The burgh is governed by a provost, four bailies and four councillors, a treasurer, a dean of guild and town clerk. The town is lighted with gas, and supplied with water from a reservoir on the farm of Purdomstown, in the parish of Middlebie, about 9 miles from Annan, with a capacity of 32,000,000 gallons. The filter bed and supply tank are behind Landheads toll bar, 2 miles from the town, and are capable of passing 150,000 gallons per day. The waterworks, built and laid out at a cost of about £12,000, were opened by Lady Augusta Noel, wife of Ernest Noel esq. then M.P. for the Dumfries district, July 21st, 1881; duplicate pipes were laid to the filters in 1901, at a cost of £7,200. The Town Hall, in High street, erected at a cost of upwards of £4,000, occupies the site of the former hall. The Post Office, in Bank street, was erected in 1898. The Combination Hospital, built in 1892, contains 24 beds. The Lesser Victoria Hall, in Downie's wynd, is the meeting place of the Lodge Caledonian, No. 238, and Robert Bruce Royal Arch Chapter, No. 243. The Public Library, in Bank street, a building of red sandstone, was erected in 1906, at a cost of £3,000. The parish church is a fine building of stone, with a tower and spire, and there are Episcopal, Catholic, United Free and other churches. The Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Bank, the Bank of Scotland and the Royal Bank of Scotland have branches here, and there is also a bank for savings, founded in 1835. A newspaper, the "Annandale Observer," is published every Friday by Messrs. Cuthbertson and Laidlaw. The Rev. Edward Irving M.A. founder, in 1832, of the Catholic Apostolic Church, was born here, 15th August, 1792, and a marble statue has been erected to his memory in front of the Town Hall: he died at Glasgow, 6th December, 1834. Hugh Clapperton, the African traveller, was also born here in 1788; he died on his second expedition at Sacatoo, 11th April, 1827. Mount Annan is the property of the trustees of the late Patrick Alexander Pasley-Dirom esq. J.P. and the residence of Robert Walker Hall Woodburne esq. Charles Brook esq. J.P. is the chief landowner. The market is held on Friday, and at the two cattle marts large quantities of stock are sold. Fairs are held on the first Friday in May, the first Friday in August and the third Friday in October. The area comprises 10,915 acres; rateable value, burghal, £26,842; landward, £24,767; the population of the parish in 1911 was 6,892, including 4,200 in the town. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 4,452.

GREENKNOWE is a quoad sacra parish, formed from Annan; population in 1911 was 1,557.

BRYDEKIRK is a village in the small debt court district of Dumfries and Annan, 3 miles north of Annan, on the west bank of the Annan river, and was constituted a quoad sacra parish in May, 1836, from the three parishes of Annan, Cummertrees and Hoddom. The remains of the old parish church are still extant, but a new church was built in 1835 by the late Mrs. Magdalen Dirom, wife of Lieut.-Gen. Alexander Dirom: she died 23 Oct. 1853. At Corsehill is a quarry, originally opened by Mrs. Dirom. The trustees of the late Patrick Alexander Pasley-Dirom esq. J.P. Lady Jardine, Charles Gilchrist esq. Charles Brook esq. and Edward J. Brook esq. are the principal landowners. Rateable value, £3,725; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 751.

CAERLAVEROCK is a parish, occupying a kind of peninsula formed by the Solway Firth, the river Nith and Lochar water, and is 7 miles south-east of Dumfries, the nearest railway station. The magnificent ruins of Caerlaverock Castle, which stands on a level plain, between 8 and 9 miles from Dumfries, form a massive and picturesque triangular structure, including the gate-house, flanked on either side by drum towers with machicolated battlements; in Murdoch's tower, a principal feature of the ruins, Murdoch Stewart, 2nd Duke of Albany and Earl of Lennox, was confined in 1425; a wet ditch still encompasses the site. The castle anciently belonged to the Maxwells, once a powerful family in this part of Scotland, Earls of Nithsdale and wardens of the western Marches. It was besieged and captured by Edward I. in July, 1300; a metrical and contemporary account of the siege was written in Norman-French by Walter, of Exeter, a Franciscan friar who accompanied the English army, and contains, inter alia, the blazonry of the arms of about 100 of the knights engaged in this expedition, forming the earliest roll of arms at present known. The poem was edited and published by Sir Harris Nicholas in 1828. Sir Roger Kirkpatrick, of Closeburn, was murdered in his bed in the castle in 1357 by Sir James Lindsay; Cromwell took it in 1651, after which it was allowed to fall into decay.

BANKEND is a pleasant village about 6 miles south-south-east from Dumfries.

GLENCAPLE QUAY is a small village on the banks of the Nith, and about 5½ miles south from Dumfries, where in former times numbers of coasting traders discharged and took in their cargoes, and passengers from Liverpool usually landed here. It is now chiefly frequented as a bathing place, and for its salmon fishery. Conheath House is the property and residence of Robert Young Pickering esq.

KELTON is a small village on the Nith, and about 4 miles south from Dumfries.

The Duchess of Norfolk, Robert Young Pickering esq. and Viscount Chilston P.C., O.B.E., D.L., J.P. are the chief landowners. The soil is a light loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are oats, potatoes, roots and pasture. The area comprises 7,229 acres; rateable value, £7,376; population in 1911, 811.

Post, M. O., T. & T. E. D. Office, Glencaple; Miss Annie Sinclair, sub-postmistress. Letters received through Dumfries

CANONBIE is a parish, half way between Longtown and Langholm, 6 miles from either town, and on the southern border of the county, in Hawick poor combination, and in the small debt court district of Langholm, with stations on the North British railway; the parish is separated on the south-east from England by the river Liddel, and on the south-west by the "Scotch Dyke;" the river Esk and the high road from Edinburgh to London intersect the parish, which is about 9 miles long and 6 broad. There are coal mines and lime quarries supplying minerals of excellent quality. The parish church is a large edifice of stone, and will seat 1,500 persons. The scenery along the Esk is considered to be some of the finest in the South of Scotland. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. is sole proprietor of the parish. The hamlets of Hollows, Bowholm, Claygate, Glenzier, Forgebraehead, Evertown and Rowanburn are in this parish. The area comprises 24,156 acres; rateable value £11,892; the population in 1911 was 1,838.

CLOSEBURN is a parish and village about 2 miles south-south-east from Thornhill, and 12 miles north of Dumfries, in the district of Nithsdale, and in Upper Nithsdale poor combination, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway: it includes the parish of Dalgarno, and is about 10 miles in length by about 11½ in breadth. Part of the ancient church, an edifice of the Norman and later periods, is still standing within its churchyard, though now ruinous, and includes a tower in which hangs a bell dated 1607; near the church is the mortuary of the Kirkpatricks, of Closeburn, over the entrance to which is their crest, a hand holding a dagger dripping with blood, and the motto "I mak siccar;" here is buried Sir Roger Kirkpatrick, whose murder of John (the "Red") Comyn, at Dumfries in 1305, gave rise both to the motto and crest; his second son, of the same name, was murdered in his bed in Caerlaverock Castle by Sir James Lindsay in 1357. The present church, which adjoins the old churchyard, was erected by the heritors in 1878, at a cost of nearly £5,000, and is a building in the Gothic style; all the windows are stained, four being memorials. In the churchyard is at least one covenanting stone. Here is also a United Free church. Closeburn Hall is a large and splendid mansion in the Classic style, and is at present (1921) unoccupied. The ancient Castle of Closeburn, for a long time the seat of the Kirkpatricks, and afterwards held by the Stuart Monteiths, is now in the hands of trustees, and forms an interesting object in the scenery here, which derives additional beauty from some romantic waterfalls. Near Closeburn Castle is a strong sulphurous spring, of the same character as that of Moffat Well, and there is another called "Townscleugh Well," which is chalybeate. Crichope Linn, in this parish, is a very singular ravine worn out of the soft sandstone by a small rivulet. Sir Walter Scott describes it as the hiding place of Balfour of Burleigh. This spot, as well as almost every glen in the district, has associations connected with the times of the persecuted Covenanters. The Wallace Hall Academy, near the church, was established in 1723, and is one of the five selected schools of the county, and has now about 230 pupils. A new academy was erected in 1911. A recreation hall was opened here in 1902 by the Closeburn Unionist Association for the use of the parish.

AULDGIRTH is a small hamlet in the parish of Closeburn, distant 8 miles north-north-west from Dumfries, and 6 south from Thornhill, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and has a public hall.

The Closeburn Estates Trustees, viz. the trustees of Mrs. Villiers and the Countess of Enniskillen, the Duke of Buccleuch K.T. and Miss Copeland are the principal landowners. The area comprises 29,158 acres; rateable value, £13,975; the population in 1911 was 1,244.

CUMMERTREES is a parish and village, 4 miles west from Annan, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The parish, which is about 4 miles in length by 3 in breadth, is bounded on the north-east by the river Annan, and on the south by the Solway Firth. It is a flat, fertile and well cultivated district, and is now well enclosed. The parish church stands in the village. The new Public Hall was erected in 1895, on a site given by the Marquess of Queensberry, at a cost of £500. About a mile south-east of Cummertrees is Powfoot, a fishing hamlet, situated on the shore of the Solway, and now the property of Charles Brook esq. J.P. The late Edward Brook esq. of Hoddom Castle (d. 1904), did much to improve Powfoot as a summer resort by making artificial lakes for boating and fishing. A public hall was erected in 1906. There is an excellent golf course, with club house. The area comprises 9,473 acres; rateable value, £12,308; the population in 1911 was 1,056 in the civil parish and 1,027 in the ecclesiastical parish.

DALSWINTON, see KIRKMAHOE.

DALTON is a parish and small village about 6 miles south-south-west from Lockerbie and 4 north-east from Ruthwell station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The parish, which now includes the ancient parishes of Meikle Dalton and Little Dalton, is 4 miles in length by 3 in breadth; its general appearance is that of high cultivation, which has been extended over once unprofitable moors and commons. The parish church, erected in 1895, in part by a grant from the Baird Trust, on a site given by Mr. Arthur J. Steel, of Kirkwood, is an edifice in the Norman style, from designs by Mr. J. M. Dick Peddie, architect, of Edinburgh, and consists of chancel, nave, north porch and a low square tower on the north side with an octagonal spire; the lower stage of the tower forms an entrance. In the churchyard are several ancient tombstones to the Ross family, descendants of the ennobled house of Ross, Barons Ross, of Halkhead, in Renfrewshire, who were long resident in this parish, but the title became extinct on the death of William, 14th baron, 19 Aug. 1754. There is also a United Free church. Dormont House, beautifully situated within a deer park on the banks of the Annan, and about a mile from the village, is the residence of Lieut.-Col. F. J. Carruthers J.P. Rammerscales is the seat of Major William Bell Macdonald J.P. Carruthers-town is a small village in this parish, about 2 miles south-west from Dalton and the same distance north-east from Ruthwell station. Area, 6,891 acres; rateable value, £6,025; the population in 1911 was 589.

DORNOCK is a parish and small village, on the high road from Annan to Carlisle, and about a quarter of a mile from the shore of the Solway Firth, in the district of Annandale, and small debts court district of Annan and Dumfries, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and is 84 miles south of Edinburgh, 18 south of Langholm, 17 south-east of Dumfries, 12 south-east of Lockerbie, 7 south of Ecclefechan and 2½ east of Annan. The parish, which is about 2½ miles square, is washed on its southern border by the Solway; it includes the villages of Lowthertown and Dornock, also the township of Eastriggs, which was built during the war for the housing of munition workers at H.M. factory. Eastriggs is south of the main road and a quarter of a mile from Dornock station. Robgill Tower, formerly belonging to the Irvings of Robgill, but now the property of the trustees of the late Robert Paterson esq. is the residence of Mrs. Paterson. Stapleton Tower, an ancient structure on the estate of Stapleton, in this parish, is now the residence of Major Edward A. Critchley J.P. At a short distance from the village are the remains of a Roman military road and a Druidical circle. In Dornock churchyard are two coped gravestones, each 6½ feet long and 2 broad, with hitherto undeciphered inscriptions. Major E. A. Critchley is the principal landowner. Area of the parish, 4,788 acres; rateable value, £26,099; population, 1911, 820 in the civil parish and 801 in the ecclesiastical parish.

DUMFRIES WITH MAXWELLTOWN

DUMFRIES (Gaelic, "dun Fris," the Frisians' fortress) is a parliamentary burgh, town and royal burgh, the capital of the county and the seat of the synod and presbytery of Dumfries, 338 miles from London (via Manchester); 72 south from Edinburgh, 75 south-east of Glasgow, 150 south-by-west of Aberdeen, 60 south-west of Ayr, 34 north-west of Carlisle, 17 north-north-west of Annan and 9 south-west of Lochmaben, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, forming an important junction as connecting the Midland system from Glasgow to London, the Caledonian main line at Lockerbie for Glasgow, Edinburgh and the north of Scotland, and the London and South Western for London. It is also a junction for the Castle Douglas, Newton Stewart, and Stranraer railways, worked in connection with the mail steamers from Stranraer, Wigtownshire, to Larne, on the east coast of co. Antrim, which is the shortest sea passage between Scotland and Ireland. Dumfries is seated on the left bank of the river Nith, about 9 miles above its confluence with the Solway Firth, and is navigable for vessels of light tonnage, the tide flowing as high as the weir. It was undoubtedly a place of considerable size long before the days of William the Lion, and in his reign (1165-1214) it was erected into a royal burgh.

Three bridges connect the town with Maxwelltown on the west bank of the river: the new bridge, built in 1795, in continuation of Buccleuch street, was widened and greatly improved in 1892-3 at a cost of over £4,000, defrayed by the late Miss McKie, of the Moat House, Dumfries; there is also a foot suspension bridge, opened in 1875: and the "Old Bridge," built towards the end of the 13th century by Devorgilla, daughter of the Lord of Galloway and wife of John Baliol, which is a steep and narrow structure of stone, of six arches, though formerly, when it spanned part of either shore, it is said to have had nine. It is now only used by foot passengers.

Along the river Nith are quays at which vessels load and discharge; those at the town afford a depth of water of 8 to 9 feet at high water: at New Quay, 1¼ miles lower down, the depth is 12 feet, and at Glencaple Quay, 5 miles below the town and 2½ from the mouth of the river, 15 feet.

Under the provisions of the "Customs Act, 1846" (9 and 10 Vict. c. 102), the port of Dumfries was limited in Sept. 1857, so as to extend from Kirkandrews Burn to Southerness Point, and then to the river Sark. The creeks attached to Dumfries are Annan, Carsethorn, Dalbeattie, Palnackie and Kirkcudbright. The Customs District was constituted a Court of Survey District in October, 1876, and a Wreck Receiver's district was defined in October, 1876, under the "Merchant Shipping Act, 1854" (17 and 18 Vict. c. 104). During 1918 vessels were registered as belonging to the port, with an aggregate of 440 tons. Fishing boats and their implements are distinguished by the letters D.S. In the general coasting trade 306 vessels arrived at the port, with cargoes and in ballast, of an aggregate tonnage of 19,220.

The town is lighted with gas and electricity and supplied with water from works the property of the Corporation, the former having been purchased by them in 1878 from the Dumfries Gas Co. for a sum of £21,000. Various additions have since been made.

The municipal government of the burgh is vested in a provost, 3 bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer, and 19 other councillors. Circuit courts of justiciary are held in April and September for Dumfriesshire and the stewartry of Kirkcudbright and Wigtownshire; there are also ordinary and small debt, sheriff's and justiciary burgh courts. There is a Burgh police force, with offices in Buccleuch street, and a Fire brigade. The new County buildings, in English street, the foundation stone of which was laid in 1912, is a building of freestone forming three sides of a quadrangle; the buildings contain offices for the county clerk, the county treasurer, the chief constable, the county medical department and the county education authority. There is also a Court house and Bridewell in Terregles street, Maxwelltown, where also is H.M. Prison.

St. Michael's, the mother church of Dumfries, was rebuilt in 1745 on the site of a pre-Reformation church, and is a rectangular structure with a massive and lofty tower and spire: the interior has stone arcades dividing it into nave and aisles, and many of the windows are filled with stained glass: under the entrance and on the walls there are numerous marble monuments, including one to Allan Cunningham, historian, biographer and poet, who died 29 Oct. 1842: the pew in which Burns sat is distinguished by a brass tablet. The cemetery attached to the church contains numerous elegant and curious monuments, and particularly the fine mausoleum erected to the memory of Robert Burns, who died at Dumfries on the 21st July, 1796, aged 37 years; the design for the mausoleum was by F. Hunt esq. of London, and the sculptured figure by Turnerelli; here is also the ruined monument of Lost Corsane, and tomb of Francis Irving, M.P. for the burgh in 1617. Near the gate is buried Bailie Paterson, to whom the Dumfries Academy is indebted for its endowments; and within an enclosure surrounded by iron rails lie the remains of more than 420 inhabitants of Dumfries, who died of Asiatic cholera, from 15 Sept. to 27 Nov. 1832: in the churchyard are also inscribed stones to William Grierson, William Welsh and James Kirk, three martyrs who suffered death on the Whitesands—the two former on Jan. 2nd, 1667, and the latter June, 1685: there is also a lofty pyramidal memorial of granite, erected in 1834, to these and other Nithsdale Martyrs.

Greyfriars is the second charge of the parish of Dumfries. The church, originally erected on the site of the old castle during the period 1722-7, and then called "the New Church," was built from the Burgh funds, and is the property of the town: in 1866-8 it was rebuilt, at a total cost of over £7,161, in the Decorated style, and renamed "Greyfriars' Church;" it has a tower with spire 164 feet in height, and a fine entrance doorway, copied in part from a doorway in Melrose abbey; there are memorial windows to Robert Scott and Jane Lindsay, his wife, placed in 1867; to William H. Cairns M.A. late rector of Dumfries Academy, erected in 1872; William Gordon, c. 1890; and to Mr. Barker, erected by his wife: the colours of the 2nd Battn. 21st Royal Scots Fusiliers, carried during the period 1858-78, were deposited here 10 Sept. 1878, and are now suspended in the church: there is also an inscribed brass, erected by Col. John Talbot Coke, commanding 2nd Battn. the King's Own Scottish Borderers (25th foot), to his comrades who died in Egypt during 1888-9, and another erected by the officers and men to those who died in the South African war, 1900-1902: the church will seat 1,000 persons.

The church of St. Mary, on the north side of English street, affords about 860 sittings, and has an attached burial ground containing several well executed monuments. The population of the parish is 6,557. The Episcopal church of St. John the Evangelist, erected in 1867-8, is a fine building in the Gothic style, from designs by Mr. W. Slater and Mr. R. H. Carpenter, architects, of London, and has tower and spire 120 feet high: it affords 460 sittings, and attached is the Mission church of St. Ninian, at Maxwelltown; the Rev. Colin Campbell im Thurn M.A. of Merton College, Oxford, and canon of St. Mary's Cathedral, Glasgow, has been rector since 1907.

This town is the head of the Roman Catholic diocese of Galloway, comprising the counties of Dumfries, Kirkcudbright and Wigtown, and most of Ayr. The Roman Catholic Pro-Cathedral, in Shakespeare street, is a large and handsome edifice, with sittings for 800 persons.

There are also five United Free churches, one Free Church of Scotland, a Catholic Apostolic church, Baptist, two Congregational and Wesleyan chapels, and various Mission halls.

The Dumfries and Maxwelltown Observatory, on Corberry Hill, on the Maxwelltown side of the river, and formerly a windmill, was converted to its present use in 1835 by a local scientific society, at a cost of about £1,050, and is a building of four storeys, containing a varied and interesting collection of statuary, pictures, geological, natural history and other collections, relics of the poet Burns, and globes and mathematical instruments: in the upper storey is a camera-obscura. A large hall with gallery was erected in 1862, from the designs of Mr. Newall, architect, at a cost of £800. The grounds, extending over an acre, were enlarged in 1897, and are laid out with much taste, and planted with flowers and shrubs, and here stands a life-size group of Robert Paterson (the "Old Mortality" of Scott) and his pony.

The Dumfries and Maxwelltown Ewart Public Library, in Catherine street, is a building of red sandstone in the Classic style, begun in 1899, and erected by the late Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle, at a cost of £10,000, the site having been presented by the late Miss and Mr. Thomas McKie, of Moat House: it was opened in 1903 and contains a reference library of 4,000 volumes, a lending library of 12,000 volumes, and reading rooms, also the museum and library of the Dumfries and Galloway Natural History and Antiquarian Society.

The Dumfries and Galloway Club, known as the "County Club," occupies the Old Assembly rooms.

Dumfries and Galloway Royal Infirmary, founded in 1776, is still the only one in the south of Scotland. The fever house added to commemorate the Diamond Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, is now used as a nurses' home. Medical advice and medicine are gratuitously afforded to every applicant who is an object of charity. There are 120 beds. The Infirmary is supported by annual subscriptions, legacies, donations, benefactions &c. and is under the management of a body of governors.

The Crichton Royal Institution was endowed by the late James Crichton esq. of Friar's Carse, and incorporated by Act of Parliament, dated 3rd July, 1840, as a hospital for the insane and a home for mental and nervous invalids of the higher and middle classes: the attached church, erected to the memory of the founders, James and Elizabeth Crichton, at a cost of £30,000, was opened and dedicated in 1897. The grounds, about 760 acres in extent, are pleasantly situated on an elevation overlooking the valley of the Nith, and have a south-western aspect and an extensive and varied prospect. Crichton Hall, and the buildings near it, are devoted to the reception of patients of the wealthier classes; a second group of houses is appropriated to the care and treatment of less affluent patients, and a third group of houses has been erected for the reception of parochial patients belonging to the district; the total number of patients is about 1,000. The institution has its own water system (artesian well) and electricity station, and a farm.

Moorhead's Hospital, in St. Michael street, founded in 1753 by Messrs. J. & W. Moorhead, merchants, is intended for the support of the aged and indigent poor. It is governed by a body of directors elected from the magistrates, the town council, the kirk session and ratepayers, and is supported by benefactions, donations and annual subscriptions.

Carruthers' Almshouses, in Brooms road, were founded by Mrs. Carruthers. The Johnstone Almshouses, in Johnstone park, were erected by the trustees of the late David Johnstone, solicitor, for ladies in reduced circumstances.

The public halls are St. George's Hall, Buccleuch street, to seat 700 persons; the Drill Hall, in Newall terrace, to hold 5,000 persons; the Town Hall, in Buccleuch street, reconstructed in 1910; a Freemasons' Hall, in George street; the Greyfriars' Hall and the Mechanics' Hall, in Irish street; Dickson's Hall, in Irish street; Queensberry Hall, in Queen street and St. Mary's Hall, to seat 900 persons, in English st.

There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the British Linen Bank, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the National Bank of Scotland Limited, the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited, and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited.

The Post Office, in Buccleuch street, is an edifice of Dumfriesshire red stone, and was opened in 1889.

The Public Baths and Washhouses, in Greensands, were erected in 1898, at a cost of £3,800, as a gift to the Corporation, by the late Miss McKie, of the Moat House, Dumfries.

The Dumfries Academy, in Academy street, established under its present designation in 1804, superseded the Grammar school and the Commercial school. The date of the foundation of these schools is unknown, but mention is made of the Grammar school in the sessions clerk's records for 1688. In 1722 the masters in both schools were endowed by Bailie Paterson, of Dumfries, who bequeathed 15,000 merks to the magistrates and ministers of Dumfries for the benefit of the teachers; and in the following year by John Raining, of Norwich, to the extent of £500. The Bell bequest of £100, left in 1789, was assigned to the English master. The old structure was built in 1803, mainly by private subscription, and for some years the subscribers took a share in the management of the academy, but in 1814 it was handed over to the town council, and in August, 1872, by the operation of the Education Act, it was transferred, as a Higher Class public school, to the management of the Dumfries Burgh School Board, now superseded by the County Education Authority. The new building, erected in 1896-7, at a cost of about £20,000, and opened in 1897, is an edifice in the Classic style, with a dome of 62 feet in height, surmounted by a figure emblematic of Learning. New buildings for junior pupils were erected in 1910 and additions were made to the block devoted to technical instruction. The academy has an average attendance of over 600 pupils, and is now recognised as a centre for the training of junior students. In connection with the school are two hostels, affording separate boarding accommodation for about 100 boys and girls.

The Industrial school is intended for 120 boys, drawn from many different parts of Great Britain, who are taught shoe making, tailoring, carpentering, wood turning &c. Attached to the school is a band of pipers, known throughout Scotland, and often engaged to play in the large centres, by which a considerable addition is often made to the revenue. The house in which Robert Burns died (21st July, 1796) adjoins the school and is part of its property.

The Queensberry Memorial consists of a fine Doric column raised by the county of Dumfries to the memory of Charles, 3rd Duke of Queensberry, who died 22 Oct. 1778. In Church place, close to Greyfriars church, is a fine statue of the poet Burns, unveiled by Lord Rosebery 6th April, 1882; the figure, of Sicilian marble, was executed at Carrara, from a model designed and prepared by Mrs. D. O. Hill, and is placed on a plain pedestal of dark grey granite, at a height of about nine feet from the ground.

The ancient monastery of Greyfriars, in this town, was the scene of a remarkable tragedy about the middle of the 14th century, when John Comyn, known as the "Red Comyn" (a powerful chieftain who formerly held the regency of Scotland) was assassinated by Robert the Bruce and Sir Roger Kirkpatrick, of Closeburne, and Lindsay, two of his adherents.

Two newspapers are issued bi-weekly, viz :—the "Dumfries and Galloway Courier and Herald," and the "Dumfries and Galloway Standard," both of which have a large circulation.

The principal hotels are the King's Arms, the County, the Station, the Queensberry, and the Waverley; at the Globe inn, commonly known as Burns' Howff and the Hole-i'-th'-Wa', Burns spent many of his leisure hours, and numerous relics of him are still preserved.

The butter and egg market is held in the New market, Loreburn street. Wednesday is the market day. The two principal half-yearly markets take the name of the Candlemas and Road fairs. Besides the usual commodities that change hands at these periods, many thousand head of cattle are bought and sold, and vast quantities of pork also find purchasers in Dumfries from the beginning of December to the end of February. The principal fairs are held on the 12th and 13th of February if Tuesday and Wednesday, if not, Tuesday and Wednesday following; hiring, 13th if Wednesday, if not, Wednesday after; in March, hiring, last Wednesday; April, hiring, last Wednesday; May, horse, Wednesday before 26th; hiring, Wednesday 26th or first Wednesday after; June, horse, Wednesday after 17th (O.S.); September, horse, 24th if Tuesday, if not, Tuesday after; horse and hiring, 25th if Wednesday, if not, Wednesday after; October, hiring, third Wednesday; November, horse, Wednesday before 22nd; hiring, 22nd if Wednesday, if not, first Wednesday after; pork every Wednesday in months of January, February, March, November and December.

There are two auction marts for the sale of cattle, sheep &c. through which pass very large quantities of stock every week, and are frequented by dealers from all parts of England and Scotland, Dumfries being the centre of a large agricultural district.

The principal imports are agricultural produce, coal, slate and iron; the exports being wheat, barley, oats, potatoes, wool and freestone, the latter worked at Locharbriggs, 3 miles distant. The manufacture of woollen tweed is very extensively carried on here, and considerable business is also done in hosiery, gloves and neckties. Dumfries was for many years the leading market for hareskins in Scotland, and even regulated the price of home fur in England; and it is still regarded as the arbiter of prices in this respect. The numerous nursery grounds lying near the town also afford employment to the working classes.

The principal landowners are the Right Hon. Viscount Chilston P.C., O.B.E. the Directors of the Crichton Royal Institution and John Howat esq. The soil is a light loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are oats, roots and potatoes.

The civil parish of Dumfries comprises an area of 10,084 acres; rateable value, £143,451; population in 1911, 19,076. The population of the wards in 1911 was:—Dumfries Borough, 16,011; First Parish, 1,047; Second Parish, 2,165; Third Parish, 2,371; Fourth Parish, 2,066; Fifth Parish, 2,217; Sixth Parish, 1,575; Seventh Parish, 2,257; Eighth Parish, 2,313; Northern Parish, 936; Southern Parish, 2,124; the area of the burgh is 805 acres; rateable value, £111,934; the population of the police burgh in 1891 was 12,947 and in 1901, 13,092; the population of the royal and police burgh in 1911 was 16,011. Included in the total population of Dumfries is 175 officials and 1,232 inmates of the Crichton Royal Institution for Insane and Southern Counties Mental Hospital and 6 officials and 79 inmates of the Industrial School and 56 inmates and 6 officials in the Poorhouse. The Burgh is now divided into eight wards, the former four wards having been converted into seven, and the eighth consists of a portion of the landward part of the parish, taken into the municipal area in 1905. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was:—St. Mary's, 7,170; St. Michael's, 8,355; Greyfriars, 3,551.

The population of the parliamentary burgh in 1911 was 19,453.

MAXWELLTOWN is a burgh of barony, police burgh and quoad sacra parish formed from the parish of Troqueer, in the stewartry of Kirkcudbright, and is connected with Dumfries by three bridges across the Nith. The charter for the creation of the burgh was obtained in 1810, and since that time it has considerably improved both in character and population; it is governed by a provost, two bailies, and 12 commissioners, distinct from Dumfries, of which it is virtually an extension, and it is partly comprised within that burgh. A small debt court is held on the last Monday in each month by the sheriff substitute, resident at Kirkcudbright. Here is an established church, a United Free church and Mission Hall. St. Ninian's Episcopal Mission church will seat 200 persons, and is served from Dumfries. Among the trading establishments are saw mills, tweed, hosiery, glove and necktie factories and dye works. The Dumfries and Maxwelltown Observatory, which stands on Corberry hill, in this burgh, was converted to its present use by a local scientific society, and is a building of four storeys, the uppermost of which has a camera-obscura. About a mile along the Maxwelltown bank of the Nith are situated the ruins of Lincluden Abbey, locally in the parish of Teregles and county of Kirkcudbright (which see). His Majesty's Prison for Dumfries and Galloway, situated here, is a large building, opened August 15th, 1883. The area of Maxwelltown burgh (Kirkcudbrightshire) is 676 acres; rateable value, £32,397; the population in 1901 was 5,789, and in 1911, 6,200; viz.:—North ward, 2,466, and South ward, 3,723; the population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 2,461.

The population of the parliamentary borough in 1911 was 5,744.

DUNCOW, see KIRKMAHOE.

DUNSCORE is a parish and village, in the district of Nithsdale and in Upper Nithsdale poor combination and Dumfries small debt court district, 4 miles south-west of Auldgirth station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, 9 north-west from Dumfries and 7 south-east from Moniaive, is bounded by Glencairn and Keir on the north, and Holywood and Kirkcudbrightshire on the south, and is 12 miles in length and from 1 to 4 miles wide. A light railway from Dumfries to Moniaive was opened March 1st, 1905, and has a station here about half a mile from the village. The land is arable on the banks of the Nith, which irrigates its eastern part; it is also intersected by the Cairn. There are Established and United Free churches. Sheep and cattle are reared off these lands for the southern markets. John Welsh, an eminent person, and son-in-law of John Knox, was a native of Dunscore, and Robert Burns at one time held a farm here called Ellisland, and also took charge of the village library, instituted by his landlord, Robert Riddel esq. Mrs. Frank and William Hamilton Walker are the principal landowners. The soil is light sandy; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are oats, potatoes and turnips.

The area comprises 14,825 acres and rateable value, £11,168; the population in 1911 was 1,027.

Post, M. O. & T. Office, Dunscore. Letters through Dumfries; Mrs. Annie Waugh, postmistress

DURISDEER is a parish and village, in Upper Nithsdale poor combination, and in the Dumfries small debt court district; the parish is bounded on the south and south-east by Morton, on the north and north-east by the parish of Crawford, on the south and south-west by Penpont and on the north-west by Sanquhar; it is 8 miles in length and 6 in breadth. The village is about 6 miles north of Thornhill and 2 from Carronbridge (the nearest) station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. Here are Established and United Free churches. Drumlanrig Castle, the noble mansion of the Duke of Buccleuch and Queensberry K.T. who is the principal landowner, is beautifully situated about 4 miles from Thornhill, on the right bank of the river, and occupies an elevated site overlooking the whole district. The castle was rebuilt by William, first Duke of Queensberry, between the years 1679 and 1689. Within the last half century the woods around the castle have been greatly extended, and now cover a large portion of country. The beautiful gardens and pleasure grounds of the castle are kept with great care, and are free to the inspection of visitors on Tuesdays and Fridays. In 1776, when Mr. Pennant visited Drumlanrig, there existed in the woods a breed of wild cattle described as being of a milk-white colour, with black ears and finely-curved horns. They were removed, it is said, to Chillingham Castle, in Northumberland, the seat of the Earl of Tankerville, where the breed still exists, and is also found at Hamilton. Adjoining the parish church is the burial place of the Douglas family, Marquesses of Queensberry and Viscounts Drumlanrig; above it rises a splendid marble monument, with effigies, executed in Rome, representing James, second Duke of Queensberry K.G. d. 1711, and Mary, his Duchess; about a mile from the church are traces of a camp. The area comprises 19,735 acres; rateable value, £8,461; population, 1911, 849.

ECCLEFECHAN WITH HODDAM

ECCLEFECHAN is a considerable village and principal place in the parish of Hoddam and in the small debt court district of Dumfries and Annan, 71 miles south of Edinburgh, 75 south-east of Glasgow, 20 north-west by rail from Carlisle, 12 east of Dumfries, 6 north of Annan, and 14 west-south-west from Langholm, lying in a fine situation near the foot of Annandale, and on the road from Glasgow to Carlisle, with a station 1 mile distant on the Caledonian railway. A few of the inhabitants find employment in weaving woollen skirting goods for the Glasgow manufacturers. De Laitte petrol gas plant has been set up in the villages by E. J. Brook esq. of Hoddam Castle, and the supply of gas is controlled by a committee. There is also a good water supply. The Established church at Hoddam is a small edifice of stone, consisting of nave and north aisle, with a turret and one bell. There is a branch here of the Royal Bank of Scotland. Hoddam Castle, finely situated on the river Annan, about 2½ miles west from Ecclefechan, is the seat of Edward J. Brook esq. J.P. who, as principal landowner and superior, claims certain customs for all standings and for all cattle exposed for sale. Here was born, 4 Dec. 1795, Thomas Carlyle, now world renowned as a moral philosopher and historian. His father, James Carlyle, was by trade a mason, and sent him first in 1805, to the Grammar school at Annan, and afterwards, in Nov. 1809, when only 14 years of age, to the University of Edinburgh. Carlyle subsequently became mathematical tutor at Annan school, and in 1816 was appointed master of the school at Kirkcaldy, on leaving which in 1818, he went to Edinburgh, and in 1822 was tutor there to the sons of Mr. Buller; in 1825 he took a farm at Hoddam hill, and in 1826 married Jane Baillie Welsh, daughter of the laird of Craigenputtock, to which place he removed in 1828, but in the summer of 1834 he established himself at the now famous house, 5 Cheyne row, Chelsea, where he resided until his death, 4 Feb. 1881, and here several of his works, including his "Life of Frederick the Great," completed in 1865, were written; in 1866 he was chosen Lord Rector of Edinburgh University, but in the same year lost his wife, a blow from which he never rallied. The remains of the great philosopher were brought from London, and interred in the parish churchyard here, and both the cottage in which he was born and his house in Chelsea are now religiously preserved, and are open to the inspection of visitors. Within a short distance of the village are the remains of two camps, one of which is said to be one of the most complete in Scotland. The land in Hoddam parish is of the best quality, and is under a superior system of cultivation. The area of the parish of Hoddam comprises 7,515 acres; rateable value being £12,825; the population in 1911 was 1,349 in the civil parish and 1,258 in the ecclesiastical parish.

GARREL, see KIRKMICHAEL.

GLENCAIRN is a parish, in Upper Nithsdale poor combination, and in the Dumfries small debt court district, and is 15 miles in length by from 3 to 5 in breadth, and distant 9 miles from Thornhill station, and 17½ miles from Dumfries station, both on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The western and northern divisions are mountainous and pastoral. Several small rivulets meander through the parish, on the south-west verge of which is Loch Urr, whence issues the river of that name. The parish church (St. Cuthbert's) is at Kirkland, with a mission church (St. Niniah's) at Moniaive.

MONIAIVE, a considerable and pleasant village in this parish, 16 miles north-west from Dumfries, and 8 south-west from Thornhill, is a place of some antiquity, and was created a burgh of barony by charter in the reign of Charles I. Here are a United Free church and a library and reading room. Maxwelton House was the home of Annie Laurie. On an eminence near the village stands a monument, erected by subscription in 1828, and inscribed to the Rev. James Renwick, the last person who suffered death in Scotland as a Covenanter; he was born at Moniaive, 15th February, 1662, and executed at the Grass Market, Edinburgh, 17th February, 1688. The Union Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch in the village.

DUNREGGAN, now a suburb of Moniaive, is situated on the north bank of the Dalwhat water, here crossed by a bridge.

Crawfordton is the seat of Captain George G. Walker M.C., J.P. who, with Col. Sir Claude V. E. Laurie bart. C.B., D.S.O., J.P. Mrs. Smith Cunninghame, Major William McCall J.P. and William Kennedy Moffat J.P. is the principal landowner. The area of the parish comprises 30,083 acres; rateable value, £14,546; the population of the parish in 1911 was 1,410, including 522 in Moniaive and Dunreggan.

GLENCAPLE QUAY, see CAERLAVEROCK.

GRAITNEY (or Gretna) is a parish and village in the south part of the county small debt court district of Dumfries and Annan, and poor combination of Kirkpatrick-Fleming, and on the west side of the small river Sark. The present parish comprehends the old parishes of Graitney and Redkirk, which were united in 1609. The village of Graitney, or Gretna Green, is on the road from Annan to Carlisle, 8 miles east from the former and 9½ from the latter town, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The Caledonian railway passes through the parish. The river Esk, which flows to the south, discharging itself into the Solway Firth, is now spanned by a concrete bridge, erected by Messrs. Holloway Brothers, of London; previously the Solway was crossed by a ferry boat. An extensive salmon fishery is carried on in the Solway. This place was long noted for the celebration of clandestine or runaway marriages. Any person could perform the ceremony, which merely amounted to a declaration before witnesses that the parties were man and wife, such an acknowledgment being sufficient to constitute a valid marriage in Scotland, and on a certificate being subscribed by the person officiating and by the witnesses the union became quite indissoluble. The fee charged varied according to circumstances, and the social position of the parties—from half a guinea to £40, or even £50. The first person who celebrated these marriages is said to have been one Coulthard, a fisherman, who also conveniently owned the ferry-boat; another was John Paisley, a tobacconist, though termed a blacksmith; he officiated from 1760 at Megg's Hill, but in 1782 removed to Springfield, and died in 1814; later, the officiating principal was a man named Elliott. During the period 1850-55, the average of marriages here amounted to 747 yearly, but under the provisions of an Act of Parliament passed 29th July, 1856 (19 and 20 Vict. c. 96), these marriages were declared illegal, unless one of the persons married had been resident in Scotland for 21 days previous to the marriage. The following was the form of the marriage certificate, which, if required, was furnished:—

KINGDOM OF SCOTLAND, COUNTY OF DUMFRIES, PARISH OF GRETNA.

"These are to certify to all to whom these presents may come, that A. B. from the parish of ——, in the county of ——, and C. D. from the parish of ——, in the county of ——, being now here present, and having declared themselves single persons, were this day married after the manner of the laws of the Church of England, and agreeable to the laws of Scotland.

"As witness our hands at Gretna Hall, &c. &c."

The marriage registers belonging to Joseph Douglas, the only original records in the parish, were recently presented to the Parish Council, in whose custody they remain. These may be seen for a small fee.

Gretna township, in this parish, ½ mile from Gretna Green station, erected by the Ministry of Munitions for workers at H.M. factory, a huge war time undertaking employing about 20,000 people. The township is built on most up-to-date lines, is lighted by electricity, and other facilities include tennis court, bowling green, recreation park, cinema, reading and billiard rooms and other halls.

RIGG is a small village in this parish, 2 miles from Gretna station.

SPRINGFIELD is a village a quarter of a mile from Gretna Green, and near it at SARKFOOT is a good bathing ground.

The Secretary of State for War is the principal landowner. The area comprises 8,501 acres; rateable value, £37,622; the population in 1911 was 1,212.

HOLYWOOD is a parish and village, on the road from Dumfries to Glasgow, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and Irongray, Newtonairds and Stepford stations on the Cairn Valley light railway, about 3½ miles north from Dumfries. The parish, which is bounded by Dunscore on the north and west, extends for 3 miles along the right bank of the Nith and 10 miles along the right bank of the Cluden or Cairn, its breadth being from 2 to 3 miles, and is in the small debt court of Dumfries. The district derives its name from a sacred grove, to which, it is said, the Druids resorted to perform their rites. Here was once a monastery of the Premonstratensian order, founded at the beginning of the 12th century by an Irish recluse named Congal, and the ruins formerly standing in the churchyard were supposed to be the remains of the buildings. The church stands in a delightful part of the country. Major Henry Keswick J.P. William Glen Aurston esq. Miss Gilchrist Clark, the trustees of Henry Lamont esq. Norman E. Douglas-Menzies esq. and Maxwell Hyslop Maxwell esq. are the principal landowners. Near Stepford station are extensive whinstone quarries. The soil of the upper part of the parish is clay, lower part light loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops, oats, potatoes, roots and pasture. The area is 8,805 acres; rateable value, £13,031; population in 1911, 865.

JOHNSTONE is a parish in the district of Annandale, adjoining Kirkpatrick-Juxta and Kirkmichael; it is 6 miles in length and 3 in breadth. The nearest market town is Lockerbie, 7 miles distant from Johnstone Bridge, and the nearest railway station is Dinwoodie, 1¼ miles distant, on the Caledonian railway main line. There is a library in the parish containing over 1,800 volumes. The remains of Lochwood tower stand at the northern end of the parish, in the centre of a venerable and picturesque wood, surrounded by impassable bogs. In the 16th century, Robert, natural brother to the chieftain, John, 7th Lord Maxwell, of Nithsdale, burnt it, during the clannish quarrel which resulted in the battle of the Dryffe Sands. Raehills House, the seat of Evelyn Wentworth Hope-Johnstone esq. chief landowner, was begun by the Earls of Hopetoun, the ancestors of the present proprietor, in the 18th century; in the park is a fall on the river Kinnel, called Wallace's Loup. The area comprises 13,486 acres; rateable value, £7,207; the population in 1911 was 751.

KELTON, see CAERLAVEROCK.

KIRKCONNEL is a parish and village in Upper Nithsdale poor combination; the parish, which is bounded by that of Sanquhar on the south and east, is 15 miles in length and 8 in breadth, and has two mineral springs, one possessing medicinal properties similar in effect to those of Hartfell spa, near Moffat; the other similar to the Kirkland spa, in Galloway; the village is 4 miles north-west from Sanquhar and 8 east-by-south from New Cumnock, on the high road between Dumfries and Glasgow, and has a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. There is a good hotel in the village. The inhabitants are employed in agriculture and in the adjoining coal works. At Crawick hill a centenary memorial was erected to James Hyslop, author and poet, who was born in this parish and died in 1827. On rising ground above the village is a monument to Alexander Anderson, "Surfaceman" poet, who was born in this parish and died in 1910. At the north end of the village there is a war memorial erected. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. is proprietor of nearly the whole of the parish. The area comprises 26,701 acres; rateable value, £18,446; population, 1901, 1,284, and in 1911, 2,144.

KIRKPATRICK-JUXTA is a parish, formerly partly in Lanarkshire, in the upper district of Annandale, on the right bank of the river Annan, bounded on the north by Moffat, on the east by Wamphray. At BEATTOCK, a village in this parish, from which a branch line runs to Moffat, is a station on the Caledonian railway, about 19 miles north from Dumfries. The parish church is a plain building of stone with a tower. In the parish is the celebrated Garpel Linn; and here also is the ruined castle of Auchencass, the remains of which cover a considerable extent of ground. It was erected by Randolph, Earl of Moray, during the minority of David Bruce, and was subsequently held by Douglas of Morton. The old tower of Loch-house is supposed to have been rebuilt by James Johnstone, of Corehead, chamberlain to Walter Whiteford, bishop of Brechin (1635-43), whose daughter he married, and thus obtained possession of extensive lands in Kirkpatrick-Juxta and Moffat. Loch-house is now inhabited by a cottier or herd. Queensberry, 2,270 feet in height, lies to the west of the parish. A little to the north-west of Moffat is an ancient chapel said to have belonged to the Knights Templars and the knights of St. John of Jerusalem. The modern mansion called Auchencastle, the residence of Sir William Younger bart. J.P. is a large house situated on rising ground, near the Evan water. Evelyn Wentworth Hope-Johnstone esq. is the principal landowner. About one-third of the land is under tillage; the larger portion is unimproved and pasture, though it is being rapidly subdued to the plough. The area comprises 22,365 acres; rateable value, £14,261; and the population in 1911 was 998. The small portion in Lanarkshire was transferred to Dumfries since 1889 by Local Government Board Order No. 2.

CRAIGIELANDS and HOPPERTOOTIE are hamlets in Kirkpatrick-Juxta.

LANGHOLM is a town and police burgh and parish in Hawick Poor Law combination and the seat of a presbytery, 73 miles from Edinburgh, 80 south-west from Glasgow, 30 east-by-north from Dumfries, 21 north from Carlisle, 18 north-north-east from Annan and 12 north from Longtown, Cumberland, with a station on the North British railway; the town is delightfully situated on both sides of the Esk, over which there is a suspension bridge, and also a stone bridge of three arches, affording a view of the confluence of the Ewes and the Wauchope with the Esk. The town is supplied with water from a copious spring known as "Whita Wells," and lighted with gas from works the property of a company. The government of the town is vested in a provost, two bailies and six councillors. Sheriff small debt courts and justice of peace courts are held as required. The parish church, a modern structure, contains a splendid organ, provided at a cost of £1,200. There are also three United Free churches, an Evangelical Union church and a Mission Hall. There is also here a private Episcopal chapel belonging to the Duke of Buccleuch K.T.

The Town Hall, in the Market place, has a tower with spire, and an illuminated clock. The Public Library, richly endowed by Thomas Telford esq. F.R.S. the celebrated engineer, a native of the district (d. 2 Sept. 1834), occupies a substantial building in High street, erected at a cost of about £3,380, of which sum £1,000 was a bequest of the late Alexander Reid esq. The Hope Trust Hospital was erected in 1898, after designs by Messrs. Wood and Ainslie, architects, of London, from a bequest of the late Mr. Thomas Hope, of New York, a native of Langholm, who left the residue of his estate, amounting to over £100,000, for this purpose. There is a Masonic hall, at which the meetings of the Eskdale Kilwinning lodge, No. 107, are held. There are branches here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the British Linen Bank. A newspaper, the "Eskdale and Liddesdale Advertiser," is published in the town. The market day is Wednesday; fairs are held on the 1st Wednesday in March (for the lambing season), 16th April (for seeds), the last Tuesday in May (old style), 26th July (for lambs and wool), 18th September (for sheep), and 5th November (for cattle); there are also two hiring days—one in May and the other in November. A sale of cattle, sheep &c. is held fortnightly, and the Eskdale and Liddesdale Agricultural Society hold their show of stock in September, at which premiums are awarded. The local industries comprise the making of tweeds, blankets and other fabrics, both for home markets and for exportation, and there are several factories, giving employment to many hands, besides which there are distilleries, dye-houses and a tannery. On the hill behind the town stands a monument to General Sir John Malcolm G.C.B. who died 30 April, 1833, erected at a cost of £1,300; and near the Town Hall stands a monument to his brother, Admiral Sir Pulteney Malcolm G.C.B., G.C.M.G. a distinguished naval officer, d. 20 July, 1838. The border house or tower of Langholm, formerly the property of the Armstrongs, is now in a state of ruin. Wauchope Castle, the earliest seat of the Lindsay family, which stood in the immediate neighbourhood, was another example. The tower of Gilnockie, still standing about four miles below Langholm, on the right bank of the Esk, was renovated by the late Duke of Buccleuch K.G. and is now open for the inspection of visitors. Eskdale derives more than common charm from the memory of Johnnie Armstrong, a border chieftain, whose name was associated with many incidents belonging to this locality. He was eventually executed at Carlenrig, a place not far distant from Moss Paul, on the road between Langholm and Hawick, together with some of his companions, by order of James V. about 1529, and the graves of the whole band are to be seen in a deserted churchyard at Carlenrig, Roxburgh. Alexander Peden, one of the most famous of Scottish worthies, is also associated with this neighbourhood, and a "knowe," or small hill, commanding a delightful view of the valley, is still named "Peden's View," and at its foot is "Peden's Well." Langholm was the birthplace, 29 Sept. 1734, of William Julius Meikle, or Mickle, translator of the "Lusiad" of Camoens (1775), and author of the song "There's nae luck about the hoose;" he died at Forest Hill, Oxon, 28 Oct. 1788. In the neighbourhood of Langholm is a copious mineral spring, called "Bloch Well," which is efficacious in the cure of cutaneous diseases, but owing to the limited accommodation which exists in its immediate neighbourhood, it is less known than it should be. Langholm Lodge, the residence of the Duke of Buccleuch K.T. stands just outside the town, in a beautiful park, and in the grounds is a private Episcopal chapel, to which the public are admitted. The area of the parish comprises 16,995 acres; rateable value, £21,881; the population in 1911 was 3,302, including 2,930 in the town of Langholm.

LOCHMABEN is a town, royal burgh, parish and the seat of a presbytery, with a station on a branch from Lockerbie of the Caledonian railway, 65 miles south from Edinburgh, 70 south-east from Glasgow, 33 south-east from Sanquhar, 30 north-west from Carlisle, 21 south-east from Thornhill, 15 south from Moffat, 13 north-west from Annan, 10 west-north-west from Ecclefechan, 8½ north-by-east from Dumfries and 4 west from Lockerbie; in the summer months it is a popular place of resort for tourists and other visitors, and is lighted with gas by a company. Lochmaben was constituted a royal burgh at a very early period; its present charter was granted by James VI. and dated 16th of July, 1612, and was a renewal of charters granted by his predecessors; from this charter it also appears that the town was more than once destroyed during the civil wars, its public edifices plundered, and its ancient records &c. totally lost. The municipal government is vested in a provost, two bailies, a dean of guild, a treasurer and four councillors. Lochmaben is in the small debt court of Dumfries, but occasional courts may be held at Lockerbie. The Parish church, erected at a cost of £3,000, is a building in the Pointed style, with a bold square tower, containing 2 bells: the foundation stone was laid April 10th, 1818, and the church opened for divine worship in July, 1820: it will seat about 1,400 persons. The previous church stood in the centre of the old churchyard, and the burial ground is still used for burial purposes. The United Free church, built in 1843 at a cost of about £800, has 350 sittings. There are also two other United Free churches, one of which is at Hightae, 2½ miles from Lochmaben. The Town Hall, which stands in the middle of the principal street, has a tower with a clock, and above the entrance is a statue, placed by public subscription, to the Rev. William Graham, a former minister of Newhaven, who died in 1887: opposite the Town Hall is a statue of King Robert Bruce. A Freemasons' lodge meets at the Masonic Hall and Club, in High street, and there is also a curling club, a bowling green, tennis courts, and various associations. The National Bank of Scotland Limited has a branch here, and there is a Savings Bank for the town and neighbourhood. Lochmaben Castle, a fortress of great strength, was the chief residence of the Bruces, Lords of Annandale, till the end of the 13th century; it was built on a peninsula on the south-east of the loch, which adjoins the town, and with its outworks covered about 16 acres. In 1487 it was annexed by Parliament to the Crown, and is now the property or in the keeping of E. W. Hope-Johnstone esq. of Raehills. Some of the existing walls are of great thickness, and the whole presents a gloomy yet interesting mass of ruins overshadowed with fir trees. In 1897 a bridge was erected over the moat by public subscription, to commemorate the Diamond Jubilee of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria. In the High street is a drinking fountain, erected in memory of His late Majesty King Edward VII. The Castle Loch, which flows very near the south side of the town, is about three miles in circumference; the Mill Loch, of somewhat less dimensions, lies on the north side of the town, and at times extends up to the doors of the houses. Both these lochs contain a fish called the vendace, or vendise, which is peculiar to these waters, and is said not to be met with anywhere else in Britain, although not uncommon in Sweden. It is of the salmon family, is delicately formed and about six inches long. How it came here is not exactly known, but some suppose it to have been brought from La Vendee, in France, when Bruce's castle was a royal residence, and hence they derive the name "vendace." These lochs as well as four others of considerable extent, are much resorted to by boating and fishing parties, and they afford agreeable recreation both to the inhabitants and to many tourists and visitors.

Within the parish of Lochmaben are four villages known as the "Four towns," viz.: Smallholm, Greenhill, Heck and Hightae, and remarkable as holding their lands by a peculiar tenure. The proprietors of lands in these baronies are called "the King's Kindly Tenants," and by successive Royal warrants and protections granted in 1592, 1602 and 1664, have the right to continue in undisturbed possession of their respective holdings at the old rent, so long as they can continue to pay the same. These baronies are said to have been conferred on the retainers of the Bruce, and many of the present holders can trace back their ancestry for centuries. Son succeeds father, and the title is completed by the entry of the name in Lord Mansfield's rental book, and the usual solemnities of service and infiefment, otherwise common to the law of Scotland, are here unknown.

Sir Robert William Buchanan Jardine bart. David Jardine Jardine esq. J.P. John Johnstone esq. Major William Bell Macdonald and Capt. Edward G. Johnstone Byrne are the principal landowners. The soil is a light loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are oats, roots, potatoes and pasture. The area of the parish comprises 10,853 acres; rateable value, landward £14,409; burghal £4,205; the population in 1911 was 2,355, including 1,006 in the burgh of Lochmaben; the population in the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 2,355.

The number of electors on the Burgh parliamentary register in 1921 was 944.

LOCKERBIE WITH DRYFESDALE

LOCKERBIE is a small market town and police burgh in the parish of Dryfesdale, 67 miles south of Edinburgh, 12 east of Dumfries, 11 north-west of Annan, 6 north-west of Ecclefechan, 4 east of Lochmaben, 72 south-east from Glasgow and 26½ north-west from Carlisle, with a station on the Caledonian railway, which is also the junction of a branch to Lochmaben and Dumfries. There is an active trade in articles of general and domestic consumption. The town is well lighted with gas from works at Townfoot. The municipal body consists of a provost, two bailies, 6 councillors, a town clerk and treasurer. The Town Hall, erected at a cost of £12,500, is an edifice in the conventional Scottish style, containing a large hall, committee rooms and a lesser hall, and in the basement a large market hall, for the use of farmers and others attending the markets. At the Town Hall is a public free library, to which a donation was made by the late Andrew Carnegie esq. LL.D. of Skibo Castle, Sutherlandshire. Connected with the town is a Masonic Lodge, and there are numerous philanthropic societies for the relief of the poor. The Parish church stands near the High street, and is centrally placed in relation to the parish generally; there are two United Free churches and a Roman Catholic church. The Episcopal Mission church of All Saints, built originally in 1891, was rebuilt in 1903, at a cost of £2,500; the Rev. James Gavin Grieve has been rector since 1912. The Parish Church Hall, formerly the Mechanics' Hall, High street, erected with a considerable sum of money left by Mr. George Easton, of Chester, for this purpose, is a building of stone. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited, and also a bank for savings, opened in 1824. The "Annandale Herald and Moffat News" is published here every Thursday and in Moffat every Friday. The following fairs, the dates of which are subject to alteration by the Town Council, are held here: seed market, third Thursday in March; hiring fair, last Thursday in April; harvest hiring market, third Thursday in July, lamb fair, second Thursday in August; hiring fair, last Thursday in October.

DRYFESDALE is a parish in the district of Annandale, and includes the town of Lockerbie. The extreme length from north-east to south-west is about 7 miles, the average breadth of the upper part is about 3 miles, and of the lower half about one and a half; about two-thirds of the parish is lowland and the rest is hilly. There is also a considerable extent of holm land towards the junction of the Annan and the Dryfe. Of the whole extent of the land in this parish, about 5,000 acres are either cultivated or have occasionally been in tillage, the remainder being in moor and pasturage. The point which assumes the greatest height is Quhytewoollen hill, an old beacon, the elevation of which is 650 feet above the level of the sea.

Sir B. W. B. Jardine bart. D. J. Jardine and E. D. Hope-Johnstone esqrs. are the principal landowners.

The area of Dryfesdale parish is 10,256 acres; rateable value, landward £13,181; burghal £16,666; population, 1911, 3,188; these figures include 2,455 in the town of Lockerbie.

MAXWELLTOWN, see DUMFRIES.

MIDDLEBIE is a parish and small village in the small debts court district of Dumfries and Annan, and poor combination of Kirkpatrick-Fleming, on the road between Langholm and Ecclefechan: the village is about 2 miles east from Ecclefechan, 12 south-west from Langholm, and 2 from Kirtlebridge station on the Caledonian railway; the parish is about 7 miles in length by 4 in breadth, and abounds in red freestone: it is also valuable for its lime quarries, but much of the land is of rather poor quality. In October, 1895, a Roman altar, erected by the 2nd Cohort of Tungrians, was found at the Roman camp of Birrens, in this parish, at the bottom of a well 16 feet deep; it weighs 17 cwt. and bears an inscription and various carvings; another altar, erected by the same cohort, to the goddess Minerva, and discovered here many years since, is preserved at Burnfoot House. The 2nd Tungrian Cohort was also stationed at Castlesteads, in Cumberland. The parish church at Middlebie is a small building of stone, with turret and one bell. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. Sir E. Johnson-Ferguson bart. Major Herbert Cavan Irving C.B.E., J.P. and E. J. Brook esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 17,542 acres; rateable value, £13,053; the population in 1911 was 1,722 in the civil parish and 912 in the ecclesiastical parish.

KIRTLEBRIDGE and EAGLESFIELD are small villages in this parish, the former 3 miles south-east, and the latter 2½ south from Ecclefechan. In the immediate vicinity are the famous salmon and trout fishings of the Annan, the Esk and the Kirtle. At Kirtlebridge is a station on the Caledonian railway. Kirtlebridge church, built in 1840 and restored in 1897, consists of nave, chancel, and tower containing one bell.

WATERBECK is a village in this parish, about 4 miles north-east from Ecclefechan, on the road to Langholm, and sends cured bacon to the different markets. Kirtlebridge, 3 miles distant, on the Caledonian line, is the nearest railway station.

MOFFAT is an inland spa, town and police burgh, and a large parish in the district of Annandale, 51 miles south of Edinburgh, 57 south-east of Glasgow, 14½ north of Lockerbie, 41 north-west of Carlisle and 21 north of Dumfries, with a terminal station on a branch of about one mile and a half in length, constructed in 1882, from Beattock station on the Caledonian railway. Moffat is an ancient town, being named in documents of the 13th century, when it was a manor held by the Bruce, Lord of Annandale, and ancestor of King Robert I. The town commands a fine and extensive prospect of a delightful valley, stretching towards the south, and interspersed with hedge-rows, meadows and cornfields, and pleasingly diversified by the windings of the river Annan. High Street, the principal street of the town, is a wide and spacious thoroughfare, laid down upon the principle of road making invented by John Loudon M'Adam, and is lined with excellent shops. It is lighted with gas by a local company. Moffat was instituted a burgh on the adoption, in 1864, of the Police Act, and now possesses a council invested with powers for sanitary and road improvements, the holding of monthly courts and other matters. The Public baths, in High street, include a hall, used for concerts and lectures, and during the summer a band plays here. The Cottage Hospital, in Selkirk road, was erected in 1905-6, partly from funds provided by the trustees of the late William Proudfoot esq. the wards being furnished by Mrs. McMillan. The Proudfoot Working Men's institute, founded by the late William Proudfoot esq. of Craigieburn, is an elegant structure in the Scottish style, with reading and recreation rooms, baths and an excellent library of over 3,000 volumes; above the entrance is a bust of the founder. Here also is a Freemasons' Hall. An ornamental drinking fountain, consisting of a pedestal of rough sandstone surmounted by the figure of a ram cast in bronze, was erected in the centre of the town in November, 1875, at the cost of the late William Colvin esq. of Craigielands. The Parish church was built and presented to the parishioners in 1796 by James, 3rd Earl of Hopetoun, inheritor of the Annandale estates, on the site of one of the churches of Annandale transferred to the Bishop of Glasgow, and was constituted one of the prebends of that see, but the present structure, the foundation stone of which was laid in August, 1885, was opened for public worship in September, 1887; it is a cruciform building, Gothic in style, and consisting of chancel, nave, transepts and a tower 107 feet in height. The pulpit, of carved pitch pine, is set on seven pillars of polished red sandstone, and some of the principal windows are filled with stained glass. At the west end of the church is a hall, with a vestry on the south and a session house on the north. The church and hall, together with an adjoining manse, cost between £12,000 and £13,000, £6,000 of which was subscribed by the congregation and friends, and the remainder provided by the heritors of the parish. The church will seat 1,150 persons. The United Free church, in Academy road, erected at an expense of £6,000, is a building of red sandstone and blue whinstone, in the Decorated Gothic style, and has a fine barrel roof. A hall has since been added. The Episcopal church is an iron structure erected in 1872. The United Free church, in Old Well road, erected at a cost of about £3,000, was opened in July, 1862, and a Church hall was added in 1895. The Roman Catholic church, a structure of wood, is open for worship only for a few weeks during the summer season.

Moffat has long been a fashionable summer resort, on account of the medicinal virtues of its mineral waters. The springs are three in number, one sulphurous and two chalybeate. The sulphurous spring, distinguished by the name of "Moffat Well," is about a mile from the town, and during the summer is reached by omnibuses. The "Fons Moffetensis" was described by Matthew Mackaile in 1659 as a spring possessing great healing virtues; it is said to have been first made known by Rachel, daughter of Walter Whiteford, bishop of Brechin, who married the Laird of Corehead (1633), and it was first analysed by her descendant Dr. Milligan Johnstone, in the last century. During the period which has elapsed since the discovery of the valuable qualities of this spring, it has been much frequented from all parts of Scotland, as well as by visitors from England and Ireland; in all scrofulous and scorbutic cases it is a powerful remedy, being seldom known to prove ineffectual when the lungs are not diseased; it is also eminently successful in the removal of bilious complaints, as well as in creating an appetite and promoting digestion, and is an excellent specific for gravel and rheumatism, but is so volatile that it can only be drunk in perfection at the fountain. Hartfell spa was first discovered in the year 1748, by a man named John Williamson. The spring issues from a rock of alum slate, in the side of Hartfell mountain, near Moffat, and is bottled and sold by local chemists. The other chalybeate is obtained in a very curious manner—namely, by pouring water upon a rock in the side of a dell, near the town, called "Garpel Linn." The surface of this rock being strongly impregnated with sulphate of alumina and iron, the water is much more powerful than that of Hartfell, and is consequently taken in smaller quantities. The Linn, or valley, has been laid out in walks by Sir William Younger bart. of Auchen Castle, and is freely open to the public. Loch Skene, on the mountain range, north-east of the town, at an elevation of upwards of 1,500 feet above the level of the sea, contains the finest trout in the south of Scotland. The waters of this lake are discharged over precipitous rocks in a lofty and magnificent cascade called the "Grey Mare's Tail," computed to be about 300 feet above the level of the vale, and which appears from the opposite side of the glen to be one unbroken fall; the stream is thence known as Moffat water, and flowing on through a narrow pass, sweeps through the domains of Dumcrieff, the property of Lord Rollo, and falls into the Annan. About four miles north-west is a petrifying chalybeate spring, and there are others attracting less attention. The principal hotels are the Annandale Arms and the Buccleuch Arms. There is also a Hydropathic Establishment. The "Moffat News," published here on Friday, contains a visitors' list. During the season omnibuses ply from the Annandale and Buccleuch Arms hotels, to St. Mary's loch on the Selkirk road, and are met at St. Mary's Cottage (Tibbie Shiel's) by conveyances from Selkirk, where there is a railway station. Daily excursions are made to places of interest in the district during the summer months. There are branches here of the Bank of Scotland, the Union Bank of Scotland Limited and the British Linen Bank. The weekly market is on Friday. There are two half-yearly hiring markets; the first is held on the last Friday in March, the second on the first Friday in October. There is also an annual sheep and cattle market called the tup fair, in September, on the Friday after the Falkirk tryst, at which time a flower, sheep and cattle show—or rather a combination of shows, is held, to which and by its excellence great crowds are attracted. The district is noted for the breed of cheviots. John Loudon M'Adam, well-known as the inventor of a system of road-making, and born at Ayr, 21 Sept. 1756, died in this town, 26 Nov. 1836, in his 81st year; a great portion of his early life had been spent in this neighbourhood, to which he was much attached, but it was as a magistrate of Ayrshire that his attention was first directed to the question of road-making; for his public services in this respect he received from Government £10,000, in two separate instalments, and was offered the honour of knighthood, which he declined on account of age and infirmities, and it was, instead, conferred upon his son. Joseph Locke F.R.S. an eminent engineer (born at Attercliffe, near Sheffield, in 1805), and the assistant and pupil of George Stephenson, and from 1847 to 1860 M.P. for Honiton, died here 18 Sept. 1860. Nicholaus de Moffet, Bishop of Glasgow (1268-1270); Robert Johnstone LL.D. author of "A History of Scotland," &c.; Walter Boyd, banker, of Boyd, Benfield and Co.; William Dickson, a writer on slavery; William Murray, the chronometrist, and Dr. D. Welsh, moderator of the first Free Church Assembly, and author of the "Life of Dr. Thomas Brown, a Church History," were all born at Moffat. Dr. William Carruthers F.R.S. late of the Nat. Hist. Dept. British Museum (1871-95), was also born here in 1830. Evelyn Wentworth Hope-Johnstone esq. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 43,028 acres: rateable value, burgh, £18,224; landward part, £13,857; the total population of the parish in 1911 was 2,702, which included 2,079 in the police burgh and 623 in the landward part in this county. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 2,702.

MORTON is a parish about 12 miles north-west of Dumfries, bounded on the north and north-west by Durisdeer, east and south by Closeburn and south-west by Penpont, and extends 7 miles from north to south by 3 in breadth, and contains the village and railway station of Thornhill (which see); it is in the Upper Nithsdale poor combination and Thornhill small debt court district; the land is both pastoral and arable, and, where cultivated, it is well inclosed and fertile. In addition to the Nith, the Carron and the Cample streams pass through the parish, the whole of which belongs to the Duke of Buccleuch. Morton Castle, about 3 miles from Thornhill, and now in ruins, was held during the minority of David Bruce by Sir Thomas Randolph, 1st Earl of Moray, as Regent of Scotland, and guardian to the king. Of the House of the Hassock, an ancient building, on the site of which the present castle was erected, some remains may still be traced. Traces of Roman camps and, in the high grounds, of ancient British camps, are very numerous over the whole district, and at one time there were many cairns of stones. The parish church, erected in 1781, on a site about a mile and a half from Morton Castle, was taken down in 1840-1 and the present edifice erected at Thornhill, by the 5th Duke of Buccleuch K.G. (d. 1884), at a cost of £3,550: it will seat 1,200 persons.

At GATELAW BRIDGE, about 2 miles from Thornhill, is the Poor Law Institution, which serves for the nine adjoining parishes.

CARRON BRIDGE is a village in the parishes of Morton and Durisdeer, on the river Carron and on the road from Sanquhar to Dumfries, about 2 miles south from Carron Bridge station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, and 1¾ north-west from Thornhill.

The area comprises 8,047 acres; rateable value £10,950; the population in 1911 was 1,820, including 1,169 in Thornhill.

MOUSWALD is a parish and village on the road from Dumfries to Annan, about 6½ miles south-east from Dumfries, 10 north-west from Annan and 3 from Ruthwell and Racks (the nearest) stations, both on the Glasgow and South Western railway. It is in the small debt court district of Dumfries. The kirk, which stands on an elevated site close to the village, contains a dilapidated effigy of Sir Simon Carruthers, a former laird of Mouswald. At the entrance to the new churchyard on the low Annan road has been erected a war memorial which takes the form of an arch of red sandstone. It bears the names of ten men of this parish who fell in the Great War. The Village Hall was erected in 1915 as a memorial to the late Very Rev. John Gillespie LL.D. and will seat 200 persons. At Mount Kedar, about 2 miles from Ruthwell, but in this parish, stands a monument erected to the Rev. Henry Duncan D.D. sometime minister of Ruthwell and founder of the system of savings banks; he was born in 1774, and died in 1846, after being minister of Ruthwell parish for 44 years. The memorial, which is of stone, consists of an arched base, surmounted by a pyramid 40 feet in height. In 1887, William F. Carruthers esq. of Dormont, provided a supply of water for the village by a system of gravitation. Brocklehirst, the seat of James Jardine Paterson esq. is a handsome modern residence in the midst of a small park. James Jardine Paterson esq. Robert Corsane Reid esq. Sir Robert G. W. Grierson bart. Major Francis John Carruthers and Mrs. Miller Morison are the principal landowners. The soil is light loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are oats, roots, potatoes and pasture. The area comprises 5,887 acres; rateable value, £8,203; population in 1911, 493.

PENPONT is a parish and village, in Upper Nithsdale poor combination, and in Dumfries small debt court district; the parish is an extensive agricultural district, of irregular form and uneven surface, the only low land being found chiefly upon the verge of the rivers which flow through the parish; the village is about 2 miles south-west from Thornhill and 3 from Thornhill station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The church, rebuilt in 1872, is a handsome edifice of sandstone, and has a tower with spire and a clock; there are also three United Free churches and a Reformed Presbyterian church. Tibber's Castle, the ruins of which stand within a mile of Drumlanrig Castle, were excavated by the 5th Duke of Buccleuch K.G. (d. 1884); this fortress, referred to in Blind Harry's metrical history of Sir William Wallace, appears to have been destroyed during the reign of King Robert the Bruce (1306-29). The Glenquhargen Craig, which rises to a great height, is in this parish, and there are likewise remains of Roman encampments, causeways &c. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. owns nearly the whole of the parish. The area comprises 21,998 acres; rateable value, £8,218; the population in 1911 was 831.

RUTHWELL is a parish and village about 7 miles west from Annan and 10 south-east from Dumfries, in the small debt court district of Annan, with a station about 2 miles distant on the Glasgow and South Western railway; the village being also a barony, is privileged to hold markets and fairs, but it is long since the inhabitants availed themselves of these rights. The kirk and manse of Ruthwell stand about a quarter of a mile from the village. In 1887 the ancient and famous Runic monument here, formerly in the grounds of the manse, was removed and placed in the church. About a mile from the station is Comlongon Castle, in part an ancient border keep, and the property of the Earl of Mansfield, but now the residence of John Buchanan Jardine esq. The Earl of Mansfield, Napier Cromar esq. William Scott esq. M.B., C.M., J.P. Scottish Board of Agriculture and the Duchess of Norfolk are the principal landowners. Clarencefield is a village in this parish, about a mile from Ruthwell station. A recreation field near the village of Clarencefield has been presented to the parish by the Earl of Mansfield. The Public Hall was erected in 1891, by subscription, in memory of the late Rev. James McFarlan, and enlarged in 1899 by Robert Halliday Gunning esq. M.D., LL.D. The area comprises 8,686 acres; rateable value, £9,295; population in 1911, 770.

SAINT MUNGO is a parish in the district of Annandale, about 3 miles north-west from the village of Ecclefechan and about the same distance south from Lockerbie station on the Caledonian railway. The Established church, erected by the late Sir R. Jardine bart. at a cost of £5,000, and opened 7th Jan. 1876, is an edifice of stone in the Gothic style, and contains an organ presented by Sir R. W. B. Jardine bart. at a cost of over £500. Castle Milk, the seat of Sir Robert William Buchanan Jardine bart. D.L., J.P. is a fine mansion romantically situated in the bosom of a delightful valley and surrounded by beautiful grounds. The house was originally the seat of the ancient lords of Annandale; much later it belonged to the Maxwells and to the Douglas family, but was eventually purchased by the Jardines from George Armstrong esq.; during the minority of Edward VI. it was besieged by the Duke of Somerset, and some of the balls fired on that occasion were found in 1771, on a spot afterwards called "The Cannon Holes." The area comprises 4,901 acres; rateable value, £7,792; population in 1911, 573.

SANQUHAR is a town and royal and parliamentary burgh on the left bank of the river Nith, and a large parish in the district of Nithsdale and in Upper Nithsdale poor combination, 56 miles south-south-west of Edinburgh, the same distance south-by-east of Glasgow, 32 east-south-east of Ayr and 26 north-north-west of Dumfries, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway. The town, which is a favourite summer resort, consists chiefly of one main street, and is the principal coal mart in the county. The town is lighted with gas from works the property of the Town Council, and supplied with water from works belonging to a local company. The town was made a burgh of barony in 1484, and advanced to the dignity of a royal burgh in 1598 by charter of James VI. and is governed by a provost, two baillies, a treasurer, dean of guild and four councillors. There is an Established church, erected in 1823, with a square tower, two United Free churches and a Congregational Union church. The Town Hall stands at the end of High street, and has a tower with a clock. In 1882 a handsome Public Hall was erected at a cost of £1,500. There is a Subscription Library at the Town hall. The British Linen Bank and the Royal Bank of Scotland have branches here, and there is also a District Savings Bank. The Free school, founded by a bequest of £2,000, left by the late James Crichton, of Friar's Carse, in this county, and a native of Sanquhar, was discontinued in 1885, by an order of the Educational Endowment Commissioners, and the net proceeds of the endowment are now applied, through the Dumfriesshire Education Authority, to the purposes of higher Education. The Castle ruins, which stand on a high bank overlooking the river Nith, a short distance south-east, were excavated by the late Duke of Buccleuch, and many interesting objects were then found, including several human skeletons and a well of great depth with a bucket suspended in it. The fortress, originally a building of great strength, had towers at the angles, and was surrounded by a ditch. It formerly belonged to a branch of the family of Crichton, ancestors of the Marquess of Bute and Lords Crichton of Sanquhar, a title still held by the present marquess; the castle was acquired from the Duke of Buccleuch in 1894, and considerably restored in 1897 by the 3rd Marquess of Bute K.T. A drinking fountain of marble was erected at Townhead in 1897, by public subscription, as a memorial of the reign of Her Majesty Queen Victoria. At Eliock, now the residence of James Irving McConnel esq. J.P. James Crichton, generally known as the "Admirable Crichton," is said to have been born in 1561, but was assassinated at Mantua in 1583. There is a spade and shovel factory at Crawick, iron and steel and two brick and tile works. Fairs are held on first Friday after the 12th of February and November (old style); and there is one for lambs, sheep and wool on the 17th July, or the first Friday after. The Sanquhar Farmers' Society's show for horses, sheep and cattle is held annually on the second Friday in May. Crawick and Mennock Bridge are small hamlets in this parish. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. is the chief landed proprietor. The area of the parish comprises 40,905 acres; landward valuation, £15,636; burghal, £7,345; the population in 1911 was 2,428, including 1,508 in the town, royal and parliamentary burgh. The area of the burgh is 349 acres.

THORNHILL is a considerable village in the parish of Morton, 66 miles south-by-east of Glasgow, 48 north-west of Carlisle, 40 north-east of Newton Stuart, 44 south-east of Kilmarnock, 30 north-west of Annan, the same distance south-east of Cumnock, 22 north-east of New Galloway, 14 north-north-west of Dumfries and 12 south-south-east of Sanquhar, with a station on the Glasgow and South Western railway; it is charmingly situated towards the centre of the extensive amphitheatre of hills which include Middle Nithsdale, the river Nith winding through the valley. The streets are wide and lighted with gas. The district is largely agricultural. There are two freestone quarries in the neighbourhood and a large bacon curing and sausage factory. Here is the parish church of Morton, erected by the 5th Duke of Buccleuch K.G. (d. 1884) at a cost of £3,550, and seating 1,200 persons; there is also a United Free church and a Congregational chapel. The Museum of Natural History and Antiquities, endowed by the late Dr. Grierson, who originated it and formed the collections, was erected in 1869, and is surrounded by tastefully laid out grounds, planted with shrubs and trees, and containing a statue by the late Mr. Currie, sculptor, of Dumfries, of Richard Cameron, a noted Covenanter, who fell fighting at Airdmoss, Ayrshire, when his head was cut off and conveyed to Edinburgh, and there placed on the Nether bow. In the museum is a public reference library of about 1,000 volumes. Near the school is a monument, erected in 1897, to the late Joseph Thomson F.R.G.S. an African traveller, who was educated at Penpont and Morton schools. The Freemasons' Hall is in South Drumlanrig street. There are several benevolent societies. Here is a Conservative club, besides musical, bowling, curling, lawn tennis and cricket clubs; there is also a society for public lectures. There are branches here of the Union Bank of Scotland and the British Linen Bank. The chief hotels are the Buccleuch and Queensberry and the George. The Nithsdale Auction Company Limited hold sales for live stock at their mart adjoining the railway station weekly, on Saturday. The Nithsdale Agricultural Society's Show is held on the third Tuesday of September annually. Population in 1911, 1,656.

TINWALD is a parish on the rivers Lochar and Æ, with stations at Amisfield and Shieldhill on the Caledonian railway, and is 4 miles north-east of Dumfries, 6 from Lochmaben, and in the small debt court district of Dumfries; it is triangular in form, each side being about 4½ miles long, and for the most part the land is arable.

SKIPMYRE, in this parish, was the birthplace, in 1655, of William Paterson, the original projector of the Bank of England, founded in 1694, and also the originator of an unsuccessful scheme for the colonization of the Isthmus of Darien. Paterson returned before the arrival of the second expedition, and died after great losses and sufferings, 22 Jan. 1719.

AMISFIELD is a village in this parish, with a station on the Caledonian railway. Amisfield Tower, once the seat of the Charteris family, is now the property and residence of William Johnstone esq. J.P.

The Right Hon. Viscount Chilston P.C., O.B.E. David Jardine Jardine M.A., J.P. the trustees of the late Morden Carthew-Yor-toun, the trustees of the late Robert Stuart Dalzell and William Johnstone esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. The soil is gravelly; subsoil, light clay and gravel. The crops are oats, potatoes and roots, but chiefly pasture. The area comprises 10,312 acres; rateable value, £12,427; population, 1911, 728.

Post Office, Amisfield. Letters through Dumfries; John Wright, sub-postmaster. The nearest money order office is at Parkgate, 4 miles; the telegraph office is at Amisfield railway station (open 8 a.m. to 7 p.m.; sunday closed)

TORTHORWALD is a parish and village near the foot of Nithsdale, with a station called "Racks" on the Glasgow and South Western railway; the parish is in the small debt court district of Dumfries and presbytery and synod of Dumfries, and is bounded by Tinwald on the north, Lochmaben on the north-east, Mouswald on the south-east and Caerlaverock on the south-west, and is separated on the west from Dumfries parish by the Lochar water; it is 7 miles in length from north to south, by a breadth, at the northern extremity, of about 2½ miles, tapering to a point on the south. The village, in the north part of the parish, is about 4 miles south-west from Lochmaben (where there is a station on the Caledonian railway) and 4 east from Dumfries. There is an Established church, and a Public Hall was built in 1902. In the vicinity are the ruins of the ancient castle of Torthorwald, supposed to have existed since the 13th century, and there are also traces of British camps. David Jardine Jardine M.A., J.P. and Sir Robert Gilbert White Grierson bart. J.P. are the principal landowners. The soil is light sandy loam; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are oats, roots, potatoes and pasture; about 2,000 acres of land is not under cultivation. The area comprises 6,815 acres of land and 12 acres of water; rateable value, £8,061; population in 1911, 788.

COLLIN is a village 3½ miles east from Dumfries, on the road to Annan, and has a public hall, built in 1896. Roucan is another village, and both are in this parish.

TUNDERGARTH is a parish and village, 4 miles east of Lockerbie station on the Caledonian railway; the parish, in which a great number of sheep are pastured, is bounded on the west by that of Saint Mungo, and south by Hoddam and Middlebie, and is nearly 13 miles in length, by a breadth of only about 2 miles at its widest part. The parish church is a small plain building of stone, consisting of nave, north aisle and a turret containing one bell. Tundergarth Castle, now in ruins, was formerly the residence of the Johnstones, Marquesses of Annandale, the last of whom, George Johnstone, 3rd Marquess, d. 1792, and the property has now descended to Evelyn Wentworth Hope-Johnstone esq. J.P. A conspicuous hill called "Burnswark" overlooks the district from the south. Sir Robert W. B. Jardine bart. is the principal landowner. Area comprises 10,486 acres; rateable value, £6,856; the population in 1911 was 399.

TYNRON is a parish in the Dumfries small debt court district, and lies 6 miles south-west from Thornhill station on the Glasgow and South Western railway, between Penpont on the north and north-east and Glencairn on the south, and extends 9 miles in length, by a breadth of from 2 to 3. The parish is partially watered by the Shinnel river, along the banks of which there is some pleasing scenery. Here is an Established church. Near the eastern extremity of the parish rises the Doon of Tynron, a conspicuous pyramidical hill, near the summit of which is a Roman mound or fort. The principal landowners in the parish are the Duke of Buccleuch K.T. Capt. George Laurie Walker J.P. Brig.-Gen. John Kennedy J.P. Mrs. MacRae and Francis Gourlay J.P. The area comprises 15,705 acres; rateable value, £5,067; population, 1911, 309.

WAMPHRAY is a parish adjoining Kirkpatrick-Juxta and Johnstone, 8 miles in length by 3½ in breadth, and has a station on the Caledonian railway. The parish church stands in a deep wooded recess, by the side of Wamphray water, and over the belfry door is a fine sculptured stone, probably part of an ancient cross, which has been imitated in a monument erected to Mr. Charteris, late teacher here, by his son, Professor Charteris, of Edinburgh. Wamphray water, a tributary of the river Annan, trawls and thunders through a most romantic and picturesque glen, formed on both sides either by high steep banks clad with thriving plantations, or by lofty basaltic columns, mantled with ivy, and saplings of ash springing from their interstices. Sir Robert William Buchanan Jardine bart. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 13,136 acres; rateable value, £6,600; population, 1911, 369.

WANLOCKHEAD is a village and quoad sacra parish, at the eastern extremity of the parish of Sanquhar, and near the foot of the Lowther Hills, about 9 miles north-east from the burgh and 7¼ from Elvanfoot station on the Caledonian railway, from whence a branch line was opened July, 1904; it is said to stand at a greater elevation above the sea level than any other village or town in Scotland. The houses are scattered on the hillside, without regard to regularity. The extensive and valuable lead mines in this neighbourhood, belonging to the Duke of Buccleuch, are worked by the Wanlockhead Lead Mining Company Limited, and furnish employment to a considerable number of miners, artisans and others. The Fraser Memorial Institute, erected in 1908 by Messrs. John, William and Archibald Fraser, of Glasgow, in memory of their parents, who were both natives of the village, comprises a hall to seat 350 persons and billiard and reading rooms. The population in 1911 was 618.

WESTERKIRK is a parish and village near the north-eastern boundary of the county, in the small debt court district of Langholm and Hawick poor combination, and about 6 miles north-west from Langholm (the nearest) station on the North British railway. Nearly the whole of this portion of the district is devoted to pasturage for sheep and cattle. The church, which stands on the north bank of the river Esk, is a building of stone, erected in 1880 by the late Duke of Buccleuch K.G. and consists of nave and a tower with one bell. Burnfoot, the residence of Mrs. Palmer-Douglas, is situated on the banks of the Esk, 3 miles from Langholm, and was the birthplace of the "four knights of Eskdale," Admiral Sir Pulteney Malcolm G.C.B., G.C.M.G. born 21 February, 1768, General Sir John Malcolm G.C.B. born 2nd May, 1769, Colonel Sir James Malcolm K.C.B. d. 1849, and Rear-Admiral Sir Charles Malcolm K.T., C.B. born 1782, who in various ways distinguished themselves in different parts of the world. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. Frederic Berkley Matthews esq. William Moffat esq. Mrs. S. Beattie, Mrs. Palmer-Douglas, Lt.-Gen. Sir J. Spencer Ewart K.C.B. and Admiral Arthur W. Ewart are the principal landowners. The area comprises 27,023 acres; gross value, £6,197 9s. 10d.; rateable value, £5,577 14s. 11d.; the population in 1911 was 393.

EDINBURGHSHIRE

THE county of Edinburgh lies in the southern division of Scotland, bounded on the north by the Firth of Forth (an arm of the North Sea), by Linlithgowshire, or West Lothian, on the west, by the counties of Lanark, Peebles and Selkirk on the south, and by Haddingtonshire, or East Lothian, with small portions of Berwickshire and Roxburghshire, on the east. The length of the county, from east to west, is about 36 miles, and its breadth, from its extreme apex on the south to near Musselburgh on the north, where the eastern extremity of the county abuts on Haddingtonshire, is about 24 miles. In figure it is very irregular. Its sea coast only extends for about 17 miles, and has no bays or lochs. The area of the county is 34,325 acres, of which 10,877 was in Edinburgh city; the population in 1901 was 488,796, and in 1911, county, 187,348; city, 320,318; total, 507,666, viz.: males, county, 91,991; city, 143,436; total, 235,427; females, county, 95,357; city, 176,882; total, 272,239. The number of inhabited houses in 1911 was, county, 39,348; city, 69,762; total, 109,110; uninhabited, county, 3,268; city, 6,428; total, 9,696; building, county, 207; city, 243; total, 450. This county in size ranks as the twenty-third, and in population as the second, mostly due to it containing the capital.

Early History.—In common with other portions of the country, the part now forming Edinburghshire was under the control of the Picts and other Celtic tribes, and it was not until A.D. 81, when the Romans under Agricola, who two years previously entered the country by the Solway Firth, having constructed a wall across the isthmus between the Clyde and the Forth, took possession of what was for many centuries known as part of Northumbria, though then called by them the province of Valentia, which appears to have extended from the Forth southward to the Tyne, and this district was held by the Romans until 120, when they fell back to the line of the Tyne, returning in 139 and holding the country until about 410, when they evacuated it, leaving behind them many indications of their occupation. Shortly after this the Saxons seem to have pushed forward from the north-east of England and to have sustained for nearly a century a fierce struggle with the ancient inhabitants, to whom the Romans had handed over the country, a struggle which in 547 was decided in favour of the invaders, who under Ida, a Scandinavian chief, obtained a firm hold over a district extending from the Tees to the Forth, and called by them "Bernicia," while the portion now including Linlithgow, Edinburghshire, Haddingtonshire and part of Roxburghshire and Stirling became Laodine, or subsequently Lothian, a name even now called by the natives Loadian, and it is not until 617 that we meet with any designation resembling Edinburgh, when Aethelfrith, grandson to Ida, having been slain by his nephew Eadwine, a prince of Deira (or Yorkshire), the latter founded on the rock, on which a Pictish castle had already stood, a town and castle, to which he gave the name of Eadwinesburgh, and as King of Northumbria ruled the country from the Humber to the Forth, and it was only in the reign of Malcolm II. 1057 to 1093, that Lothian became an integral part of the Scottish kingdom. In the struggle which Edward III. maintained for the restoration of the Baliol dynasty, one of the most sanguinary battles was fought on the Boroughmoor of the metropolis. In 1385 Mid-Lothian was subjected to the horrors of pillage and conflagration, in the expedition of Richard II.: and a century and a half later it suffered much from the invasion of the English, on account of the treaty of marriage between the son of Henry VIII. and the young Queen of Scots. The county was, soon after, the scene of many of the insurrectionary movements against the authority of Queen Mary, and in 1650 Cromwell passed through in pursuit of Charles II. but falling back to Dunbar, fought there, in September, the well-known battle in which he defeated General Leslie, and in 1745 Prince Charles Edward passed through to his victory at Prestonpans.

Surface, Soil & Climate.—The greater portion of the county is, if not mountainous, hilly, and in many places wild and pastoral; the portion under woods and plantations is only 12,336 acres. The most prominent hills are the Pentland Hills in the centre of the county, and the following, with their altitude above the level of the sea:—Blackhope Scar, 2,136 feet; Dodlaw, 1,550; Blackhill, 1,628; Moorfoot Hills, 1,850; Caerketton (Pentland range), 1,555; Spittal Hill, 1,360; Arthur's Seat (from its base, 700), 796; House of Whim, 934; Woodhouselee, 729; Dalmahoy Hill, 680; summit of Braid Hills, 630. By the close of the 11th century, agriculture had made some progress in the district of Mid-Lothian. During the last and present century much has been accomplished in this part in rearing plantations; but it is to the society of "Improvers," formed at Edinburgh about the year 1723, that this county is mainly indebted for its advancement in agriculture. In 1744 potatoes were first raised in fields, and in about thirty years afterwards their cultivation was completely established in the county. Agriculture is vigorously prosecuted in the valleys of the rivers; the upland district being unsuitable for agriculture, thus causing more attention to be devoted to sheep farming. The system of leases here, generally for nineteen years, gives the tenant farmers of Scotland an independence which tenants at will, or from year to year, cannot have, and encourages them to expend money on the land. The climate is, upon the whole, salubrious, and not unfavourable to vegetation, its greatest drawback being its variability. The chief crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Statistics for Scotland, 1920," are oats, 22,468 acres; barley, including bere, 7,629; wheat, 4,539; peas, 63; total of corn crops, 34,891; turnips and swedes, 9,742 acres; mangolds, 47; potatoes, 7,456; cabbage, 378; rape, 642; vetches or tares, beans, mashlum &c. 134; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 12,504 acres; pasture (not for hay), 14,065 acres; small fruit, 186 acres; orchards, 62 acres. The total area of the land (exclusive of water) is 243,325 acres, of which 77,698 acres was mountain and heathland used for grazing; permanent grass, 40,700 acres; arable land, 80,504 acres.

The live stock in 1920 comprised 3,125 horses used solely for agriculture and brood mares; unbroken horses, 731; other horses, 760; cows in milk, 7,848; cows in calf, but not in milk, 604; heifers in calf, 565; other cattle, two years and above, 3,300; one year and under two, 2,501; under one year, 1,320; ewes kept for breeding, 63,199; other sheep, one year and above, 28,821; under one year, 66,654; sows kept for breeding, 1,291; other pigs, 8,063.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 135; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 146; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 96; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 64; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 63; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 63; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 104; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 184; above 300 acres, 111; total, 966.

Minerals, Manufactures and Commerce.—The county abounds in several valuable minerals, especially coal, sandstone, limestone and whinstone. The production in 1919 of coal was 2,522,980 tons, value £3,169,611 (195,423 tons of coal were used in the manufacture of 66,553 tons of coke at gas works); of iron ore, 10,547 tons, value £8,804; clay, 43,367 tons; gravel and sand, 36,075 tons; igneous rocks, 118,496 tons; limestone, 81,065 tons; oil shale, 580,910 tons; sandstone, 4,510 tons. In the western part is an extensive coal field, and the eastern contains inexhaustible and rich beds of this valuable mineral, extending from the shore at Musselburgh, on both sides of the North Esk, about fifteen miles inward, to the head of that stream at Carlops, on the confines of Treedale. The number employed in the mines and quarries in 1919 was, underground, 8,954; above ground, 2,834; total, 11,788.

In the parish of Calder are extensive beds of rich bituminous shale, from which paraffin oil and other chemical products are extracted. Mid-Lothian possesses sandstone of different kinds, and of an excellent quality. The quarries of Edinburghshire have long enjoyed a pre-eminence which cannot be so effectually indicated by anything as by the appearance of the New Town of Edinburgh. The works of Craigleith and Hailes, near the city, are objects of curiosity. Almost all the houses of the New Town, besides other buildings, have been reared from the former mine. There are several other quarries of inferior note throughout the county. Lead was, in former times, found at the head of the North Esk, on the south side of the Pentland Hills. A vein of copper is said to exist in the parish of Currie, but it has never been worked. The manufactures of Edinburghshire cannot be traced to a remote date, and have never been remarkable for their extent. It is but little more than a century since that the fabrication of linen was known in the county. In Edinburgh, Leith and Musselburgh there are now numerous manufactories of goods of different kinds. The principal articles manufactured in the shire for exportation, either by out-ports or inland, beside linen, are glass, soap, salt, candles, refined sugar, ale, whisky, leather, bricks, tiles, pottery, iron, chemical preparations, printing ink and materials, paper and books. The manufacture of paper became first known in Scotland in this county, and the district still possesses large establishments employed in this industry, chiefly at Penicuik, and in the neighbourhood of Colinton and Lasswade. Paraffin oil has also become an important manufacture at Mid and West Calder.

The maritime traffic of the county, which is very considerable, is concentrated at Leith, the only port suitable to the entrance of large vessels, and indeed the only one of any kind except those of Fisherrow, or Musselburgh, Newhaven and the rising port of Granton. The number of fishing boats registered in 1918 as belonging to the port of Leith was 233, with an aggregate tonnage of 4,034, while 150 other vessels, aggregate tonnage, 105,654 tons, were registered at the same port. The number of fishing boats registered at the port of Granton in 1918 was 46, of 2,854 tonnage. Of other vessels, 56, of 3,162 tons, were also registered.

Rivers and Railways.—This county does not possess any large rivers. This deficiency, however, is of little or no importance, in consequence of being placed on the margin of a broad and navigable firth. Next the Forth, the Esk may be said to be the chief river; it is composed of two streams, which unite their waters below Dalkeith, and glide into the Forth at Musselburgh. The Leith, a valuable small river, takes its rise on the north side of the Pentland Hills, and after receiving several rivulets, discharges its waters, after a course of nineteen miles, into the Forth. The Almond, the most westerly stream, rises in the high grounds on the borders of Lanarkshire; it is joined by the Briech Burn, in its way to the Forth, which it enters at Cramond. The Union canal, 31 miles in length, proceeding to the west from Edinburgh, conveys large quantities of coals and various kinds of goods to the city. Several railways centre in the county; beginning at the north-east we have the North British line, from Berwick, via Dunbar, entering it at Wallyford, a little east of Musselburgh, joined after a few miles at Inveresk by the branch from Macmerry, and proceeding thence by Joppa and Portobello to Edinburgh; the next line towards the south is that known as the Waverley route, North British railway, entering the county at Boowland station and running north to Millerhill, Portobello and the city, with branches to Leith, Arthur's Seat and Murrayfield; another branch of the North British from Galashiels enters the county on the south at Leadburn, where a line from Dolphington joins it, and proceeds north to Bonnyrigg and Portobello into Edinburgh, and there are branches to Dalkeith, Glencorse, Polton and Penicuik. The Caledonian railway enters the county from Carlisle at Cobinshaw station and runs through Meadowbank, where the Glasgow branch joins it, to Edinburgh. The lines of the North British from Airdrie and Linlithgow come into the county at Ratho Junction, and are joined there by the line from the Forth Bridge, while small branches from Leith and Granton run into the north of the city.

Divisions, Parliamentary Constituency &c.—The county is divided into 27 complete civil parishes and part of one other (Kirkleston). There are 35 complete and parts of 12 ecclesiastical parishes and 36 complete and parts of 9 in Edinburgh city and one complete and part of one in Leith, and for judicatory purposes is divided into 6 districts, the whole being in the presbyteries of Edinburgh and Dalkeith and synod of Lothian and Tweedale. This district became subject to the government of a sheriff prior to the reign of David I. The office of sheriff of Edinburgh seems to have been at all times an appointment of great trust and dignity; and from the 13th to the 18th century was filled by the heads of families of note in the shire and its vicinity. Besides Edinburgh, the shire does not comprise any royal burghs, but the municipal boroughs are Leith and Musselburgh, and police burghs, Bonnyrigg, Dalkeith, Lasswade, Loanhead and Penicuik. Its only burgh of barony is Dalkeith. The contributory burghs belonging to this county represented in Parliament are Leith and Musselburgh, the latter being included in the county of the city of Edinburgh. Midlothian and Peebles send two members to Parliament in two divisions, namely, Northern and Peebles and Southern. The parliamentary constituency of the county numbered in 1919, Northern Division, 25,365; Peebles and Southern Division, 23,808.

BONNYRIGG is a town and police burgh in the parishes of Cockpen and Lasswade, 6 miles south from Edinburgh and 2 south-west from Dalkeith, and has stations at Bonnyrigg and Broomieknowe, both on the North British railway. Carpet weaving is carried on to a very considerable extent, and employs many hands. There is a Public Library, erected in 1910 at a cost of £2,000, and a Public Hall, which will hold about 600 persons. Broomieknowe, an outlying part of the village in Lasswade parish, much resorted to by summer visitors, has a station on the Esk Valley section of the North British railway. The area of the burgh, part of which is in Lasswade parish, is 127 acres; rateable value, £14,922; the population in 1911 was 2,955.

BORTHWICK is a parish in Dalkeith poor combination and small debt court district, about 12 miles south-south-east from Edinburgh, on the Carlisle road, and has stations at Gorebridge and Fushiebridge, both within the parish, on the North British railway. The village of Gorebridge (which see) is in this parish. Borthwick gives the title of baron to an ancient family of the same name, and though no official record of its creation exists, this peerage, certainly in existence before 1455, is stated to have been bestowed by James II. of Scotland, in 1452, on William Borthwick, son of Sir William de Borthwick. This parish was the birthplace, in 1721, of William Robertson D.D. author of the "History of Charles V." and other works; principal of Edinburgh University, and in 1764 historiographer for Scotland; he died 11 June, 1793; here also was born, in 1685, Robert Dundas, an eminent Scottish advocate, raised to the judicial bench in 1737 as Lord Arniston, and in 1748 president of the court of session; he died 26 Aug. 1753. In the parish and about 2 miles west from Crichton is Borthwick Castle, erected in 1430 by Sir William Borthwick, afterwards first Lord Borthwick. It is an imposing battlemented structure, 115 feet in height, with walls of hewn stone, varying in thickness from 17 feet at the base to about 12 feet at the top, and still bears traces of its siege by Cromwell. The mills of James Pendreigh and Son Limited, which have been established here for over a century, are famed for the production of oatmeal, pearl barley, split peas and all feeding meals. The Arniston Colliery Library was founded by the late Sir Robert Dundas, 2nd bart. (d. 1910). The Castle, a ruin until 1893, has since been renovated, and is now (1921) the residence of Mrs. Stuar. Vogrie is the residence of Mrs. Janet Chalmer; Currie House, of John Renton Brown esq.; Arniston House, of Lady Dundas, and Middleton Hall is now (1921) unoccupied.

FUSHIEBRIDGE is a village about 1 mile from Borthwick and 5 south from Dalkeith, with a station on the North British railway.

The area comprises 9,376 acres; rateable value, £26,531; the population in 1911 was 3,009, including 1,487 in the village of Gorebridge, and of Borthwick ecclesiastical parish, 1,323.

Letters should be addressed Gorebridge, Midlothian. The nearest money order, telegraph & telephonic express delivery office is at Gorebridge.

EAST CALDER is a village 1 mile east from Mid-Calder, on the south road from Edinburgh to Glasgow. It was originally a parish of itself, but is now united to Kirknewton. The nearest railway station is Mid-Calder, about 1½ miles distant, on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the Caledonian system. St. Cuthbert's church, now an ivy-clad ruin at the west end of the village, was built by Randolph de Clere in the 12th century. There is also a Roman Catholic church. The barony was given in 1306 by Robert Bruce to James Douglas, an ancestor of the Earls of Morton. Population of East Calder Ward in 1911, 953.

MID-CALDER is a parish and village in the small debt court district of Edinburgh; the parish is bounded north and north-east by Uphall, east by Kirknewton, south and west by West Calder and north-west by Livingstone. The village, pleasantly situated on an eminence between the water of Linnhouse and the river Almond, on the road from Glasgow to Edinburgh, is 12 miles west-south-west from Edinburgh and 8½ east from Whitburn, and has a station about 2½ miles distant, on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the Caledonian railway. Calder wood, which is of considerable extent, overhangs the village. The soil in the northern district is light, dry and fertile, in the southern the surface undulates towards the Pentland hills. About one-third of the entire area of the parish is under tillage; in the remaining portion there are several beds of rich, bituminous shale, from which a large quantity of paraffin oil and other chemical products are extracted at the different works. Coal abounds in the parish, and on the estate of Calder House, the property of Lord Torphichen, is an extensive bed of freestone of excellent quality. Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in March, and on the Friday after the second Tuesday in October. The parish church, originally founded by Duncan, Thane of Fife, in the early part of the 13th century, was rebuilt on the ancient site by Peter Sandilands, a scion of the noble family of Torphichen, in 1541, and has since been enlarged and restored at a cost of over £3,000. There is also a United Free church. Calder House is the seat of Lord Torphichen J.P.; John Knox, in the hall of this mansion, first dispensed the sacrament of the Lord's Supper after the Reformation, and his portrait hangs in it. In the vicinity formerly stood the house of Greenbank, the birthplace, in 1565, of John Spottiswoode, Archbishop of Glasgow (1603-15), and of St. Andrew's (1615). Lord Torphichen is the principal landowner. PUMPHERSTON is a village in the north of this parish, in connection with the Shale Oil works. The area comprises 12,101 acres; rateable value, £32,870; the population in 1911 was 3,249, including 1,605 in Pumpherston Ward.

WEST CALDER is a parish and village in Edinburgh small debts court district, the parish being about 8 miles in length and 8 in breadth; the village is about 5 miles south-south-west from Mid-Calder, 16½ south-west from Edinburgh and 31 east from Glasgow, and has a station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the Caledonian railway. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The Public Library here, founded at the cost of Dr. Andrew Carnegie, was opened Nov. 24th, 1904, by the Rt. Hon. the Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T. lord lieutenant of the county, and contains about 4,500 volumes. The Paraffin Oil Works, established in this parish in 1866 by Mr. James Young, the patentee, who purchased several large properties here, containing some beds of rich bituminous shale, have created a new village, called Addiewell. In the immediate neighbourhood, at a place called Castle Craig, are traces of a Roman encampment. A newspaper called the "Midlothian Advertiser and West Lothian and Lanarkshire News" is published every Saturday. Viscount Chilston P.C., O.B.E. Mrs. Barr, Mrs. Mary Walker and Young's Paraffin Oil Co. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 20,979 acres; rateable value, £65,837; the population in 1911 was 7,716, including 4,125 in West Calder Ward and 2,977 in Addiewell Ward. The population of West Calder ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 5,164.

ADDIEWELL is a manufacturing village and ecclesiastical parish, about 1½ miles west from West Calder village, and sprang up in 1866 in connection with the paraffin oil works established here by Mr. James Young. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 2,552.

COBBINSHAW, GAVIESIDE and MOSSEND are villages.

COCKPEN is a parish, in Dalkeith poor combination and small debt court district, 2½ miles south from Dalkeith, and about 4½ long by 2 in breadth; there are two railway stations in the parish, at Bonnyrigg (which see) and Broomieknowe, on the Esk Valley section of the North British line; and there is a bowling green and a large public park. Dalhousie Castle, in this parish, formerly the residence of the late Marquess of Dalhousie, lord clerk registrar of Scotland and gov. gen. of India, 1847-56, is now (1921) unoccupied; the grounds include those of the famous 'Laird o' Cockpen," well known in Scottish song. The Esk valley, which is admired by all who visit it, can be seen from here to great advantage, and the view is open for miles around. The Earl of Dalhousie is the principal landowner. The area comprises 2,950 acres; rateable value, £39,992; population in 1901, 4,805, and in 1911, 5,559, including 2,520 in the town of Bonnyrigg and 239 in Lasswade, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 3,812.

HUNTERFIELD and Armiston Green form a village in this parish.

CRANSTON (or Cranstoun) is a parish, in Dalkeith poor combination and small debts court district, 5 miles in length by 3 in breadth, and intersected by the river Tyne, with Dalkeith and Newbattle on the north and west, and Crichton on the south, and is 3 miles north from Dalkeith (the nearest) station on the North British railway. The land is high and undulating, but well cultivated. This place, from 1609 to 1869, gave the title of baron to the Cranstoun family of Creeling. The last peer died 28 Sept. 1869, when this peerage became either dormant or extinct. The church is an edifice of white freestone, in the Gothic style. Oxenfoord Castle is the seat of the Earl of Stair D.S.O. who is also Baron Oxenfoord of Cousland. Edgehead, Cousland and Preston are small villages in this parish. At Cousland are the extensive works of the Caledonian Portland Cement Co. Limited, which employs a number of hands. The area comprises 4,322 acres; rateable value, £7,640; the population in 1911 was 805 in the civil parish and 813 in the ecclesiastical parish.

CRICHTON is a parish, in Dalkeith poor combination and small debt court district, 5 miles south from Dalkeith and 3 miles from Tynehead (the nearest) station on the North British railway. Ford (part of) and Pathhead (which see) are villages in this parish. Crichton Castle is a ruin situated on the right bank of the Tyne, the oldest part remaining being the keep, probably built by Thurstan de Crichton, one of the witnesses to the charter of the foundation of Holyrood Abbey (1128); the south and west wings were added by Sir William, 1st Lord Crichton, High Chancellor of Scotland during the reigns of James I. and II.; the north wing is attributed to one of the Earls of Bothwell, probably the first Earl, Patrick, 1490. Within the hall of this fortress, Queen Mary feasted on the occasion of the marriage here of her natural brother, Sir John Stewart. The castle was purchased by Alexander Callender esq. in 1786, and is now the property of Henry Burn Callander esq. D.L., J.P. of Westerton and Preston hall. Sir Walter Scott in "Marmion" makes reference to Crichton castle, and the place affords the title of Viscount to the Crichton family, Earls of Erne. There is a Pictish house on the farm of Crichton House, which was discovered about 40 years ago; it is roughly 33 feet long, 6 feet wide and 6 feet high; it is entered by a short passage 4 feet by feet, and the original roof was composed of heavy slabs of a kind of sandstone. The area comprises 5,596 acres; rateable value, £7,317; population in 1911, 733.

CURRIE is a parish and village, in the small debt court district of Edinburgh bounded by Ratho on the north and Edinburgh on the west, while the Pentland Hills skirt it on the south. The village, situated on the north bank of the water of Leith, is 6 miles south-west from Edinburgh, with a station on the Balerno branch of the Caledonian railway, and is also a quarter of a mile from Currie Hill station on the Glasgow line. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St. Mungo, and the Rev Percival Wood Hulbert M.A. of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, has been priest in charge since 1907. The manufacture of paper is largely carried on, and snuff is also manufactured. The Water of Leith was purified, and is now a favourite trouting stream; the Edinburgh Corporation ponds, also in the parish, are well stocked with trout, and liberty to fish may be had from the Corporation, or from Lord Rosebery. The Baberton Golf club, founded in June, 1893, has an excellent course of 18 holes, opened by the late Sir J. H. Gibson-Craig bart. (d. 1908) on Christmas Day, 1893; the club house, at Juniper Green, is within the city boundary, and was built in 1895 at a cost of £1,200, from the designs of Messrs MacArthy and Watson, architects; it is a building with gabled wings and contains a club room, dining and ladies' rooms, kitchen and lavatories. Lennox Tower on the estate of Malleny, beyond Currie, was anciently the seat of the Lennox family, as well as the occasional residence of Mary Queen of Scots. At a short distance from it, on the opposite bank of the river, are the ruins of another ancient edifice, once the mansion of the Skenes of Currie Hill. The house of Baberton, also in this parish, was used as a hunting seat, first by James VI. of Scotland, previous to his accession to the English throne, and secondly by Charles X of France, after his expulsion from his dominions in 1830. The area comprises 13,031 acres; rateable value in 1920, £37,520; population, 1911, 2,519 in the civil parish and 2,441 in the ecclesiastical parish.

Capt. Sir Henry Thomas Gibson-Craig bart. the Earl of Morton and the Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T., P.C. are lords of the manor and the principal landowners.

BALERNO is a village in the parish of Currie, on the water of Leith, and about 8 miles south-west from Edinburgh, with a station on the Caledonian railway. In the village are paper mills. Hermiston, Glenbrook and Malleny Mills are hamlets in this parish. At Malleny Mills a considerable industry in wood turning and the making of bungs for barrels is carried on.

DALKEITH is a parish, market town, a burgh of barony and the head of a poor combination, 6 miles south-east from Edinburgh, with a station on a branch from the Waverley section of the North British railway; there is also a station at Eskbank on the same section. It occupies a dry and exceedingly pleasant site, in a fertile district, diversified with hill, dale and wood, with the North and South Esk flowing around it. This place gives the title of Earl to the Douglas-Scott family, Dukes of Buccleuch. The immediate locality abounds with coal of excellent quality, which is worked to a great extent. Midlothian is famous for the excellence of its oatmeal, and Dalkeith mills have long been identified with its production. There is also a brush factory, carpet works and a brewery. The town is lighted with gas from works belonging to a company, formed in 1827, and also, since 1904, with the electric light by another company. An ample supply of excellent water was obtained in 1888, within the burgh bounds, by boring, the yield amounting to 65,000 gallons every 24 hours. The municipal body consists of a provost, two bailies and six members of council, constituted under the Police Improvement (Scotland) Act, who have the power to assess and regulate local taxes. A police court is held at the Police barracks, on the second and fourth Monday of every month, and other days as occasion may require. There are two Established churches, three United Free churches, and St. David's Catholic church: the Episcopal church of St. Mary, in Dalkeith park, built in 1845, affords 112 sittings: the chaplaincy has been held since 1921 by the Rev. Charles Ross. There are also Baptist, Congregational and Evangelical Union chapels and a Wesleyan Mission Hall. Branches are maintained here of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, opened in 1810; the National Bank of Scotland Limited, in 1825; the Royal Bank of Scotland, in 1836; the Edinburgh and Glasgow Bank, merged in the Clydesdale Bank Limited, in 1858, and a branch of the Bank of Scotland, opened in 1896. In 1839 a National Security Savings Bank was established. The Dalkeith Combination Poor House was erected in 1819, at a cost of £4,058, and enlarged in 1897 at a further cost of £800, for the poor of four parishes, but there are now twelve parishes in combination. The building is available for 120 inmates. The Corn Exchange and Market Hall is a fine covered building, opened in 1854, is 172 feet long, 50 feet wide and 45 feet high, and was erected at a cost of nearly £4,400. The Infectious Diseases Hospital was erected in 1913, at a cost of about £5,000. The corn market is held weekly on Mondays. Fairs are held annually on the third Tuesday in October for cattle &c. last Thursday in February, first Thursday in April, and second Thursday in October for hiring. A newspaper, the "Dalkeith Advertiser," is published here on Thursday. Dalkeith House, the seat of the Duke of Buccleuch K.T., D.L. the principal landowner, stands on the south bank of the Esk adjoining the town and occupies the site of an ancient castle, long in the possession of the family of Douglas, and afterwards the frequent residence of the Regent Morton during the minority of James VI. when it was commonly and significantly called "the lion's den." The present mansion, erected by the Scott family, about the close of the 17th century, is a substantial mansion in the Classic style, consisting of a centre with wings, the ornamental features being of the Corinthian order. The hall, the grand staircase, and the several suites of apartments within are spacious, elegantly furnished, and enriched by a valuable collection of paintings. George IV. sojourned here; and Her Majesty Queen Victoria likewise repeatedly honoured the house with her presence, and in 1903 His late Majesty King Edward VII. and Queen Alexandra occupied Dalkeith House during their State visit to Scotland. The park contains about 800 Scottish, or 1,000 English acres, surrounded by a stone wall: it is adorned with much fine timber, and traversed by the streams of the two rivers Esk. The Public Park, situate on the north side of the town, was formerly leased from the 6th Duke of Buccleuch K.G. (d. 1914), but upon the celebration of his golden wedding in November, 1909, it was presented by him to the town. The parish area is 2,320 acres; the population in 1911 was 7,502, including 7,109 in the town of Dalkeith. Area of the burgh, 282 acres; rateable value, £47,376. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was: East Church, 3,083; West Church, 4,372. Included in the total population were 60 inmates and 6 officials in Dalkeith Combination Poorhouse.

FALA and SOUTRA, anciently distinct parishes and partly in Haddingtonshire, now form a united parish, which under the Boundary Order 89 is wholly in Edinburghshire: the kirktown and the hamlet of Fala-dam were formerly in the first-named county, the united parish in the poor combination of Dalkeith, and in the small debt court district of Haddington. The village of Fala lies on the road from Edinburgh to Lauder, 11 miles south-west from Haddington, and 3½ miles north-east from Tynehead station on the North British main line from Carlisle to Edinburgh, and Soutra old church is 5 miles north-east from Heriot station on the same line. The western extremity of the Lammermuir Hills is in this part of the parish, terminating in Soutra Hill, 1,209 feet above sea level and the detached peak of Gilston, 1,362 feet. The area is 6,577 acres; rateable value, £3,426; the population in 1911 was 276 civil, 247 ecclesiastical.

BLACKSHIELS, a small hamlet, originally a detached portion of the parish of Humbie, has been transferred by Boundary Order 89 to Fala and is about 3 miles north from Tynehead station.

GLENCORSE (or Glencross) is a small parish in the small debt court district of Dalkeith, containing about four square miles, and is 6 miles south from Edinburgh, having in it the terminal station of the Roslin and Glencorse section of the North British railway. The road to Dumfries, Biggar, Moffatt, Peebles and Penicuik passes through the parish. The present church was erected in 1886 at a cost of £3,000, in place of the earlier structure, which occupied an eminence half a mile north-west. Glencorse House is the residence of Archibald R. C. Pitman esq.

The area comprises 4,245 acres. The rateable value is £19,628 12s. 9d.; population in 1911, 1,387, including 236 military and 138 other occupants of the barracks.

MILTON BRIDGE is a small hamlet in the parish.

AUCHENDINNY is a small village in the parish of Glencorse, 7½ miles south from Edinburgh, on the road to Peebles, and is situated in a romantic dell, through which flows the North Esk, and has a station on the Edinburgh and Penicuik section of the North British railway. This place has been long known for the manufacture of paper, and there is still a paper mill in operation, contiguous to the village. The population in 1911 was 366.

HERIOT is a parish 10 miles in length and 6 in breadth; it is 16 miles south-south-east from Edinburgh, and has a station on the Edinburgh and Hawick branch of the North British railway. The Gala and Heriot waters are two streams which take their rise in the Muirfoot hills here, and afford sport to the angler. In the neighbourhood are remains of several ancient fortifications, chiefly circular. Borthwick Hall is the residence of Mrs. Mary Macfie M.B.E. The area comprises 16,501 acres; rateable value, £7,049 (land, £5,803; railways, £1,246); the population in 1911 was 414 in the civil and 365 in the ecclesiastical parish.

The portions of Hangingshaw and Kirklands farms, including the hamlet of Stagebank, were transferred from Stow to this parish for all purposes, Dec. 6, 1898, by the Secretary for Scotland's Order No. 34, dated Dec. 17, 1897.

INVERESK is a parish and village and the head of a poor combination, in the small debt court district of Edinburgh, and has a junction station on the North British railway. There is also a station at New Hailes in this parish. The parish includes the town of Musselburgh and the villages of Inveresk, Cowpits, Deantown, Wallyford, Monktonhall, Smeaton and Old Craighall. The pleasant village of Inveresk consists chiefly of mansions and villas, surrounded by attractive grounds. The parish church, which occupies the summit of the hill of Inveresk, is a large square edifice in a plain style, and has a tower with a lofty and elegant spire. Several of the windows are stained: the oak pulpit is a copy of one at Santa Croce, Florence. There is a communion table of carved oak, a brass lectern, and some monuments. In the churchyard is the grave of David Macbeth Moir, surgeon, poet and littérateur, born at Musselburgh 5 Jan. 1798, died 6 July, 1851. Pinkie House, anciently the country house of the Abbots of Dunfermline, and now the residence of Lieut.-Col. Sir John Augustus Hope bart. O.B.E., M.P., J.P. is delightfully situated in extensive policies, with fine old trees. Its turreted tower and much admired Gothic fountain are of high antiquity and great interest. The site of the battle of Pinkie, 10 Sept. 1547, is about a mile south of Pinkie House, and overlooking it, a mile and a half further off, is Carberry hill, celebrated for the surrender of Queen Mary to the confederated nobility 15 June, 1567, and her final parting with Bothwell. Near is the fine mansion of Carberry Tower, the seat of Lord Elphinstone D.L., J.P. New Hailes, half a mile south-west from Fisherrow, now the property and residence of Lieut.-Commander Sir David Charles Herbert Dalrymple bart. was formerly the seat of Sir David Dalrymple bart. appointed in 1766 a lord of session, as Lord Hailes, a distinguished Scottish historian and antiquary, who died in this mansion 29 Nov. 1792, where his valuable library is carefully preserved. Near the house is a monument to John, 2nd Earl of Stair K.T. Field Marshal, and ambassador to France, d. 1747. In this parish are found limestone, freestone and coal, the latter particularly in abundance. From the higher grounds to the south very extensive views are to be obtained, reaching from Ben Lomond, Ben Ledi and Ben Voirlich on the west to the North Sea, and from the Grampians, Ochils, and Lomonds to the Pentlands, Moorfoots, the Lammermuirs, the Firth of Forth, and Fife coast, forming the foreground of the panorama. The area comprises 5,097 acres; rateable value in 1920, including Musselburgh, £132,342, of which £60,653 is for the burgh; population in 1901, 14,650, and in 1911, 20,360, of which 15,938 were in Musselburgh; ecclesiastical parish, 9,889. Included in the total population were 129 inmates and 16 officials in the Combination Poorhouse. Under the "Edinburgh Boundaries &c. Act, 1920," 80 acres of the parish, including New Craighall village, were annexed to the city.

MONKTON HALL is a small village and BRUNSTANE, or Brunstane Mills, a hamlet, both in the parish of Inveresk, burgh. Smeaton, Deantown and Cowpits are colliery villages further south. At Wallyford and Carberry the Edinburgh Collieries Co. Limited have several pits.

NORTH ESK is an ecclesiastical parish formed from Inveresk; the population in 1911 was 9,902. WALLYFORD is a village in the civil parish and contains a Public Hall.

Letters for Inveresk are received through Musselburgh, which is the nearest post, money order & telegraph office, half a mile distant

Post Office, Wallyford; Thomas J. Kelly, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Musselburgh, which is also the nearest telegraph office. Levenhall is the nearest money order office

KIRKHILL, see PENICUIK.

KIRKLISTON is a parish and village partly in Edinburghshire, but chiefly in Linlithgowshire. Particulars will be found under the latter county.

KIRKNEWTON, about 10 miles west from Edinburgh, is a parish and small village, in the sheriffdom of Mid-Lothian and small debt district; the parish includes the ancient parochial division of Calder Clere, now East Calder; it is bounded on the west by Mid-Calder, on the east and south by Currie and Ratho, and on the north by Kirkliston and Uphall. The nearest station is at Mid-Calder, half a mile distant, on the Caledonian railway. The parish contains the village of East Calder, which see. The Oakbank shale oil works afford employment to a considerable number of the inhabitants. The present parish church, built in 1750, stands half a mile from the village, and was renovated in 1871 at a cost of £2,300; within the walls of the old church, standing in the burial ground in the village, was interred the celebrated physician, Professor William Cullen M.D. who was born in Lanarkshire, 11 Dec. 1712, and died 5 Feb. 1790; his son Robert was appointed a lord of session in 1796, as Lord Cullen, and a lord of justiciary in 1799; he died 28 Nov. 1810, and was buried in Kirknewton churchyard. Kirknewton House is now the seat of J. A. Maconochie-Welwood esq. J.P.

The principal landowners are the Earl of Morton, John A. Maconochie-Welwood esq. J.P. Lieut.-Col. James Hare and George Barr esq.

The area comprises 9,363 acres; rateable value, £25,800; the population in 1911 was 2,873, including 649 in Kirknewton Ward.

WILKIESTON is a village in the parish, 3 miles east from Mid-Calder. Here is a United Free church.

OAKBANK is also a village in the parish; the population in 1911 was 825 in the ward.

LASSWADE is a town and police burgh within the parish of that name and in the Dalkeith poor combination and small debt recovery. The burgh, which extends into the parish of Cockpen, is 6 miles south of Edinburgh and 2 south-west from Dalkeith. There are six railway stations in the parish, viz.: Lasswade and Polton (the terminus) on the Polton branch, Hawthornden and Rosslyn Castle on the Peebles and Dolphinton section of the North British railway, and Roslin and Rosslyn Castle. The North Esk runs through the whole length of the parish. The town has been greatly improved by the erection of many substantial dwellings, and the opening of various manufactories, including several paper mills. The parish church is an ancient structure, and in the attached cemetery lie the remains of William Drummond, of Hawthornden, the poet, who died 4 Dec. 1649, and to whom a memorial was unveiled in 1897: one aisle contains the burial vault for the noble family of Dundas, and here was interred Henry (Dundas), 1st Viscount Melville P.C. and secretary of state during the administration of Mr. Pitt; he died 29 May, 1811: the stained east window was erected in 1898 by the late Mrs. Moffat, of Eldin, in memory of her husband. The organ was built in 1897. There are traces in the village of two religious foundations, St. Ann's and St. Leonard's; there is also a United Free church. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St. Leonard, and the Rev. W. Hardie Johnson M.A. of St. Catherine's College, Cambridge, has been rector since 1919. Melville Castle, on the bank of the Esk, is the property and residence of Viscount Melville I.S.O. Near here, on the same river, is Polton House, once the residence of Constable, printer and publisher, and is the property of Major Sir Henry Herbert Philip Dundas bart. M.V.O. and residence of Mrs. Victoria Marshall; here also is Hawthornden, the home of Drummond, the poet and historian, the property of Col. Sir James Hamlyn Williams-Drummond bart. J.P. and residence of E. Percy Stebbing esq. Sir Walter Scott spent the first years of his married life in a neat cottage, a little apart from the burgh. John Clerk, of Eldin, author of a famous work on naval tactics (d. 10 May, 1812) and his son, also John Clerk, a learned lawyer, appointed a lord of session, as Lord Elgin, in 1823, both resided at Lasswade; and Thomas de Quincey, the author of the "Confessions of an Opium Eater," and many other works, lived in a cottage at Polton during 1840-41. Below Hawthornden are three caves, which in troublous times afforded shelter to fugitives; the largest is 90 feet in length and 12 feet wide at the entrance, gradually tapering inwards, and 6 feet in height, with a shaft cut for the admission of light and air, and in a recess there is a well, several feet deep. Here is the Royal Victoria Hospital Farm Colony, under the Edinburgh Corporation, for the treatment of tuberculosis. Broomieknows is partly in the town and police burghs of Bonnyrigg and Lasswade. The area comprises 9,964 acres; rateable value, £79,228, which includes Loanhead burgh and parts of Lasswade and Bonnyrigg burghs; the population in 1901 was 9,708 and in 1911, 10,504, divided as follows:—Bonnyrigg burgh, 435; Lasswade burgh, 641; Loanhead burgh, 3,483 and landward, 5,945. The area of the burgh, which extends into Cockpen parish, is 40 acres; rateable value, £3,855; the population in 1911 was 880, of which 641 were in Cockpen parish. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 3,044.

Included in the total civil population are 328 inmates and 105 officials and their families in the Midlothian and Peebles District Asylum and 140 inmates and 57 other occupants of New Saughton Hall Private Mental Hospital.

A portion of the parish, with population of 466, was transferred to the parish of Penicuik in March, 1904.

ROSLIN is a quoad sacra parish formed from Lasswade and Penicuik; the population in 1911 was 1,817.

MUSSELBURGH is an ancient town and a burgh of regality, in the parish of Inveresk, and in Inveresk poor combination and Edinburgh small debt court district, 2½ miles east from Portobello, 4 north from Dalkeith, 5 east from Leith and 6 east from Edinburgh, with a station at Inveresk on the North British railway and another on a branch from New Hailes Junction of the same line. The town occupies a level expanse upon the south shore of the Firth of Forth, generally acknowledged to be an ancient sea level. The river Esk flowing through, divides it into nearly two equal parts, that on its western bank being known as Fisherrow. The approach to High street from the station is through a fine avenue of trees called the Mall. The streets generally are of good width and well paved with whinstone blocks, and the two portions of the town are connected by six bridges across the Esk. The old bridge, a venerable structure of three arches, was built by Lady Janet Hepburn, wife of George, 3rd Baron Seton, and grand-aunt of the notorious James (Hepburn),4th Earl of Bothwell, so unhappily associated with the history of Mary Queen of Scots. The roadway is high and narrow, and is approached by a flight of steps at either end, being now used only by foot passengers, although in ancient times it was the chief thoroughfare to the south. Across it the Scottish army passed after the battle of Pinkie (10 Sept. 1547), when Lord Graham, eldest son of the Earl of Montrose, and others were killed on it by cannon shot from the English fleet anchored at the river mouth. Victoria Bridge, near the mouth of the Esk, erected in 1888, in commemoration of the jubilee of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, is for foot passengers only. There is also a stone bridge of five elliptical arches, designed by John Rennie F.R.S. the famous engineer; an iron girder railway bridge for the North British railway, a stone bridge carrying the main line of the North British railway, two iron bridges and others. The small harbour at Fisherrow, on the western bank of the river, is under the control of commissioners. A large sum has been expended in erecting and improving the piers, but the access to the harbour is shallow, and does not admit vessels of any considerable tonnage. The custom house, connected with that of Leith, is now at Prestonpans. A portion of the inhabitants around here are fishermen, and the produce of their industry is conveyed by rail to Edinburgh and disposed of by their wives and daughters. Contiguous to Fisherrow Links are the public slaughter houses, constructed upon the most approved plan. An effective system of drainage has been carried out, and the water supply is derived from the Edinburgh and District Water Works. The town is lighted with gas by a company established in 1831, whose works are at the north-west corner of the Links, near the river mouth; also electric light and power are supplied from works, the property of a company. Thomas, 9th Earl of Mar, in 1340 granted to the town its first charter, and in 1354 all the ancient rights and privileges of the town were confirmed anew by King David II. After the disastrous battle of Pinkie, in 1547, the whole of the burgh records were ruthlessly destroyed by the Duke of Somerset K.G. lord protector, but in 1562 Robert Pitcairn, commendator of Dunfermline, executed a fresh charter, reaffirming all the ancient rights and privileges previously enjoyed. This charter is still extant, and has been ratified and confirmed by various subsequent charters and Acts of Parliament, more particularly by one from John, Earl, and subsequently Duke of Lauderdale K.G. lord high commissioner of Scotland, dated 1670, in which all former grants in favour of the burgh are acknowledged. In 1632 Musselburgh was erected into a royal burgh by charter under the great seal, an act which excited the jealousy of the magistrates of Edinburgh, who contrived to obtain a reduction of the charter in the same year. The burgh is, however, still represented on the convention of royal burghs, founded in 1150. Musselburgh is governed by a provost, three bailies, a treasurer and seven councillors, elected according to the provisions of the Burgh Reform Act. Their jurisdiction extends two and a half miles along the shore, from the Magdalen bridge rivulet on the west to Ravenshaugh streamlet on the east, which at that locality is the boundary with Haddingtonshire; but they possess no jurisdiction over Inveresk village, which is included within the county. Musselburgh, under the "Representation of the People Act, 1918," is, for parliamentary purposes, included in the East division of Edinburgh. There are Established, United Free and Roman Catholic churches. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St. Peter, and the Rev. Thomas Hannan M.A. of Glasgow University, has been rector since 1891; there is also a Congregational chapel. The Town House, which occupies an angle in the High street, is a substantial edifice, including an Assembly room, council chamber, offices for the town clerk, town chamberlain, burgh surveyor, and quarters for the constabulary. Attached to the building is a tower with a slated spire of quaint Flemish design, and containing the mechanism of a clock, presented to the town by the Dutch States in 1496, and still preserved, though the clock has been replaced since 1902 by a new one. Connected with the Town House is the gaol, said to have been erected about 1590, from the materials of the ruinous chapel of Loretto; it has recently been reconstructed to meet modern prison requirements. The Town Cross, which stands opposite the municipal offices, consists of a square base, supporting a disused pant or basin, from the centre of which rises a stone pillar surmounted by the figure of a lion bearing a shield with the borough arms, az. three anchors, in fess, or, and as many mussels, two in chief, and one in base, ppr. A drinking fountain was erected in 1895, at the top of High street, at a cost of over £500, by Mr. David T. Wright, merchant, of Riddle's close, Leith, and a native of Musselburgh, who has presented it to the town; the fountain, which stands on a circular base of two steps, is an octagonal structure in the Renaissance style, four of the sides having arched recesses with basins of grey granite; it is finished above with a frieze and cornice, and a ribbed ogee shaped dome, and also bears the arms of the town, of the Regent Randolph, Earl of Moray, and those of the donor, and another shield, charged with the emblem of St. Michael: the total height is 18 feet. In the same street, and opposite the fountain, is the memorial erected to David Macbeth Moir, the celebrated poet and litterateur, best known by his contributions to "Blackwood's Magazine," under the name of "Delta"; he was born here 5 Jan. 1798: died 6 July, 1851, and was buried at Inveresk. There are branches here of the Royal Bank of Scotland, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Ltd. and the National Bank of Scotland Limited. The manufactories here include fishing net works, paper mills and a steel wire manufactory. Besides these industries there are two large breweries, maltings and seed crushing works, and the manufacture of confectionery, potteryware, salt, skin mats, and boat building are all carried on. There are several literary, benevolent and religious societies; and golf, bowling, cycling, tennis, cricket and football clubs. The Infectious Diseases Hospital was opened 17th May, 1907, at a cost of about £3,000, and consists of six wards in three pavilions.

The extensive common, known as Musselburgh Links, has long been in deserved repute as a golfing ground, and the Royal Musselburgh Golf Club have erected clubhouses adjoining it. His late Majesty King Edward VII. when Prince of Wales, and H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught K.G. have both played on these links. The Royal Company of Archers also come here once a year to compete for the Musselburgh silver arrow. This competition is said to have been instituted in the 16th century, and is an event of great local interest. Attached to the arrow are many gold and silver medals, added by successive winners, and it is annually returned to the town that it may again be offered for competition. The Edinburgh race meeting is also held here annually, and the races of the Royal Caledonian Hunt at intervals of three years. A race meeting and horse and cattle show is also held annually on fair day, in August. Cromwell, before the battle of Dunbar, 3 Sept. 1650, quartered his infantry on Musselburgh Links, his own tent being pitched on an elevated spot nearly opposite Linkfield House, and his cavalry quartered at Inveresk. Skirting Musselburgh Links on the south are many attractive residences, and at the eastern extremity is the suburb of Levenhall, now a popular seaside resort. The Romans, after their invasion of Britain, established themselves in this locality, planting a colonia upon the rising ground at Inveresk. Where the church now stands an altar was erected to Apollo, various buildings once stood in the adjacent grounds of Inveresk House, and towards the close of the last century the remains of a Roman villa were discovered here. Musselburgh, in the Saxon chronicle, is mentioned as the "Eskmuthe" of the Northumbrians, whose territory extended from the Humber to the Forth, and this name is the exact equivalent of Inveresk, i.e., mouth of Esk, the present name of the parish. In the earliest Scottish records mention is made of the two manors of Little Inveresk and Great Inveresk. Malcolm III. surnamed Ceanmor or Canmore (1058-93), and his consort, Queen Margaret, gifted the manor of Little Inveresk to the monks of Dunfermline, and their son, David I. confirmed this, and gave in addition Greater Inveresk, which included the burgh and port of Musselburgh. In 1206 the Scottish nobles assembled at Musselburgh to take the oath of fidelity to Alexander II., infant son of William the Lion. Until the Reformation it continued a burgh of regality, belonging to Dunfermline Abbey; Lord Maitland, of Thirlstane, and lord chancellor of Scotland, then became the Superior, and the burgh still pays a small annual sum in name of feu duty to the Duke of Buccleuch, whose ancestress, Anne, Duchess of Monmouth, acquired rights thereto about the beginning of the 18th century. The latest attempt to extort feudal homage from the magistrates, as representing the townspeople, in 1702, at the instance of Sir Robert Dickson, of Smeaton, was successfully resisted upon the ground that the charters granted to the burgh freed them of any such acknowledgments. Her Majesty Queen Victoria, His late Majesty King Edward VII. when Prince of Wales and the Duke of Connaught have at different times honoured Musselburgh with their presence. The area of the burgh is 785 acres; rateable value, 1920, £60,653; the population in 1901 was 11,711, and in 1911, 15,938. The population of the Wards in 1911 was:—No. 1, 3,236; No. 2, 3,190; No. 3, 4,670; No. 4, 4,838. Population of North Esk ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 9,902. The population of the parliamentary borough in 1911 was 15,486. The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1921 was 8,081

SCHOOLS.

Loretto School. At the east end of Musselburgh, near the Links, are the scattered buildings and fields belonging to the now well-known school of Loretto, which is the property of the trustees of the late Dr. H. H. Almond, late head master. The school house occupies the site of a monastery, originally an offshoot from the castle of Our Lady of Loretto in Italy, and became a cell to the abbey of Dunfermline during the 12th century; subsequently the property fell into the hands of the Maitland family, Earls of Lauderdale, whose monogram may still be seen over the door of an old vault, and it was afterwards bought by the celebrated Lord Clive, who erected a considerable part of the present building. In 1829 it was converted into a preparatory school by the late Rev. Dr. Langhorne, but gradually changed its type, and eventually took rank as a public school, being especially noted for its proficiency in athletic games and choral singing. There are one or two musical scholarships up to 80 guineas a year and foundationerships for the sons of gentlemen in need of such help, but no competitive scholarships. Prizes are given for absolute, not relative merit. The school choir is probably the most powerful in Scotland, and is now heard to advantage in the beautiful chapel, erected in 1893 by past and present scholars, from designs by Mr. John Honeyman R.S.A. and containing a fine organ. The chapel, with the surrounding ground and approaches, was conveyed to trustees in May, 1893. There are now (1921) 160 boys, all boarders. Allan R. Smith M.A.Oxon. head master; F. M. Marzials M.A. master of science side; Rev. C. W. Wordsworth M.A. master of junior school; Rev. E. W. Clarke M.A., W. Cardwell B.A., P. J. L. Smith M.A., R. Waterhouse L.R.C.M., C. T. Horton B.A., H. E. M. Icely B.A., S. King B.A., A. O. NETHER LIBERTON, see EDINBURGH SECTION.

NEWBATTLE is a parish and village in Dalkeith poor combination and small debt court district; the village is situated about a mile to the south of Dalkeith, and is watered by the South Esk. NEWTON GRANGE is a considerable village in this parish, with a station on the North British railway. The parish church is a plain building, but several of the windows are stained. In 1895 it was enlarged and restored, when an ancient aisle, for many years walled up, was re-opened, and named "Lord Ancrum's aisle," as a memorial to Walter William Schomberg (Kerr), Earl of Ancrum, who died 16 June, 1892. Robert Leighton, afterwards Bishop of Dunblane and Archbishop of Glasgow, was minister of Newbattle from 1641 to 1652, and the pulpit in which he preached is still in use. In the church is a mural tablet erected in memory of the archbishop, who died 1 Feb. 1684. The parish abounds in valuable coal mines, worked by the Lothian Coal Co. Limited. Newbattle Abbey, the property of the Marquess of Lothian D.L. who is also Baron Ker of Newbattle, but now (1921) unoccupied, occupies part of the site of the ancient Cistercian abbey, and it is surrounded by grounds containing some of the oldest and largest trees in the kingdom, including a beech of extraordinary dimensions. The mansion has a collection of valuable paintings, both ancient and modern. The abbey of Newbattle, or Newbotle, was founded in 1140 by David I. for the monks of the Cistercian order. The buildings were burnt by Richard II. of England in 1385, and again by the Earl of Hertford in 1544. The architecture is chiefly Early English, and has been assigned to the middle of the 13th century. The foundations of the Abbey church, accidentally discovered, have now been disclosed throughout, and show that it consisted of a long nave with aisles, choir and a central tower. In 1892 some workmen in digging came upon the foundations of the north transept and side chapels; the excavations were continued in 1893 and 1894, and revealed the bases of piers, in line with those now remaining in the crypt, and connecting them with the south transept. An immense open chimney (12 ft. 6 in. by 6 ft.) was also discovered. The piers of the crypt are octagonal, the plain shafts measuring 3 ft. 6 in. in height and carrying circular arches; some finely carved bosses were also found, one of which is placed in the crypt, which, so far as at present opened, is 100 feet long by 27 ft. 7 in. wide. The Great Hall and the Chapter house have also been examined, and from the east end of the church towards the south the foundations of other buildings were met with, including a portion of the stair from the dorter (dormitory) and an entrance to the cloisters; the walls are of ashlar, and on the south of this entrance was a groined chamber with the bases of four columns, and, extending east and west, a stone built arched culvert of ashlar work; the line of the walls and position of the piers of the church have been carefully marked with brown glazed fire-clay edging, specially made. In course of the work a number of stone coffins were found, principally outside the choir and north transept, and one of polished stone near the entrance to the church from the cloisters. The area of the parish comprises 5,184 acres; rateable value, £28,618; the population in 1901 was 4,557, and in 1911, 6,061, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 5,329.

EASTHOUSES is a village in the parish.

A portion of this parish, with an estimated population of 80, was transferred to Borthwick by an Order of the Secretary for Scotland, dated Sept. 18, 1895.

PATHHEAD (or Pathhead Ford) is a considerable village in the parish of Crichton, and in Dalkeith small debt court district, 11 miles south-south-east from Edinburgh, 5 south from Dalkeith station on the North British railway and 3 north-west from Fala; it is situated on both sides of the Lauder, the great south country and London road passing through it. The principal street is broad and straight, and the houses, which are mostly of one storey, are well built. The surrounding country abounds in beautiful scenery. The population in 1911 was 386.

PENICUIK is a parish and police burgh, on the borders of Peeblesshire, in Peebles poor combination; the parish is from 11 to 12 miles in length and 6 in breadth, and is watered throughout by the North Esk. The town, seated on high land, on the north bank of the North Esk, and on the road from Edinburgh to Peebles, is about 9 miles south-west from the former, 13 north from the latter and 9 south-south-west from Dalkeith, and has three stations on the North British railway—one in the town, the terminus of the Penicuik line, and another at Esk Bridge (half a mile north-east) on the same section, and one on the Peebles branch about a mile east of the town. Along its northern border the parish includes a considerable part of the Pentland Hills, on which are pastured numerous flocks of sheep. The southern portion is more level, and the soil is various, but dairy farming is carried on to a considerable extent on several of the farms. The town is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. There is an Established church and three United Free churches. The Episcopal church of St. James the Less, consecrated in 1885, will seat 250 persons: the incumbency, net yearly value £131, has been held since 1916 by the Rev. Arthur Smythe Hichens B.D., M.A. of Magdalen College, Oxford; there is also a Catholic church. The principal industry is the manufacture of paper, carried on at Valleyfield Mills by Messrs. A. Cowan and Sons Limited, and at Esk Mills by Messrs. J. Brown and Co. Ltd. At Valleyfield Mills, the largest in this part of the country, both printing and writing papers are manufactured. In the beginning of the last century these mills were acquired by Government for the reception of 5,000 French prisoners of war, of whom 300 died here and were buried in the grounds, and in 1860 a handsome monument was erected to their memory, near the spot, by some of the inhabitants. A list of these deceased exiles can be referred to in the Cowan Institute. The Esk Mills, the first mills in Scotland devoted to the manufacture of cottons, were afterwards used as cotton and paper mills, but are now paper mills only. There is abundance of coal and limestone, the latter occasionally so hard as to admit of a fine polish, and containing a variety of petrifications. Whinstone and freestone are also plentiful, and in Carlope Hill lead and iron ore have been discovered. Ironstone mining was at one time an important industry. The Cowan Institute, in the High street, was erected in 1894 by the late Alexander Cowan, at a cost of £4,500, and additions have since been made at a further cost of £2,500. The building contains a free reference and circulating library of 4,000 volumes, reading and billiard rooms with three tables, games room, baths, a public hall and a gymnasium. A small museum has also been added, to which several of the members and their friends have contributed. There are 689 members. "Habbies Howe" is a romantic glen here, and there is another of the same name in the adjoining parish of Glencorse. There are several chalybeate and petrifying springs in this district, and on the banks of the North Esk, near Spittal Hill, is a well, the waters of which have a bitter taste, and are drunk by the country people for bowel complaints. In the locality are several ruined castles and vestiges of encampments. Penicuik House, built about 1761 by Sir James Clerk, 3rd bart. (d. 1782), is now the residence of Capt. Sir George James Robert Clerk D.L., J.P. The original mansion was burned down in 1899, and the present house was erected out of the former stables: south of the house is an obelisk erected to Allan Ramsay, the poet, who frequently resided here, and died 7 Jan. 1758, and the grounds of New Hall, another mansion in the parish, are supposed to be the scene of his fine pastoral comedy, "The Gentle Shepherd," published in 1728. The area comprises 19,429 acres; rateable value, £46,603; the population in 1911 was 5,205, viz.: police burgh, 2,736; landward, 2,469; and in the ecclesiastical parish, 4,700.

A portion from Lasswade parish, with population of 466, was transferred to Penicuik March 14, 1904.

KIRKHILL is a village immediately to the east of the burgh of Penicuik.

RATHO is a parish and village, in the small debt court district of Edinburgh; the parish is about 4 miles long and 3 broad, and lies midway between the Pentland Hills and the Firth of Forth; it is bounded on the north and north-west by Kirkliston, on the north by Kirkliston and Corstorphine, south-east by Currie, and south-west by Kirknewton; the village is about 8 miles west-by-south from Edinburgh, and has a junction station on the Edinburgh and Glasgow section of the North British railway. The country in the eastern part of the parish is flat, and the soil fertile, but the ground rises gradually towards the south. The parish church, originally erected in the 12th century and restored in the 17th and again in the earlier part of the last century, is an irregular structure, incorporating work of each of these periods, but is not without features of interest. The Roman Catholic church was erected in 1883. The Episcopal church is dedicated to St. Mary, and the Rev. Samuel Albert Smith M.A. of Hertford College, Oxford, has been rector since 1912; there is also a Baptist chapel. Dalmahoy, the property of the Earl of Morton, and Hatton House, formerly belonging to the Maitlands, Earls of Lauderdale, but now the property of William Whitelaw esq. are both in this parish. Hatton is one of the oldest and most substantially built houses in Scotland, and its massive walls contain hiding places used in the old troublous times. William Wilkie D.D. a poet, sometimes called the "Scottish Homer," and formerly professor of philosophy at St. Andrews, was born here, or at Dalmeny, 5 Oct. 1721. Robert Liston F.R.S. an eminent surgeon, is said to have been born here, 28 Oct. 1794, but Ecclesmachan, co. Linlithgow, has also been assigned as his birthplace. Sir W. Fettes is also believed to have been a native of this parish. There are vestiges of two Danish camps, one on Kaimes Hill, and the other on South Platt Hill. The Earl of Morton is the principal landowner. The area comprises 6,142 acres; rateable value, £9,933; the population in 1911 was 1,883.

ROSLIN is a small village and quoad sacra parish formed from the civil parishes of Lasswade and Penicuik, in Dalkeith small debt court district, 7 miles south from Edinburgh, 2½ south-west from Lasswade and 2 south-west from Loanhead, with three stations, one on the Edinburgh to Glencorse branch of the North British railway, another called Rosslyn Castle on the Edinburgh to Penicuik branch of the same railway, and a third, Rosslynlee, on the Dolphinton and Peebles line of the same system, but on the other side of the valley. Rosebank House is the seat of Major George Frederick Villiers, and Woodhouselee of Charles Somerville esq. The inhabitants are chiefly occupied in agricultural pursuits, but there are also gunpowder mills and extensive carpet works. Rosslyn chapel, which stands on an eminence at the east end of the village, overlooking the remains of the castle and the romantic valley of the Esk, was founded in 1446, by William St. Clair, or Sinclair, 3rd Earl of Orkney of that family, as a Collegiate church, and dedicated to St. Matthew the Apostle. It was, however, left incomplete, and the existing structure represents only the eastern arm of the projected building, the nave and transepts of which, uncovered in 1881, were found to have been carried nearly to the floor level. At the period of the Revolution, the chapel was attacked, 11 Dec. 1688, by a fanatical mob, who destroyed much of the external ornament, including the numerous figures of apostles and martyrs which adorned the canopied niches of the exterior: the fabric is, nevertheless, in a singularly perfect condition, and the judicious restorations and repairs carried out by the later Earls of Rosslyn have to a large extent removed the traces of its former maltreatment. It consists of a lofty choir with clerestory, a lady chapel beyond, and continuous aisles, supported by bold pinnacled buttresses; behind which are tall square pinnacles, rising from the aisle wall, and carrying the flying supports of the choir. Architecturally, this famous edifice is confessedly unique as an example of the Gothic style, for it combines the massive character of Norman work with even more than the elaborate and profuse ornamentation which distinguishes that of the Tudor period. The choir and aisles are divided by arcades having seven clustered piers on either side; two others standing in the centre at the east end: the clerestory has five large windows on either side, and the lofty roof is divided into as many compartments by ribs springing from the arcade below; the lady chapel, only 15 feet in height, opens by arches to the side aisles, and has a groined roof of florid design. One of the most interesting and striking features of the interior is the celebrated "Prentice's pillar," a clustered pier, wreathed round diagonally with bands of varied and finely sculptured foliage, and several of the arches bear inscriptions or symbolical figures. Beneath the east end is the lower chapel, erected by the Lady Elizabeth Douglas, wife of John (Stewart), Earl of Buchan; it is reached by a descent of 24 steps at the south-east angle; it is 36 feet long, 14 wide, and has a height of about 15 feet: the groined vaulting displays the arms of St. Clair —arg. a cross engrailed, sa.—and at the east wall is an altar. In the north aisle is a monument to George (Sinclair), 4th Earl of Caithness, and hereditary justiciar of Caithness, who died at Edinburgh 9 Sept. 1582; on the floor of the same aisle is a large flat stone, incised with the figure of a man in armour, his feet on a greyhound, and on each side of his head a small shield, charged with a rampant lion; this stone is supposed to indicate the burial place of Sir William St. Clair, of Rosslyn, an ancestor of the founder, who lived during the early part of the 14th century; there is also on the north side a large slab said to cover the entrance to the vault of the Sinclairs, lords of Rosslyn, ten of whom, previous to 1690, were here interred, and according to the ancient custom of the family, in complete armour and without any coffin, a traditional practice alluded to by Sir Walter Scott in his "Lay of the Last Minstrel." James, 3rd Earl of Rosslyn in 1861-2, effected a considerable restoration of the chapel, and Robert, 4th and late Earl, in 1879, erected a new baptistery with organ loft over, from designs by Mr. A. Kerr, architect, of Edinburgh, enclosing it with screen work and providing a font; he also renewed a number of the destroyed figures formerly adorning the interior, and filled many of the windows with stained glass, including the east window, a memorial to his sister, Harriet Elizabeth, wife of George Herbert, Count Munster of Dernburg, and German ambassador to England; she died at Dernburg, Hanover, 29 Nov. 1867. In the burial ground attached to the chapel is a memorial of various coloured stone, erected in 1893 by his countess, at a cost of £1,000, to Robert Francis, 4th and late Earl of Rosslyn, who died in 1890; the monument, 19 feet in height, includes six figures emblematical of certain Christian virtues, and is surmounted by a cross. The chaplaincy has been held since 1914 by the Rev. Ernest Frederick Morison D.D. of Lincoln College, Oxford, who is also chaplain to the barracks, Glencorse. Rosslyn Castle, now a ruin, stands on a lofty and almost isolated cliff, overhanging the wooded and picturesque glen through which flows the river Esk. It is believed to have been originally erected by one of the Norman St. Clairs, an adherent of the Conqueror in the 12th century, but in 1447 was partly destroyed by fire, and afterwards rebuilt by William St. Clair, the founder of the intended collegiate church: in Sept. 1544, it was again burnt by an English force, under the command of Sir Edward (Seymour), 1st Earl of Hertford, but must have been subsequently repaired, for in 1650, when Cromwell crossed the Tweed (22 July) with an army of 11,000 men, it was held for the Royal cause by commission from Charles II. who had previously landed in Scotland, June 23rd. After the battle of Dunbar (3 Sept.), in which the Scots, under Gen. David Leslie, afterwards Baron Newark, were signally defeated, Gen. Monk invested Rosslyn Castle, which shortly surrendered and was plundered by the Roundheads, and in 1688 it was much injured by the same mob that attacked the chapel; the ruins, now inconsiderable, are reached by a bridge thrown across a deep ravine; some fragments of the north side of the fortress, with walls 9 feet thick, are standing, and to the south is a mansion of the early 17th century, erected on the site of part of the ancient structure, which includes several vaulted chambers; the dining room of this has a panelled ceiling, with ornamental work in plaster, enclosing shields of arms of the St. Clair family, and over the principal entrance are the initials S.W.S. 1622. Near the castle are the remains of the ancient chapel and cemetery of the village, close to which is a copious spring of excellent water called St. Matthew's well. Omnibuses ply during the summer from Edinburgh, and the walk by the valley of the Esk to Hawthornden is exceedingly picturesque. The population in 1911 was 1,817, including 433 inmates and 106 officials and their families in the Midlothian and Peebles District Mental Hospital.

STOW is an extensive parish and village, in the southern extremity of the county, nearly 12 mile in length and 8 broad; it is in Dalkeith poor combination and small debt court district. The village is 21 miles south-east from Edinburgh and has a station on the North British railway. The village is well lighted with gas, supplied by the Stow Gaslight Company. An augmented water supply has been provided from Sell Moor hill, at a cost of over £1,500, the villages of Stow and Killochyett having been constituted a special district alike for water supply, drainage and lighting. There are Established and United Free churches. The Town Hall is in part occupied by a Literary Institute and library with reading and news rooms, at present (1921) closed, and also includes a large room for lectures and public meetings. There is a woollen manufactory here. Caitha is a small hamlet in this parish, 4 miles south-by-west from Stow village and near the Bowland station on the North British railway. Fountainhall is also a hamlet in this parish, about 4 miles north-north-west from Stow village, with a station on the North British railway. Bowland is the residence of William Ramsay esq. J.P. and Torsonce House, of Miss Milroy. The area comprises 26,139 acres; rateable value, £14,457; the population in 1911 was 1,317 in the civil and 1,381 in the ecclesiastical parish, including 34 in Selkirkshire.

The portions of Hangingshaw and Kirklands farms, including the hamlet of Stagebank, within the parish of Stow, were transferred to Heriot, for all purposes, Dec. 6, 1898, by the Secretary for Scotland's Order, No. 34, dated Dec. 17, 1897.

TEMPLE is a parish and village, in Dalkeith poor combination and small debt court district; the parish is bounded on the east by Borthwick, on the south by Heriot, on the west by Eddleston and Penicuik, and on the north by Carrington. The village, situated on rising ground on the banks of the Gladhouse water, which falls into the South Esk, is about 10 miles south from Edinburgh and 3 miles from Gorebridge (the nearest) station on the North British railway. The land is chiefly hilly, but contains a good deal of moor and pasture land. The old church, an edifice in the Gothic style and now in ruins, was founded by King David I. for the Knights Templars; the new church, also in the Gothic style, was built in 1830. Rosebery House is the seat of the Right Hon. the Earl of Rosebery K.G., K.T. (Lord Lieut.), who with Lady Evelyn Henrietta Dundas is the principal landowner. The area comprises 13,630 acres; rateable value, £19,606; the population in 1911 was 363.

FIFESHIRE

FESHIRE is an extensive and populous maritime county in e east of Scotland; it is a peninsula, having the Firth of rth on the south, the North Sea on the east, and the rth of Tay on the north, which river separates it from rfarshire and Perthshire. Its western border is very egular; commencing at Newburgh, on the Tay, it follows at of Perthshire south to near Auchtermuchty, turning west far as Damhead, whence it extends with Kinross south to e Leven and west nearly as far as Rumbling Brig, when e Perthshire border again commences and is continued uthwards to the Firth of Forth at Torry. The coast line about 80 miles in extent; the breadth from its eastern ex to its western point, where is intersects Kinross and rth, is about 35 miles, and a line direct south from Newrt on the Tay to Earlsferry is about 17 miles, and one from ewburgh to Kinghorn 20 miles; towards the west, however om Burntisland to the verge of Kinross-shire), it is not re than 10 miles across; the extreme length, from northst to south-west, in a curved line, is fully 40 miles. The gularity of its figure is much interrupted by the intrusion Kinross-shire, which creates a considerable indentation, not r from its centre, on the west. The area comprises 322,844 res of land and 1,624 of water. In regard to size, this unty is sixteenth, and in population the seventh. In 1901 e population was 218,840, and in 1911, 267,739, viz.: males, 2,133; females, 135,606; the inhabited houses being in 1901, 241; uninhabited, 3,868; building, 585; and in 1911, inbited, 58,781; uninhabited, 4,305 and building, 478.

Early History.—At an early period the district of Fyfe cluded Kinross-shire, Clackmannanshire, and part of the unties of Perth and Stirling; it was then designated Ross, term signifying a peninsula, and seems to have been under e general jurisdiction. This large territory has long since n dismembered—Clackmannan was first taken from it, and xt Kinross was erected into a distinct shire. The origin of name "Fife" has much troubled etymologists, nor has a isfactory conclusion ever been arrived at upon the subject. e monkish chroniclers assume its derivation from one Fyfus, a hero of whom nothing more appears to be known, n that he was a chieftain who performed some great exits, and did the country essential service in war. The cient history of Fife is enveloped in nearly similar obscurity. original possessors were the Celts, and their invaders the mans; and towards the close of the 9th century the King the Scots obtained a paramount sway over the district. tween this period and the 11th century the country was in great measure either the property or under the jurisdiction a succession of "thanes" of the title of Macduff; one of se, Duncan Maeduff, was created Earl of Fife by Malcolm about 1057; and from this time till the family honours e merged by the marriage of female heirs or extinction in er families, and finally lost by forfeiture in 1424, the Earls Fife were amongst the most influential of the Scottish rage. After a lapse of more than three centuries, the cient title of Earl of Fife was revived as an Irish peerage, 1759, in the person of William Duff, Lord Braco of Kilde, who, according to his genealogists, derived his descent m the original earls. The late Duke of Fife, who was sed to a dukedom in 1889, was the lineal descendant of s person, and inherited the title and privileges—the estates ng situated principally in Aberdeenshire and Banffshire.

Soil, Surface and Climate.—The peninsula of Fife was ginally almost an entire forest, full of swamps, and while this condition was the haunt of wild beasts, especially me of a monstrous size; it is understood that such animals e not extirpated in the reign of James V. who, like his efathers, often made Fife the scene of his hunting expediis. In this county are found four kinds of soil, differing siderably in quality, and generally occupying distinct tracts the country. Along the braes facing the Firth of Forth composition of the land is for the most part excellent, ng deep rich loam, good clay, and gravel mixed with my earth, based chiefly on whin rock, and produces good ps of wheat, barley, oats, beans, turnips and potatoes; th from the waving line which abounds this territory to base of the hills on the south side of the vale of Fife, from St. Andrews on the east to the western parts of the nty, the soil is in general vastly inferior—a great proion being cold, poor and very wet clay; the tract of the owe of Fife," which comprises both sides of the river n as far as Cupar, is very productive; it consists of loam, tly deep and moist, and partly light and dry, with also considerable proportion of moor and moss; in the hilly rict, from the vale to the river Tay, the land is uniformly the best description, having much rich loam, clay and gravel. The peninsula of Fife exhibits on its surface a series of vales, stretching from west to east parallel with the sea on each side, and of greater or less dimensions; these vales, which from the undulating character of the country are in some places not so distinct as in others, are the basins of different small streams, which merge either in the Firth of Forth or St. Andrew's Bay. Extending in a north-easterly direction to the Tay, the Ochil Hills penetrate the county, forming a ridge of moderate elevation, upon which many cattle and sheep are pastured. The other eminences of greatest altitude in Fifeshire are Kellie Law, 800 feet; Norman's Law, 850; Largo Law, 965; East Lomond Hill, 1,470; and West Lomond Hill, 1,713 feet above the level of the sea. The climate is, perhaps, as genial and salubrious as that of other districts more to the south; the fogs, which formerly were continually exhaling from the lochs and marshes, have been effectually dissipated by the drainage of the damp lands, and the general spread of cultivation. Altogether Fife is a most important district; its agricultural prosperity and capabilities, its manufactures, its fisheries, and its mineral treasures, its burghs, seaports, and fine harbours, and its domestic and foreign commerce, form a combination of advantages that most favourably distinguish this shire.

The chief crops, as appears from the "Agricultural Statistics of Scotland, 1920," were oats, 47,629 acres; barley, including bere, 18,031; wheat, 10,894; beans (to be harvested as corn), 292; rye, 1,173; total of corn crops, 78,549; bare fallow, 512; turnips and swedes, 22,268 acres; potatoes, 18,361; mangolds, 28; cabbage, 111; rape, 813; vetches, tares, beans, mashlum &c. 507; hay from rye-grass and other rotation grasses and clover, 27,425 acres; pasture (not for hay), 26,830 acres; small fruit, 199 acres. The total area of land is 322,844 acres, of which 19,868 are mountain and heath land, used for grazing; permanent grass, 68,521; arable land, 176,659.

AGRICULTURAL HOLDINGS:—Above 1 and not exceeding 5 acres, 392; above 5 and not exceeding 15 acres, 326; above 15 and not exceeding 30 acres, 165; above 30 and not exceeding 50 acres, 129; above 50 and not exceeding 75 acres, 131; above 75 and not exceeding 100 acres, 121; above 100 and not exceeding 150 acres, 229; above 150 and not exceeding 300 acres, 454; above 300 acres, 212; total, 2,159.

The live stock in 1920 comprised 6,848 horse used solely for agriculture and brood mares; stallions, 32; unbroken horses, one year and above, 1,952; under one year, 669; cows in milk, 9,413; in calf, but not in milk, 1,159; heifers in calf, 1,306; bulls, 587; other cattle, two years and above, 12,615; one year and under two, 10,015; under one year, 5,889; ewes kept for breeding, 30,250; rams, 1,057; other sheep, one year and above, 11,653; under one year, 39,254; sows kept for breeding, 958; boars, 115; other pigs, 5,017.

Produce and Manufactures.—The shire is fortunate in possessing inexhaustible mines of coal, with sandstone, limestone and some ironstone. Coal and lime are wrought only in the southern division of the county, between the two extremities, and some miles inland; within this district there are as extensive lime and coal works as can be seen in Scotland. In 1919, 7,069,166 tons of coal were produced, valued at £10,714,918 (this amount included Kinross-shire) (88,528 tons of coal was used in 1919 in the manufacture of 35,871 tons of coke from gas works); 70,434 tons of clay; 12,801 tons of iron ore; gravel and sand, 888 tons; 59,908 tons of limestone; igneous rocks, 206,559 tons. The sandstone found in this part is of good quality; from its beauty it is exported to Edinburgh, where some of the finest edifices have been built with it. In 1919, 752 tons were raised. Marl is abundant in some places, so likewise is fine clay, for the composition of bricks, tiles and pottery. From the possession of the above and the exuberant produce of corn and cattle, it is a common saying among the people of Fife that their county could support itself better, without the aid of imported articles, than any other district in Scotland. Besides supplying home consumption, it has a very large export trade in corn, potatoes, pigs, black cattle, lime, coal and sandstone—not to mention that of its manufactured goods. Lead has been discovered in the western Lomond, and mines of this ore have been profitably worked in the parish of Kemback; pebbles, much admired for the high polish of which they are susceptible, have been found in different places, with agates and rubies of fine water. The staple manufacture of Fife is linen goods, in the weaving of which many towns, villages and hamlets are busily employed without intermission; fine diapers and shirtings and the most elegant table linen are produced from the looms of this county; of this trade Dunfermline and Kirkcaldy are the principal seats; while the yarns, composed of foreign flax, are mostly spun and bleached on the Leven and in the adjacent places. Iron founding and machine making are prosecuted with success at several places, and the manufacture of fishing nets, fire-clay and terra cotta goods and linoleums and floor cloths are likewise branches of importance.

The fisheries are also a source of wealth to this county, shoals of herrings during the spawning season visiting its coast, in the capturing and curing of which many of the population are employed. Turbot, soles, plaice, cod, haddock and ling are also found in abundance, the three first-named being taken in the shallow waters on the east coast. The fishing industry is centred at Kirkcaldy, under which place full particulars will be found.

The number of fishing boats registered at the ports on December 31, 1918, was:—Burntisland, 29, of 27 tons; Kirkcaldy, 218, of 3,128 tons, and 315 at Methill, of 4,799 tonnage.

The number of sailing and steam vessels registered on December 31, 1919, at the port of Kirkwall was 30, of 1,207 tonnage.

Rivers and Railways.—Exclusive of the Forth and the Tay, the county is watered by several streams—none of which, however, are entitled to the denomination of river, except the Eden and the Leven, which both abound with excellent salmon; the first rises in the Lomonds and flows through the town of Cupar, and debouches at Guardbridge in St. Andrew's Bay; the Leven rises from a loch of the same name in Kinross-shire, passes eastward through the centre part of the county and reaches the Firth of Forth at the town of Leven. Fife cannot boast of many lakes, and those that it does possess are but of small extent, the principal being Lindores, Kilconquhar, Lochgelly, Camilla and Fitty lochs. The North British railway, branching at Alloa to the east and north-east, enters the county with the former branch at Oakley and proceeds to Dunfermline, whence there are branches north to Saline, Cowdenbeath and Kelty, and thence into Kinross, and south to Inverkeithing and North Queensferry; the main line continues through Lochgelly to Thornton, where a branch leaves it north to Markinch (with a branch to Leslie), Ladybank and Newburgh, where it turns westward to Moncrieff and Perth; from Thornton there are two branches southward, one turning to the west runs through Dysart and Kirkcaldy to Burntisland, and the other sweeping eastward passes through Wemyss and Buckhaven to Methil, opposite to Leven. The main line continues by Cameron Bridge, through the coast towns of Leven, Largo, Pittenweem and Crail, to St. Andrews; from this latter city the line passes through Leuchars Junction to the Tay Bridge, for Dundee, with a loop line to Leuchars, Tayport, Newport and the Bridge; the north-eastern branch after leaving Alloa passing through Kinross-shire and Auchtermuchty, and crossing the Newburgh branch at Ladybank, continues through Cupar to Leuchars Junction, where it joins the Tay Bridge line.

Divisions, Representation &c.—This county forms a sheriffdom, under one sheriff depute; but being divided into an eastern and a western district, each is placed under the jurisdiction of a sheriff substitute; in these two districts are comprehended the four sub-divisions of St. Andrews, Cupar, Dunfermline and Kirkcaldy. It has politically and ecclesiastically attached to it the islands of Inchcolm, Inchkeith and May, in the Firth of Forth. Fifeshire comprises 60 civil parishes and 84 complete and 3 parts of ecclesiastical parishes; it contains 18 Royal burghs (out of the 70 contained in all Scotland). The shire formerly returned but one representative, but is now separated into the Eastern and Western divisions, each of which sends a member. The parliamentary constituency for 1919 was:—Eastern Division, 34,349; Western Division, 35,897.

ABBOTSHALL, see KIRKCALDY.

ABDIE is a parish on the south shore of the Firth of Tay, extends 3½ miles from north to south by 3 broad, and is bounded on the east by Dunbog and Monimail, south and west by Collessie and Newburgh; it lies amongst the Ochil Hills; its kirktown being 2 miles south-east of Newburgh. The hamlets of Mount Pleasant, Glenburnie, Grange and Lindores are in this parish, and also the Loch of Lindores, a sheet of water covering 70 acres. The Newburgh and North Fife Railway Co. has a station at LINDORES between Newburgh and St. Fort stations. There are quarries of whinstone, from which are exported large quantities of paving stones. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late Canon Wilson, George Aitken esq. the trustees of the late Frederick Lewis Maitland esq. and the Marquess of Zetland K.T., P.C. The area comprises 4,835 acres; rateable value, £8,391; population in 1911, 647, of which 230 are in Newburgh burgh; population of ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 663.

Mount Pleasant is now included in the burgh of Newburgh for municipal purposes, and the names of residents are given with that town.

ABERDOUR

ABERDOUR is a parish and a village, seaport and burgh of barony, on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, extending 3½ miles from north to south by the same in breadth, 12 miles north-west from Edinburgh (across the Firth of Forth), 9 south-west from Kirkcaldy, 8 south-east from Dunfermline and 3 west from Burntisland, and within the Parliamentary division of West Fife. There is a station here on the North British railway, opened in 1890, and connecting Inverkeithing and Burntisland. Burntisland parish bounds it on the east, Auchentool and Beath on the north and Dalgetty on the west. The small island of Inch-Colm, about 1½ miles from the coast, belongs to the parish. A small ridge of hills runs from east to west. Aberdour is a place of considerable antiquity, and belonged in the 12th century to the family of Dupont, from whom it passed to the Mortimers by marriage, afterwards to the Douglasses, one of whom, in 1457, was created Lord Aberdour and Earl of Morton, and whose castle, which stood close to the village, was burnt down by accident in 1745 while occupied by a detachment of troops. The Mortimers appear to have bestowed Wester Aberdour upon the Abbey of Inch-Colm, and it was made a burgh of barony under the abbot in 1500: Easter Aberdour, which was retained by the family, being made a burgh of barony in 1543. Aberdour is a favourite place of resort during the summer season, there being good bathing and the village having a warm aspect. Ready access is obtained by steam vessels and other means of conveyance from the opposite shore. Gas is supplied by the Cowdenbeath Gas Co. Limited. The ruins of the church, dating from before 1178, lie to the south-east of the castle, and consist of chancel, nave with south aisle of three bays, and porch, the two latter having been added about the end of the 15th century: the arcade has plain chamfered arches on plain cylindrical piers with circular bases and capitals. In the village are Established, United Free and Episcopal churches; there are also two board schools in the parish. The island of Inch-Colm lies in the mid-channel of the Firth of Forth, about 2 miles south of Aberdour, and contains the extensive remains of an Augustinian monastery of St. Columba, founded about 1123 by Alexander I.; the buildings, of grey stone, consist of the nave and short massive tower of the church, with a transeptal adjunct, the octagonal Chapter house, with a groined roof and a muniment room above it, half of a building called the Lady Chapel and some remains of domestic buildings, all disposed round an open quadrangle about 45 feet square; about 80 feet west of the monastery is a barrel vaulted oblong structure from 15 to 18 feet long, and said to have been a hermit's cell; there is also a well. The hamlet of Donibristle Colliery is 3 miles north from the village, and the fine policies of Donibristle Park, a seat of the Earl of Moray, lie to the west (the house being in the adjoining parish of Dalgetty); part of Fordel village is also in this parish. The Earl of Moray, the Earl of Morton and Charles Grey Wotherspoon esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,805 acres; rateable value in 1920, £30,000; the population in 1911 was 2,147 in the civil parish (including 3 on Inchcolm Island) and 1,316 in the ecclesiastical parish.

ANSTRUTHER,

WITH THE PARISHES OF ANSTRUTHER EASTER AND ANSTRUTHER WESTER.

ANSTRUTHER is a seaport on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, about 20 miles north-east of Kirkcaldy, 10 by road and 15 by rail from St. Andrews, and is composed of the royal burghs of Anstruther Wester and Anstruther Easter, together with the seaward portion of the royal burgh of Kilrenny; this portion, which contains the whole of the fishing population, consists principally of the fishing village of Cellardyke or Nether Kilrenny, which, though really a suburb of Anstruther Easter, is itself in Kilrenny parish and burgh. The two Anstruthers are separate royal burghs and civil parishes, the dividing line being the small Dreel Burn. The port is the market town for the surrounding district, and there is a station here on the Thornton Junction, Leven and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The town is lighted with gas by a private company. This place was of great importance before the union with England, carrying on an extensive trade with Holland and France; fish curing is the staple trade. In 1920 361 boats, of 6,519 tonnage, were registered as belonging to the district, employing 1,628 men and boys. The total value of all fish landed in 1920 was £75,129; the value of the fish cured was £12,276. The total value of the fishing fleet owned in the district is £323,548; fishing gear, value £155,033; making a total of £478,581. The harbour, situated at Anstruther Easter, has been enlarged at a cost of about £80,000; the present harbours (inner and outer) give a space of 13½ acres, and will hold 500 fishing boats, and the inner harbour affords about 16 feet of water at full spring tide. In addition to fish curing, a considerable amount of business is done in the exporting of potatoes &c. the importation of ice, and the manufacture of fishing gear &c. There are branches of the National Bank of Scotland Limited, Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited in the town.

The Murray Library was erected in 1908 out of a bequest of £4,000 left for the purpose by the late Hon. David Murray, of London and Adelaide, a native of Anstruther. The building comprises on the ground floor a lending library and recreation and billiard rooms; on the first floor, general and ladies' reading rooms and a reference library, and on the top floor are apartments for the librarian and caretaker. The balance of the bequest of £4,000, together with a sum of £1,815 added by Mr. Murray's relatives, and the life members' subscriptions, form the endowment fund. The library is managed by a committee of nine trustees, the provost of Anstruther Easter, the chairman of the Parish Council and the chairman of the Fife Education Authority all being ex-officio members.

ANSTRUTHER EASTER is a royal burgh and parish (included in the Port of Anstruther), and is bounded on the south by the Firth of Forth, west by Wester Anstruther and north and east by Kilrenny; the burgh is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors. A weekly corn market is held on Friday. Dr. Thomas Chalmers, the celebrated orator and divine, was born here in April, 1780, and died 31 May, 1847; Professor William Tennant F.R.S. linguist and poet, and author of "Anster Fair," was also born here in 1784, and died 15 Feb. 1848, and Professor Goodsir, of Edinburgh University, was also a native of this place. There is an Established church, a United Free church, called the "Chalmers Memorial Church," and erected at a cost of nearly £10,000, and Congregational and Baptist chapels. The manse of the Established church dates from 1590. The Waid Academy, opened September 6th, 1886, is endowed mainly from funds mortified by Andrew Waid, lieut. R.N. a native of Anstruther Easter, who died in 1803. By his will, dated 1800, he founded the building as an academy for orphan boys and seamen's boys in indigent circumstances, and for their maintenance, clothing and such education as would instruct them in the great principles of the Christian religion, and fit them for serving in the British Navy with reputation; the amount of the trust estate at his death was about £5,000, but at the time of the transfer to the governors of the academy it had increased to about £15,000, and is now administered under a scheme promoted by the trustees and by the School Board of Anstruther Easter and approved by the commissioners under the Education Endowments (Scotland) Act, 1882, and sanctioned by Order in Council, August 11th, 1884; the school building, which is built of stone, with a tower in the centre, has a fine and commanding appearance.

William James Baird esq. is the principal landowner for Anstruther Easter, the area of which is 28 acres; rateable value, £6,413; the population of the civil parish in 1911 was 991, and of ecclesiastical, 991. Area of the royal burgh, which is partly in the parish of Kilrenny, is 123 acres; population in 1911, 1,147, of which 156 were in Kilrenny parish.

ANSTRUTHER WESTER, included in the Port of Anstruther, which adjoins Anstruther Easter, is also a parish and royal burgh, and holds its charter of incorporation from James IV. in 1587. A bridge connects the two burghs. It is bounded on the north by Carnbee, on the south by the Firth of Forth, on the east by Anstruther Easter, and on the west by Pittenweem. This burgh was disfranchised in 1853, when three managers were appointed by the court of session. In 1869 it again recovered its municipal status, and is now governed, under the Burgh Police Act of 1892, by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer and six other councillors. The Fifeshire Auction Co. Limited hold a market here every Friday. The town is supplied with water, and the streets are lighted and drained. There is an Established church. There is a municipal golf course on the cliffs west of the burgh.

Sir Ralph W. Anstruther bart. and Col. T. H. Erskine are the principal landowners of Anstruther Wester, the area of which comprises 1,034 acres; rateable value: burgh, £2,693; population in 1901, 558, and in 1911, 629, including 16 on May Island (which is 4 miles seaward). Area of the royal burgh, 110 acres; population in 1911, 552.

The numbers of electors on the parliamentary registrar in 1920 were:—Anstruther Easter, 520; Anstruther Wester, 234.

AUCHTERDERRAN is a parish in the western part of the county, bounded by Beath and Ballingry on the west, Abbotshall and Auchtertool on the south and south-east, Dysart on the east and Kinglassie and Portmoak (Kinross-shire) on the north. It has an irregular outline, and is about 5 miles long from north to south, and about 3 miles broad. The water of Orr flows eastward through the parish, and in the southern part there is a sheet of water called Loch Geily, which discharges itself by a small rivulet into that stream. The inhabitants are employed in agriculture and coal mining. Most of the parish is under tillage, and the rest in pasture. A considerable bed of coal and ironstone traverses this part of the county; the former has long been celebrated for its excellent quality: the latter is of the black band variety, but is not now worked. The parish contains part of the town of Lochgelly, at which place and at Cardenden there are stations on the Thornton and Dunfermline section of the North British railway. There are Established and United Free churches and a Baptist chapel. The area comprises 7,874 acres; rateable value, £136,442; the population in 1901 was 8,626, and in 1911, 17,547, of whom 8,008 were in the town of Lochgelly. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 7,344.

BOWHILL and CARDENDEN are villages in this parish.

GLENCRAIG, 2½ miles west, is also a village, partly in this parish. For names see Ballingry.

AUCHTERMUCHTY,

WITH THE VILLAGE OF DUNSHELT

AUCHTERMUCHTY is a parish and a royal burgh, the latter, 19 miles west-south-west from St. Andrews, 14 south-south-east from Perth, 5 south from Newburgh, 17 north from Kirkcaldy and 28 nearly due north from Edinburgh. A station on the Mawcarse and Ladybank section of the North British railway is adjacent to the town. The land in the vicinity of the town is remarkably rich and fertile, and the climate is considered very salubrious; the parish is bounded north by Perthshire, west by Strathmiglo, south by Falkland and east by Collessie; the town is situated on the road from Kinross to Cupar Fife, 9 miles from the latter town. It is irregularly built; many of the houses are thatched and low, but the greater portion are of a superior appearance. A stream of water called "Lover's Pool" runs through the town, dividing it into two nearly equal parts; it was constituted a royal burgh by James IV. which charter was confirmed by James VI. and it still enjoys all the privileges arising therefrom, and is governed by a provost, two bailies, nine councillors, a treasurer and town clerk. A considerable trade is carried on here in manufacturing linen. Malting and distilling are likewise engaged in, and the making of scales, beams and weighing machines has been established here for upwards of two centuries. There are Established and United Free churches and a Scottish Episcopal mission room. There are branches of the Bank of Scotland and Union Bank of Scotland Limited, and a Savings Bank. The Victoria Hall, erected in 1865, is a fine building. The parish church, near the centre of the town, is an ancient structure and has been enlarged. The People's Institute comprises reading, recreation and temperance refreshment rooms; it also contains some bedrooms and a hall for meetings. There is also another reading room in the town, and a well-stocked library. Fairs are held on the last Monday in April and the Thursday after the second Monday in July. W. B. Skene esq. D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 3,531 acres; area of burgh, 248 acres; rateable value of parish, landward £10,852 with railway, of burgh £5,815; population of the parish in 1911, 1,893, of whom 1,396 were in the burgh.

DUNSHELT is a small village situated about 1 mile south from and in the parish of Auchtermuchty, where there is a linen factory and a board school. Auchtermuchty railway station is about half a mile distant.

AUCHTERTOOL is a small inland parish and village, the latter situated 4 miles west from Kirkcaldy and about the same distance north-west from Kinghorn, bounded on the east by Abbotshall, on the south by Kinghorn and Aberdour, on the north by Auchterderran and on the west by Beath; extends from east to west 5 miles by 2 in breadth; small debt court district of Kirkcaldy. Towards the east side of the parish is a little lake called Camilla Loch, near which are the ruins of Camilla Castle, formerly "Hallyards." The boundary between the parishes of Kinghorn and Aberdour and Auchtertool is the river Tiel, which rises at Cullaloe and flows into the Firth. Auchterteel is said to have been the original name of the parish, deriving the appellation from its situation on the banks of the Tiel. A light railway for coal traffic passes along the north of the village and joins the main line at Invertiel. Here is an Established church. The Earl of Moray is the principal landowner. The area comprises 2,733 acres; rateable value, £7,141; population in 1911, 781.

BALLINGRY is a parish on the border of Kinross-shire, extending 3 miles from north to south by 1½ broad; its kirktown is 2½ miles north-west from Lochgelly, a small portion of which town is in the parish; it is in the small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and is bounded on the north by Portmock (in Kinross-shire), east and south-east by Auchterderran, south-west by Beath and north-west by Kinross. The mining villages of LUMPHINNANS, GLENCRAIG (part of) and LOCHORE are in the parish, Lochore being the terminus of the Dunfermline Tramway Co. The nearest railway station is at Lochgelly, on the Dumfermline and Thornton Junction section of the North British railway. The Mary pit, Lochore, the property of the Fife Coal Co. Limited, is one of the deepest in Scotland, being 336 fathoms deep; it has a large and modern electric plant; 900 workers are employed here. The Wilson Clyde Coal Co. own two pits at Glencraig, the deeper being about 250 fathoms, and employ 1,000 workers. There are Established, Roman Catholic and United Free churches here. The area comprises 3,909 acres; rateable value, £50,123; population in 1901, 4,156, and in 1911, 9,214, of which 1,141 were in Lochgelly Police burgh. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1901 was 1,250, and in 1911, 5,139.

BALMERINO, or Balmerinoch (pronounced Balmernie), is a parish lying on the south bank of the firth of Tay, and extending 4 miles from east to west by 2½ broad; its Kirktown is about 5 miles west of Newport; the parish is bounded east by Forgan, west by Flisk and Creich and south by Kilmany, and is in the small debt court district of Cupar-Fife. The nearest railway stations are Kilmany, on the Newburgh and North of Fife railway, 2½ miles distant, and Wormit, on the Leuchars and Tay Bridge section of the North British line, about 3 miles distant. The harbour of Balmerino is small, and at one time a considerable quantity of grain was exported from it, but this trade has now declined. To the west, and on the banks of the Tay, stands the ancient village of Balmerino, where there is an Established church, and near the village are the ruins of the once famed abbey, a beautiful structure, begun by Alexander II. and his mother, Ermengarde, queen of William the Lion and daughter of Richard, Viscount of Bellomont, in 1229; the ruins are now richly clothed with ivy and surrounded with fine trees. Gauldry, a small village in the above parish, is about 4 miles south-west from Newport, and 2½ from Wormit station. Here is a school, a United Free church, and the Morison Duncan Hall. In the parish is a recreation ground. The aspect of the country is of an undulating character, and agricultural. This place once conferred a peerage title on the Elphinstone family, lords Balmerinoch, but the title became extinct on the death of Arthur, sixth lord, who was beheaded 18 Aug. 1746, for his participation in the rising of 1745. The Earl of Moray is the principal landowner. The area comprises 3,433 acres; rateable value, £5,419; population, 1911, 568.

BEATH is a parish about 4 miles north to south, and about 3 in breadth, bounded on the west by Dunfermline; on the east by Ballingry and Auchterderran; on the north by Cleish (Kinross-shire), and on the south by Aberdour and Dalgetty; it is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline, and contains the police burgh of Cowdenbeath, and the villages of Kelty, Lassodie and Hill of Beath, a small part of Kelty being in Kinross-shire. The North British railway has stations on its Edinburgh and Perth section at Cowdenbeath and Kelty, and the same company's section from Thornton Junction to Dunfermline runs through Cowdenbeath station. The ground is hilly, and is watered by the Orr, and a stream which flows from Loch Fitty, a shallow lake on the western boundary. Here is an Established church. Several collieries are in active operation, and give employment to most of the inhabitants. The principal landowners are the Earl of Moray, Sir Charles Elphinstone Adam bart. the trustees of the late James Dewar esq. and the Fife Coal Company Limited. The area of the parish is 6,345 acres; rateable value in 1920, £103,373 15s.; population in 1901, 15,812, and in 1911, 24,351, including 14,029 in Cowdenbeath burgh and 7,398 in Kelty.

KELTY is a village in this parish, adjoining Blairadam, in Kinross-shire, about 2½ miles from Cowdenbeath, and has a station on the Edinburgh and Perth section of the North British railway. Here are the collieries of the Fife Coal Company Limited. There is an Established church and two United Free churches.

HILL OF BEATH is a colliery village, partly in this parish and partly in Dunfermline, situated about 4 miles east of Dunfermline. Here are brick works; also a Mission hall. For names, see Crossgates.

LASSODIE is a colliery village in the parish of Beath, nearly 6 miles distant from Dunfermline, its post town. Here are the collieries of Messrs. Thomas Spowart and Co. Limited, and a United Free church and a public school.

A small part of Lumphinnans village is in this parish.

BUCKHAVEN, METHIL and INNERLEVEN now form a united police burgh, town and village, in the parish of Wemyss, and afford a good shipping station for the export of coal, and a shelter for fishing boats, Buckhaven having a harbour and Methil a new dock with appliances for loading colliers; both are situated on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, 2 miles south of Leven and 7 north-east of Kirkcaldy. There are stations at Methil and Buckhaven, on the branch line of the North British railway from Thornton Junction. The burgh is governed by a provost, four bailies and seven councillors. An office for the Burgh Police Commission was built in 1902 in College street, Buckhaven, and another was erected in Fisher street, METHIL, in 1907. The Wemyss Parish Council offices, Buckhaven, were built in 1909 at a cost of £1,600. Methil is a quoad sacra parish, and has Established and United Free churches: there is also an Established church at Buckhaven, three United Free churches, and one at Innerleven. The Randolph Wemyss Memorial Hospital, built in 1909 at a cost of £8,000, by Lady Eva Wemyss, in memory of her late husband, R. G. E. Wemyss esq. (d. 1908), contains two large and one small ward; there are 22 beds and two cots. The dock of METHIL, opened 5th May, 1887, was built by the late Randolph Gordon Erskine Wemyss esq. (d. 1908), of Wemyss Castle, but is the property of the North British Railway Co. and in 1915, 2,475,550 tons of coal were exported and 55,497 tons of merchandise, consisting chiefly of pitwood, sawn wood, esparto, flax and hemp were imported. The dock has an area of 4¾ acres, with width at entrance of 50 feet, and a depth of water at ordinary spring tides of 23 feet, and at neaps of 18 feet; it is fitted with one of Sir William Armstrong & Co.'s hydraulic hoists, capable of loading a vessel with 2,500 tons of coal in 24 hours, and in the three docks are thirteen of these hoists; there are also hydraulic cranes for working other import and export goods. The dock is connected with the main railway system of Fifeshire, and is in direct communication with all the Fife collieries, and is lighted by electricity. A new dock was constructed in 1897, at a cost of £200,000, the area being 6½ acres, and a depth of water at ordinary spring tides of 27 feet, and at neaps of 22 feet. Another new dock was opened in 1913, the area being 16¼ acres, with width at entrance of 80 feet and a depth of water at ordinary spring tides of 32 feet, and at neaps of 27 feet, and cost £750,000. The number of vessels which arrived at the docks from foreign countries during the year 1918 were 641 steam ships and 14 sailing ships, with a total tonnage of 472,468 tons. In the general coasting trade 348 sailing and steam vessels arrived at the port with cargoes and in ballast in 1918, of 257,068 tons, and 133 departed, of 103,749 tonnage. The number of fishing boats registered at the port of Methil in 1918 was 315, of 4,799 tonnage. The manufacture of fishing nets is carried on at Buckhaven. Area of the burgh, 443 acres; assessable value, including the docks, £63,931; population in 1901, 8,621, and in 1911, 15,149, including 336 shipping. Population of the wards:—First, 3,213; Second, 2,185; Third, 4,865; Fourth, 4,550. Population of Methil ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 11,522.

BURNTISLAND

Is a royal and parliamentary burgh, seaport and parish, with a station on the North British railway, situated on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, 8 miles by ferry, or 20½ by rail north-by-west from Edinburgh, 16 south-east from Kinross, 6 south-west from Kirkcaldy and 3 east from Aberdour. The parish, originally a portion of Kinghorn, is 3 miles square and consists of the Binn and Dunearn ranges of hills, with the High Bents on the east side of the town, extending into Kinghorn parish: some portions of the hills contain fine specimens of basaltic columns, which are irruptive through the limestone and sandstone strata. The burgh is in the poor combination and sheriff court district of Kirkcaldy, and is bounded east and north by Kinghorn and west by Aberdour. Burntisland was originally a burgh of regality under the Abbot of Dunfermline, from whom it was purchased in 1541 by James V. and erected into a burgh royal, this charter being confirmed by James VI. in 1587 and renewed by Charles I. in 1632. It is governed by a provost, two bailies and nine councillors, and together with Kirkcaldy, Dysart, Buckhaven with Methil and Innerleven and Kinghorn forms the Kirkcaldy parliamentary district, constituted in 1708 and returning one member. The town council are the police commissioners and the local authority, and three members of the town council with six representatives from the N. B. Railway Co. constitute the harbour commissioners; there is also a parish council: the municipal, police and parliamentary boundaries were made identical by an Act obtained in 1876, and the same powers have been granted to the magistrates as are at present possessed by the sheriff and justices of peace under the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854; this admits of the administration of justice in nautical cases being conducted in the town instead of in Kirkcaldy as previously. There are police and bailie courts, the sheriff and small debt courts for the burgh being held weekly at Kirkcaldy. Water is supplied by the Town Council from a reservoir at Cullaloe, which was enlarged in 1910 at a cost of about £7,000. The town is lighted with gas from works the property of the burgh, and managed by the members of the town council, and the electric light is supplied by a company. The nearest markets are those held at Thornton on Mondays and Dunfermline on Tuesdays, but an annual fair is held here on the third Friday in July. Burntisland is now the head quarters of the custom house business for the district, which embraces the line of coast from Stirling to West Wemyss.

Burntisland was once a place of great trade, particularly with Holland, but from 1603 its trade declined till 1848, when the opening of the Fife railway imparted an impetus to the export trade in coal and pig-iron. The West dock, built by Mr. Walter Scott, of Newcastle-on-Tyne, from plans by Messrs. T. Meik and Sons C.E. comprises an area of 5½ acres, and cost about £100,000, including railway connections and hydraulic loading machinery; the depth of water in the dock is 22ft. 9in. at high water of spring tides and 19ft. 9in. at neap tides; the width of entrance is 39ft. The East dock was constructed at a total cost of about £390,000, by Sir John Jackson, contractor, of Westminster, from plans by Messrs. T. Meik and Sons C.E. and Robert Henderson C.E. and was completed in 1901; the area is 12½ acres; the depth of water, 28ft. 6in. at high water of spring tides, and 25ft. 6in. at neap tides, and the width of entrance 60ft. There is still a metropolitan ferry here, and the North British Railway Co. keep a steamer plying at stated intervals between Burntisland and Granton. In the general coasting trade 38 sailing and steam vessels of 37,420 tons arrived at the mgrt, and 40 of 38,177 tonnage departed. The total value of the imports in 1919 was £36,992, and of the exports £95,727, of which £889,460 was coal and coke. In 1920 223,886 tons of coal were shipped coastwise. The railway from Burntisland westward to the Forth bridge, opened in March, 1890, and constructed at a cost of over £140,000, has developed a picturesque district some 8 miles in extent; the line enters Burntisland by a long viaduct, which passes at the bottom of High street and crosses Harbour place, reaching the main line east of the present terminus. A direct line to the coalfields by Auchtertool is now completed. The North British Railway Company have constructed a single line for mineral traffic between the Cowdenbeath coalfields and Burntisland.

The herring curing trade, which used to be very flourishing, is extinct, although Burntisland is till a fishing station for the Firth fishery.

The railway locomotive works, situated between the Lammerlaws and the old town, employ 300 men. The limestone mine belonging to the Carron Company at Starleyburn is now also in connection with the railway. There are branches here of the National and Commercial Banks of Scotland Limited. The music hall, built by the late Joseph Young, of Dunearn, and presented to the town by his trustees, will hold 300 persons, and is frequently used for lectures, concerts and public meetings, also two cinemas. A golf course of 18 holes has been formed by the Burntisland Golf Co. Limited, and a club house erected on the grounds. In Gladstone terrace are recreation grounds, consisting of three tennis courts, a bowling green and an artificial curling pond. Rossend Castle, built in 1119, by the abbots of Dunfermline, occupies a very picturesque situation, and has a fine square keep: it was the residence of Cromwell during the occupation of Burntisland by his troops, and was a favourite resting place of Queen Mary; it is now the property of the Town Council.

The Established church, which bears the date 1592 over its entrance, resembles in style that of the North Church, Amsterdam, and was no doubt erected under Dutch influence, Burntisland having a large intercourse with Holland in the 16th cent. The galleries, adorned with antique carving, were erected in 1613, and formerly occupied by the Guilds, whose badges and insignia in some cases ornament the front, and there is a state seat for the magistrates. It was within these walls that James VI. met the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, and pressed his proposal for a new translation of the Scriptures, which eventually resulted in the production of the present authorised version. There are two war memorials in the church to the memory of those who lost their lives in the Great War: a clock, presented by Mrs. Murray, Kirkton, and a marble tablet subscribed for by the congregation. The old kirk of the parish was at "Litel Kingorne," or Kirkton, and when the present church was built in 1592-4 there was some litigation with the heritors before the services could be moved, which was not terminated until 1632; the "auld kirk" is now a ruin. In connection with the Established church is a fine hall, opened in 1894, and seating 800 persons. The Episcopal church of St. Serf is a building of stone in the Gothic style, and will seat 200 persons: attached are Mission churches at Aberdour and Kinghorn. The incumbency, net yearly value £190, has been held since 1915 by the Rev. George P. Horne M.A. of University College, Durham. There are two United Free churches, a Catholic church, and a Scottish Church mission. The cemetery at Bentfield was established by the Town Council at the cost of about £4,000. The only mortification belonging to Burntisland is Watson's, consisting of the annual rent of the East Binnlands, amounting to an average of £74, which is divided between three widows and the schoolmaster for the education of poor children. The schools were erected in 1876, at a cost of £6,000, and in 1901 a Higher Grade school was added at a further cost of £6,000. In 1907 a public library was erected on a site presented by James Shepherd esq. the cost of the building being defrayed by the late Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo Castle, who gave the sum of £3,500 to the burgh. Here also is an Episcopal school founded by the late Rev. G. H. Forbes. The Earl of Morton, Middleton Rettie esq. the Carron Co. and the trustees of the late John McFarlane are the principal landowners. The area comprises 2,583 acres; rateable value, £10,053; area of burgh, 267 acres; rateable value, £34,016. The population of the parish in 1911 was 5,305, including 221 on board vessels in the harbour and 4,487 in the burgh (exclusive of shipping).

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1920 was 2,601.

CARDENDEN, see AUCHTERDERRAN.

CARNBEE is a parish and hamlet, the latter about 2½ miles north-east from Pittenweem; the parish also contains the hamlets of Arncroach and Newton of Balcormo; it extends 5 miles from east to west with a breadth of 4 and is bounded north by Cameron and Dunino, east by Crail and Kilrenny, south by Anstruther Wester, south-west by St. Monance and west by Kilconquhar. The nearest railway station is at Pittenweem, on the Thornton Junction and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The parish is in the small debt court district of Anstruther, and has an Established church. The minerals are limestone and freestone. The greater part of the land is rich and fertile, and well cultivated, the rest being adapted for pasture. Of late years dairy farming has been carried on in the parish extensively. A ridge of hills runs through the centre of the parish, the highest of which is Kellie Law, having an altitude of 800 feet above the level of the sea. Kellie Castle, formerly the seat of the Earls of Kellie, stands in this parish, on the south side of Kellie Law, and occupies a prominent and beautiful situation; it is now the residence of John Lorimer esq. Balcaskie House, the seat of Sir Ralph W. Anstruther bart. T.D., D.L., J.P. principal landowner, stands on rising ground between St. Monance and Pittenweem. The grounds are extensive and thickly wooded. Gibvision House is now the seat of Sir Robert Stodart Lorimer A.R.A., A.R.S.A. The area comprises 8,698 acres; rateable value, £12,387; the population in 1911 was 843.

ARNCROACH is a small village in this parish, 1¾ miles south-west from the kirktown of Carnbee and 3 miles north-west from Pittenweem, and has a United Free church.

CARNOCK is a parish lying to the west of Dunfermline, and bounded on the south by Torryburn, west and north by Saline; it extends 3 miles from east to west and 2½ from north to south, and is in the poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline, from which town the village lies 3½ miles west. Here are Established and United Free churches. There is a station at Oakley, on the Stirling and Dunfermline section of the North British railway, and one at CAIRNEYHILL on the Kincardine and Dunfermline branch of the North British railway. Inzievar is the seat of Archibald Dominic Smith-Sligo esq. Alexander Mitchell esq. J.P. and Archibald D. Smith-Sligo esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,493 acres; rateable value, £5,954; population, 1911, 1,315.

OAKLEY is a village in this parish, a mile and a half from Carnock village, and 5 miles from Dunfermline; it sprang into existence subsequent to 1846 on the establishment of the Forth Iron Works, which have since been discontinued. Here is a Roman Catholic church.

CAIRNEYHILL village is on the road between Alloa and Dunfermline, 3 miles west of the latter town, and contains a United Free church; the majority of the inhabitants are employed by the manufacturers of Dunfermline, in mining, market gardening and in the ordnance works at Crombie.

GOWKHALL is a small village, on the Alloa to Dunfermline road, and is 3 miles west of Dunfermline. The inhabitants are engaged in mining.

CERES (or Cyrus) is a parish, with a village of same name, 3 miles south-east of Cupar-Fife station on the Thornton Junction and Dundee section of the North British railway; the parish, which is in the small debt court district of Cupar-Fife, extends 8 miles from north-east to south-west with a breadth varying from 2 to 4 miles. The boundaries of the parish are on the north Kemback and Cupar parishes, on the east Cameron and Kilconquhar, on the north-east St. Andrews, on the south Largo, and on the west Cults. The parish church, built in 1806, occupies an elevated site and has an embattled tower with spire. It will seat 1,100 persons. There is a United Free church in the village; and two public schools, situated respectively at Craigrothie and Ceres. The inhabitants are mostly employed in agriculture. Lime and coal are found at the Teasses. Races are regularly held here on the last Saturday in June, to commemorate the battle of Bannockburn, fought 24 June, 1314. The Leith Holiday Home (formerly the Adamson Institute) provides a fortnight's holiday for upwards of 800 poor, and in many cases delicate, children from the slums of Leith. It is supported entirely by voluntary contributions.

The Kennels of the Fife Foxhounds are situated at HARLESWYND, in this parish; Col. T. H. Erskine, Grangemuir, Pittenweem, and Lord Lindsay, joint masters; Will Hanley, huntsman. Cupar and St. Andrews are convenient places for hunting visitors. In the western part of the parish, on the border of the Howe of Fife, are the ruins of the House of Scotstarvit, and about a mile south of the village is Craighall Castle, the seat of the Hope family from 1625, but now also in ruins; and near Craigrothie are the ruins of Struthers, the original seat of the Earls of Crawford. The farm of Easter Pitscottie occupies the site of the house occupied by Robert Lindsay, of Pitscottie, author of the "Chronicles of Scotland." Col. Charles Frederick St. Clair Anstruther M.V.O., D.S.O., J.P. Edward Gorrel Baxter esq. Frederick B. Sharp esq. and the trustees of the late Lieut.-Col. George Ewart Hope are the principal landowners. The area comprises 10,063 acres; rateable value, £12,777; the population in 1911 was 1,467 in the civil parish, and 1,391 in the ecclesiastical parish.

CRAIGROTHIE and CHANCE INN are small villages and PITSCOTTIE and BALDINNIE are hamlets in the parish of Ceres.

COLINSBURGH is a large village in the parish of Kilconquhar and small debt court district of Anstruther, on the road from Elie to Cupar-Fife, 2½ miles north-west from the former and 10 south-east from the latter and 4 miles east from Largo. Kilconquhar, on the Thornton Junction and St. Andrews section of the North British railway, is the nearest station. This place was originally built by Colin, third Earl of Balcarres, who died in 1722, and is named after him. There is a United Free church here, and a branch of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited. The "Galloway" Library and Reading Room was built in 1903, from money bequeathed for the purpose by the late Thomas Carstairs Galloway esq. who also left a sum of £600, the interest on which provides three bursaries and a similar amount for the yearly benefit of the deserving poor. A weekly corn market is held every Thursday.

COWDENBEATH, a growing town in the parish of Beath, was constituted a police burgh in 1890 and is situated just below the junction of the Dunfermline and Kinross and the Dunfermline and Thornton Junction sections of the North British railway, which has a station here. The burgh is supplied with water from works constructed by the local authority in 1887, and from Loch Glow, under the control of the Town Council, and is lighted by electricity from works the property of the burgh and by gas from works the property of a company. The parish church lies a mile north-west of the town, and there are also three United Free churches, a Baptist chapel, and four public schools. A drinking fountain, surmounted by three lamps, was erected in the High street, and presented to the town, in 1897, by H. Mungall esq. J.P. in commemoration of the Diamond Jubilee of Her Majesty Queen Victoria. Here is also a linen factory. The area of the burgh is 573 acres; rateable value, 1920, £48,519; population in 1901, 7,467 and in 1911, 14,029.

CRAIGROTHIE, see CERES.

CRAIL is a seaboard parish, occupying the extreme north-easterly shore of the Firth of Forth, the Fife Ness promontory marking the mouth of the Firth; the seaport of same name as the parish lies a few miles south-west of the Ness, is a royal and parliamentary burgh; it was known formerly as Cathair-ùille or Carr-ùille, and has a station on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The parish extends 3 miles along the shore of the Firth of Forth, and its breadth of 2 miles lies along the North sea, besides which a part almost as large lies inland north of Kilrenny and Carnbee parishes, and on the north-west and north the boundaries are the parishes of Denino; St. Leonard and Kingsbarns. The burgh, which consists of two main streets, one containing some massive old houses, is mentioned by old historians as a town of considerable note so early as the middle of the 9th century. Its importance in latter days has, however, greatly declined, notwithstanding it possesses great capabilities as a port, and with the exception of crab fishing, for which it is famous, it enjoys but very little trade. This in some measure may be ascribed to the inconvenience of its harbour, for it is otherwise eligibly situated. Its principal exports consist of grain and potatoes; the imports are chiefly coal. Crail was erected into a royal burgh by David I. and confirmed by Robert Bruce, and it is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. It is now a place of summer resort, and has two golfing courses and public bowling greens, and there is also a public library of 2,000 volumes. A little to the east of the harbour are the fragments of a castle, or palace, once the residence of David I. the remains of which consist chiefly of a wall, now partly enclosed in a garden. The parish church was anciently collegiate, and here John Knox preached. The United Free church was erected in 1909 at a cost of £4,200 to seat 600 persons. The celebrated James Sharp, Archbishop of St. Andrews, 1661-79, was minister of the church for 12 years, and his handwriting is still to be seen in the session records. The Golf Hotel is a small but comfortable inn. The Earl of Lindsay J.P. Lieut.-Col. Sir Thomas Erskine bart. C. J. B. Monypenny esq. John Duncan esq. Mrs. Mary Anderson Horsley and Mrs. S. B. Armour-Hannay are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,348 acres; rateable value, £16,636, viz., burghal, £6,441; landward, £10,195; area of burgh 128 acres; the population in 1911 was 1,592, of which the burgh contained 1,060.

The population of the parliamentary burgh in 1911 was 1,096; number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1921 was 633.

CREICH is a parish in the north of the county, with its kirktown 5 miles north-west of Cupar. The Newburgh and North of Fife railway, opened on January 25th, 1909, is under the control of the North British Railway Company, and connects Newburgh with St. Fort. LUTHRIE station, in this parish, is half a mile south of the village of that name. Creich parish is in the small debt court district and public health district of Cupar, and extends 3 miles from north to south by 2 wide; it is bounded on the north by Flisk, on the south by Moonzie and Monimail, on the east by Balmerino and Kilmany, and on the west by Dunbog. There is an Established church here, and a United Free church at BRUNTON. At Luthrie is a village hall, presented to the parish in 1910 by James Carnegie esq. On a little eminence near the ruins of the old church are the vestiges of a Roman camp, and at a short distance therefrom are the remains of a castle, which formerly belonged to Cardinal Beaton. The parish was the birthplace in 1583 of the Rev. Alexander Henderson, who represented the Scottish Church at the Westminster Assembly in 1643, but died in Edinburgh 19 Aug. 1646: here also was born in 1652 John Sage, educated at St. Andrews, and consecrated in 1705 as the first of the post-revolution bishops in the Scottish Episcopal communion; he was the author of a remarkable production, the "Fundamental Charter of Presbytery," and other works, and died 7 June, 1711. The surface of the parish is undulating, and the soil sandy and thin. James Carnegie esq. D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 2,338 acres; rateable value, £2,774; population in 1911, 309.

BRUNTON and LUTHRIE are hamlets in this parish.

CROSSFORD, see DUNFERMLINE.

CROSSGATES, see DUNFERMLINE.

CULROSS is a parish on the Firth of Forth, originally included in the county of Perth, though surrounded by Fifeshire, to which county it was transferred by a Local Government Order dated 23 February, 1891. The parish contains the town of Culross, a royal burgh within the sheriff court district of Dunfermline, 4 miles south-east from Kincardine, 9 south-east from Alloa and 7 west from Dunfermline. There are three stations in the parish—Culross, to the east of the town, on the Dunfermline and Kincardine section of the North British railway, and BOGSIDE and EAST GRANGE, in the northern part of the parish, on the Stirling and Dunfermline branch of the North British railway. The burgh is situated partly on the acclivity of a hill rising from the Forth, the principal street running east and west along the shore. An extensive traffic in salt and coal was at one time carried on here, as well as the manufacture of the famous Culross girdles. Culross was erected into a royal burgh by James VI. in 1588, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. This place affords a peerage title to the Colvill family, Barons Colvill of Culross. The town and its vicinity possess many objects of antiquity. In 1217 a monastery of the Cistercian order was founded here on rising ground behind the town by Malcolm, Thane of Fife; considerable portions of the building are still extant; of the church, which stood on the north side, the Early English choir, transepts and central tower remain, and since 1905 have been restored, at a cost of over £5,000, under the direction of Sir R. Rowand Anderson kt. LL.D. architect, and fitted for divine service. In a chapel, erected in 1642 in honour of Sir George Bruce kt. who died 6 May, 1625, are recumbent effigies in alabaster of Sir George and his lady, and figures of their eight children in a kneeling posture. There is also a United Free church. To the west of the town, on the bank of the Forth, are the ruins of Dunimarle (the hill near the sea), an ancient stronghold of the Macduffs, and according to tradition the scene of the murder of Lady Macduff and her children. The present house of Dunimarle, occupied by the Rev. Canon James Walker Harper M.A. is a modern castellated edifice, built by the late Mrs. Sharp Erskine, who also erected in the grounds a beautiful mortuary chapel, within which she is interred; the house contains some beautiful paintings, rare old china and other articles of vertu, to which, and the extensive grounds, the public are admitted on certain days of the week. Culross Abbey House is now (1921) unoccupied. Near the abbey church was a school endowed by the late Patrick Geddes esq.; a new building was erected by the late Miss Davidson, of The Park, at a cost of £1,500, and in 1896 this was enlarged, and is now combined with the public school, under the style of the Geddes Public School, which is available for 250 children. Lord Balfour of Burleigh, Fife Coal Co. the trustees of the late Mrs. Magdalene Sharp Erskine, Mrs. Johnston and John James Dalgleish esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners of the parish. The area comprises 7,591 acres; rateable value, landward £14,799 13s. 2d.; burghal £3,653 13s. 3d.; the population in 1911 was 1,499 in the parish and 456 in the royal burgh.

CULTS is a parish, having its kirktown 2½ miles east of Ladybank, which is the nearest railway station, and is a junction on the North British line; the parish extends 5 miles from north to south by 2 wide, and is bounded north by Cupar and Monimail, east by Ceres, south by Kettle and Leven, and west by Kettle and Collessie; it is in the small debt court district of Cupar, and contains the village of Pitlessie. It abounds in lime and freestone, and is generally well cultivated and enclosed. The name of the parish is derived from the Gaelic "coillte," which signifies "the woods." Sir David Wilkie R.A. the celebrated artist, was born here 18 Nov. 1785, his father having been minister of Cults for over 30 years. The Sir David Wilkie Memorial Hall was opened in 1898, and is used for public meetings. Lord and Lady Cochrane, of Cults, and the trustees of the late Mrs. Mary Watt Wilson are the sole landowners. The area comprises 2,811 acres; rateable value, £5,659 18s. 7d.; population in 1911, 617 civil and 588 ecclesiastical.

PITLESSIE is a small village in this parish, 2 miles north-east from Kettle, on the road between Kirkcaldy and Cupar, 4 south-south-west from the latter town and about 2 east from Ladybank station. There is a public school here which serves for the whole of the parish. The population in 1911 was 361.

CUPAR,

WITH THE VILLAGE AND HAMLET OF CUPAR MUIR.

CUPAR is a royal burgh and parish and the capital of the county of Fife, and is contributary to the constituency of East Fife. The town is 32 miles north (by rail via Forth Bridge) from Edinburgh, 12¾ south from Dundee, 9 west from St. Andrews and 9 north-east from Falkland, situated on the left bank of the Eden, and with a station on the Edinburgh, Thornton and Dundee branch of the North British railway. As a royal burgh Cupar is governed by a provost, four bailies and a dean of guild, with a treasurer and 7 councillors. The ordinary sheriff court and the sheriff small debt courts are held every Thursday during the session. It is a place of considerable antiquity, but in the present day its aspect is that of a modern town, nor are there any ancient remains to be discerned in or about Cupar. Of its castle, so frequently alluded to in Scottish history, not a vestige is now visible: the Castle hill, where that fortress once stood, and in which the plays of Sir David Lindsay and the "Satire of the Three Estates" were acted in 1555, is now the site of a public school. The principal streets of the town are the Crossgate, the Bonnygate and St. Catherine street, which last is built on the plan of the houses in Edinburgh. The burgh is lighted with gas, supplied by the Cupar Gas Co. Limited. The places of worship are the old parish church in Kirkgate, the parish church of St. Michael, in Westport, two United Free churches, a Roman Catholic church, and a Baptist chapel. The Episcopal church of St. James, in St. Catherine street, an edifice in the Classic style, occupies the site of a convent of Dominican or Black Friars. The Rev. Gordon Walker Paterson M.A. of Trinity College, Oxford, and St. Andrews University, has been rector since 1908. The Town Hall is in St. Catherine street and the County buildings are also in the town. On the south side of the river is the old prison, now used as a private warehouse: the later gaol, built on rising ground a little to the north of the Dundee road, is now disused. The principal trade of Cupar arises from the linen manufacture, but tanning, coach building and other avocations are carried on. There are branches here of the British Linen Bank, the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, the Clydesdale Bank Limited, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Union Bank of Scotland Limited, together with a savings bank. Four newspapers are published in Cupar, the "Fife Herald and Journal," the "Fife News," the "St. Andrews Citizen" and the "People's Journal for Fife and Kinross." The Duncan Institute, in Crossgate, founded by the late Miss Duncan, of Edengrove, for the benefit chiefly of the working classes, comprises a reading room, library, book club, recreation and billiard room and lecture hall, and is managed by trustees. Near the station is a stone statue erected to the memory of David Maitland McGill Crichton, a prominent county gentleman, who took a leading part in the disruption of the Free Church in 1843. The Cupar Bell-Baxter school, an endowed secondary school, with a primary department, was endowed in the year 1832 by the famous educationalist, Dr. Bell, and received a second endowment in 1873 from Sir David Baxter bart. of Kilmaron. It is governed by a body of 11 persons. The Adamson Cottage Hospital, opened in Dec. 1904, is maintained by the Adamson Trust Funds and public subscriptions. It is managed by the trustees of the late Alexander Adamson, and contains two public wards with three beds each, and one private ward. Kilmaron Castle is the property and residence of Sir James Low bart. D.L., J.P. William Hunter esq. J.P. of Hilton, Frederick B. Sharp esq. J.P. of Hill of Tarvit, and Patrick J. Home Rigg esq. are the principal landowners. The weekly market for corn and cattle is held on Tuesday. The area comprises 5,713 acres; area of burgh, 532 acres; rateable value, £45,336; the population in 1911 was 6,736, including 4,380 in the burgh. Population of the wards:—First, 4,380; Second, 93; Third, 1,479; Fourth, 784. Included in the total population were 98 officials and 626 inmates of Fife and Kinross District Mental Hospital.

The villages of SPRINGFIELD and CUPAR MUIR are in this parish. The first named is given under a separate heading.

BRIGHTON is a village 1¼ miles to the south-west.

DAIRSIE is a parish and village, the latter being 3 miles north-east from Cupar, with a station on the Thornton, Ladybank and Dundee section of the North British railway. The parish extends 2½ miles from north to south by 2 miles in breadth, and is bounded on the north by Leuchars and Logie, and on the south by Kemback, east by Leuchars, and west by Cupar, and is in the small debt court district of Cupar. The river Eden, which skirts the parish, is crossed by a good bridge of three arches, supposed to have been erected by John Spottiswood, archbishop of St. Andrews 1615-61, who was the proprietor of the Dairsie estate. The church was erected in 1621 by the same archbishop, at the time when he designed to establish Episcopacy in Scotland; there is also a United Free church. At Dairsie Castle, now a ruin, a parliament was convened in the year 1335. The Pitcairn Institute, Library and Recreation Rooms, opened in 1897, were built and furnished at a cost of about £900. The late Mrs. Pitcairn, of Pitculls, left the interest of £2,000 to be expended annually in part in the purchase of books, and in the maintenance of the recreation park. The large farm of Craigfoodie is owned by the trustees of the United Free Church of Scotland. James Cheape esq. D.L., J.P. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 2,550 acres; rateable value, £5,300; population in 1911, 503.

DALGETTY is a parish in the poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline, about 1½ miles from Inverkeithing station on the Edinburgh, Thornton and Ladybank section of the North British railway; it extends 5 miles from north to south, by from 1 to 3 broad, and is bounded on the north by Beath, north-west by Dunfermline, west by Inverkeithing, south by the Forth and east by Aberdour. The Park of Donibristle, which includes the site of Dalgetty House and the fine gardens formerly attached to it, stands partly in this parish, and partly in Aberdour; the house, which is a seat of the Earl of Moray, is in this parish, as are also the ruins of Couston Castle on an island in Otterston Loch, and Fordell Castle and Mansion House, the seat of the Henderson family: the castle, erected in the 12th century, was restored about 1850, but is only occasionally used: it possesses a fine banqueting hall. Dalgetty old church is roofless, but the walls are standing, and there are many monuments in the church and yard: in a vault at the west end of the church lie the remains of Alexander Seton, high chancellor of Scotland, and created, in 1606, Earl of Dunfermline, d. 1622: above it is a fine stone-panelled room, open on the east side to the church, and once serving as a pew for the Earls of Dunfermline, a title which became extinct on the outlawry of the 4th Earl in 1690; the new church is about a quarter of a mile further north, and was built about 1820. There is also an Established church at Moss Green in this parish. A large aerodrome is now situated near Donibristle House.

FORDELL is a village in this parish, about a mile south-east of Crossgates railway station. It has a fine reading room, provided for the use of workmen.

SAINT DAVID'S is a small port in this parish, about a mile and a half to the east of Inverkeithing. The rise of this place can be mainly ascribed to the advantages it affords for the shipment of coal, brought from the extensive collieries at Fordell by means of a private railway five miles in length. At the pier here, which has been extended at a cost of from £4,000 to £5,000, upwards of 500 tons of coal can be shipped daily; and there is an average depth of 18 feet at high water, being greater than that of any other port on this part of the coast, admitting vessels of upwards of 600 tons to receive their cargoes at the pier. The nearest railway station is Inverkeithing, a mile and a half distant. The northern part of the parish is rich in coal, of which great quantities are exported from St. David's. Fordell House is a seat of the Earl of Buckinghamshire. The Earl of Moray, Major W. Mowbray and the trustees of the late George W. Mercer Henderson esq. are the principal landowners. The village of Crossgates is partly in Dalgetty. The area comprises 3,341 acres; rateable value, £9,513 11s. 10d.; population in 1911, 1,206 civil and 405 ecclesiastical.

Post Office, St. David's; John Dunne, sub-postmaster. Letters received through Inverkeithing, Fifeshire, which is the nearest money order & telegraph office, 2 miles distant DUNBOG is a parish extending along the southern shore of the Firth of Tay for about 1 mile, and running inland in a southerly direction for 4 miles; the parish is 6 miles north-west from Cupar. The nearest station is Lindores, on the Newburgh and North Fife railway, 1½ miles distant. The parish is bounded south by Monimail, north and north-east by Flisk and Creich and west by Abdie. It consists of a valley lying between two ridges of the Ochil Hills. There is an Established church and a Parish Hall. Aytoun Hill is the residence of Edward Fullerton Carnegie esq. The Marquis of Zetland K.T. Edward Fullerton Carnegie esq. and Alexander Niven esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is of a rich black mould, which produces abundant crops of every description. The area comprises 3,471 acres; rateable value £3,170; population in 1911, 301 in the civil parish and 335 in the ecclesiastical parish, including part of Flisk parish for ecclesiastical, school and registration purposes.

DUNFERMLINE

DUNFERMLINE is a parish, city and royal burgh, the seat of a presbytery, the head of a poor combination and small debt court district and the chief town in the western part of Fifeshire. It is 16 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 47 north-east from Glasgow, 31 south-south-west from Cupar, 14 east from Alloa, 21 south-by-east from Stirling, 15 south-west from Kirkcaldy and 6 north from North Queensferry, and is situate on rising ground, 3 miles north from the Firth of Forth and 300 feet above the level at Limekilns, the nearest part of the coast. Thus elevated, it commands a prospect remarkably varied and beautiful, extending over fourteen different counties, and comprises a fine marine view on the south: its salubrious position making it one of the healthiest cities in Scotland. There are two stations here, the upper on the Dunfermline branch of the North British railway and the lower on the main line from Inverness and Perth to Edinburgh; another line, about 4 miles in length, from this place to Charlestown, is used principally for the conveyance of coal for shipment at that port, but a passenger service of trains has also been established. The West of Fife mineral railway runs from the town north into the rich mineral district, which contains immense quantities of coal, ironstone and limestone, and there is a line to Kincardine and one between Dunfermline and Edinburgh by North Queensferry and across the Forth by means of the Forth Bridge, which was finished in 1890, and opened by His late Majesty, Edward VII. then Prince of Wales, March 4th of that year. By Local Government (Scotland) Act, which took effect May 15, 1911, the boundary of the parish of Dunfermline was extended and now includes Rosyth, formerly in Inverkeithing. The early history of this city is varied and interesting. Malcolm Canmore, who ascended the Scottish throne in 1057, besides founding the monastery of Dunfermline, built a strong tower on a height in the adjacent glen, from which this place derives its name and dates its existence. The burgh of Dunfermline, it appears, was held of the monastery, which formerly possessed paramount jurisdiction and exclusive privileges here for nearly two centuries, and it became a royal burgh by a charter from James VI. dated 24th May, 1588. In this document the monarch ratifies sundry charters, donations and indentures, by John and Robert, abbots of Dunfermline, particularly one dated the 10th of October, 1395, by which the abbot and convent renounce in favour of the aldermen and community the whole income of the burgh belonging to their revenue, with the small customs, profits of courts &c., "reserving, however, the power of punishment, should any of the magistrates be guilty of injustice in the exercise of their office." In 1724 the burgh was placed on the footing it still maintains as respects its government, which is vested in a provost, four bailies, and a dean of guild, together with a treasurer, a chamberlain, a town clerk, and 15 councillors, elected pursuant to the terms of the Municipal Reform Act. Under the "Representation of the People Act, 1918," Dunfermline, together with Cowdenbeath, Inverkeithing and Lochgelly, forms the Dunfermline District of Burghs, returning one member to parliament. Dunfermline is also the seat of the sheriff substitute for the western district of Fife, who holds a regular court on the first and third Tuesday of every month during session. Burgh courts are held daily if required in the Corporation buildings. James VI. here subscribed the first covenant, and Charles I. was born in the palace which had been added to the old Royal Tower of Malcolm Canmore, the south-west wall of which still remains; here also Charles II. signed the Dunfermline declaration. In 1873, by a decision of the House of Lords, the ruins and a portion of the grounds adjoining were apportioned to the Crown, but admission is granted to the public.

The city consists of streets stretching from east to west, with a number of smaller streets crossing down hill at right angles, or proceeding in a northerly direction, and of late years has been greatly enlarged by the extension of the cross streets and the addition of a large suburb to the west and east. It is well supplied with water, the Corporation having obtained an Act of Parliament in 1876 to ensure a plentiful supply from Glensherrup, the works costing about £70,000. The streets are lighted with gas. There is an efficient fire brigade, with quarters in Campbell street, and fire plugs on the gravitation principle are placed at numerous points throughout the streets and lanes. There is a service of electric cars to some of the outlying districts. The sewage of the city is conveyed by means of pipes to the sea at Charlestown, a distance of three miles. The plans were prepared by Mr. J. L. Stewart C.E. Edinburgh, and the cost of the undertaking was about £7,000.

The constantly increasing population and prosperity of Dunfermline may be entirely ascribed to its manufacture of table linens and damask goods. This branch of industry was started about the commencement of last century, and is carried on here to a greater extent than in any other town in Great Britain, many firms being engaged in this business. There are several large factories where power-loom weaving is carried on. It is said that the chest of the Incorporation of Weavers contains two curious specimens of their art—a man's shirt and a woman's shift, both wrought in the loom without seam, and without the assistance of a needle. Here are also large fire-clay works, and the Fife Coal Co. Limited, at Crossgates, as well as iron and brass foundries and engineering works. The coal trade in the neighbourhood is very extensive, and large quantities are annually exported. About 4,000 men are employed in connection with the collieries. Eight branch banks are established here, in addition to a Savings Bank, for which a fine building has been erected in East Port, at a cost of £3,000. There are five newspapers, namely, the "Dunfermline Press," the "Dunfermline Journal," the "Dunfermline Express," the "West Fife Echo" and the "Rosyth and Forth Mail." The public park, at the east end of the town, extends over between 30 and 40 acres, is finely laid out and planted with trees, and has a polished granite fountain, given by the late Provost Donald, and a band-stand with a gilt dome, the gift of Mrs. Carnegie. The park, on a clear day, commands a fine view of Edinburgh and the Firth of Forth.

The Town House, in Kirkgate, on the site of the Old Town House, was begun in 1875 and finished in 1879, at a cost of about £20,000. The building, which presents a combination of the French and Scotch Gothic styles, is from a design by Mr. J. C. Walker, Edinburgh, and has two frontages, and at the north-east angle is a tower, 150 feet, containing a clock with four illuminated dials, and striking the hours on a bell, weighing 33 cwt. The exterior is adorned with carvings of the royal Scottish and burgh arms, and has also canopied niches with busts representing Malcolm Canmore and Queen Margaret and King Robert the Bruce and Elizabeth, his second queen, all of whom are buried in the abbey. On the Kirkgate front are eight carved stone panels from the old Town House, some of which are said to have originally belonged to the old market cross of 1620. The interior of the building includes a burgh court room and a council chamber, and offices for the town clerk and other officials of the burgh. The County buildings, on the south side of the High street, are in the Classic style, and include a tower with spire 132 feet; they contain a sheriff court room, justice of peace court room, and a suite of rooms for the sheriff, sheriff clerk, procurator fiscal and other county officials. In 1903, the late Andrew Carnegie esq. of Skibo, Dornoch, presented Dunfermline with Pittencrieff Park and Glen, and with 2,500,000 dollars in 5 per cent. bonds, which yield an annual income of £25,000; in 1911 he gave a further sum of £250,000. The trustees, in addition to laying out the park and glen and providing entertainments, have established a college of hygiene and physical training, a gymnasium, baths, a school of music, an arts and crafts school, a women's institute, horticultural exhibitions, and libraries and recreation rooms. The Trust is administered by 25 trustees, 16 nominated by the founder for life or until resignation, 6 by the Town Council (annually) and 3 by the School Management Committee of the Fife Education Authority triennially. In Pittencrieff Park is a statue of the late Andrew Carnegie esq. erected by his fellow citizens in grateful appreciation of his many gifts to his native city, 1914. The Post Office, a building in Queen Anne street, stands on the site of the old High school. The Carnegie Public Baths, in Pilmuir street, were erected in 1875 by a gift of £5,000 from the late Andrew Carnegie esq. LL.D. of Skibo Castle, and a native of Dunfermline, from designs prepared by Mr. Andrew Scobie, architect, of Dunfermline. New baths and a gymnasium were erected in 1905 in Pilmuir street, at a cost of about £45,000, given by the late Andrew Carnegie esq. from designs by Mr. Hippolyte J. Blanc, architect, of Edinburgh. The memorial stone was laid by Mrs. Carnegie, on the 16th July, 1902. The Carnegie Public Library, in Abbot street, was erected in 1881-3, at a cost of £8,000, also given by the late Mr. A. Carnegie, and is a building in the Domestic Tudor style, from plans prepared by Mr. J. C. Walker, architect, of Edinburgh. The library comprises 28,000 volumes, and there are reading rooms for ladies and gentlemen, recreation and smoke rooms and lavatories. The library is now enlarged and reconstructed at a cost of £22,000. The memorial stone was laid July 27th, 1881, and the building was opened by the Earl of Rosebery, August 29th, 1883. In accordance with the provisions of the Public Libraries Act the library is managed by a committee; at Townhill, a neighbouring village, is a Branch Institute and Library, opened in 1906, with reading, recreation and billiard rooms, and during the summer outdoor recreation is provided by bowling greens &c. Another Branch Institute and Library was opened at Baldridgeburn in 1909, and a further Branch Institute was completed at Kingseat, 1910, with a library formed mainly of books from the Central Library, and there is also the Nethertown Institute. St. Margaret's Hall, in St. Margaret street, was begun in 1876, and completed in 1878, at a cost of about £12,000, from plans prepared by Mr. Starforth, Edinburgh; the style is an adaptation of Early English, and the building contains a large hall, seating 1,400 persons, another seating 300, and several committee and board rooms. In the large hall is a splendid organ, purchased and presented by the ladies of the town and district at a cost of over £1,300. The building belongs to the St. Margaret's Hall Company Limited. The principal hotels are the City, in Bridge street and the Royal, in High street. The Dunfermline and West Fife Hospital, in Nethertown Broad street, containing 20 beds, was erected at a cost of about £4,500, and opened on September 1st, 1894, and since enlarged; it is supported by voluntary subscriptions; the hospital was enlarged in 1903, and now has 54 beds. The West Fife Joint Hospital for Infectious Diseases, situated at the west end of the town, was opened on Nov. 1st, 1894, and is maintained by the Dunfermline committee of the West Fife County Council, and local authorities of the burghs of Dunfermline, Inverkeithing, Culross and Cowdenbeath, and contains 120 beds.

The Abbey, the church of which is now the Parish Kirk of the burgh, was founded as a Priory of Benedictines on the site of a Culdee cell in 1080 by Malcolm Canmore, who was buried in the church in 1093; there must have been a church here previous to 1080, as King Malcolm is said to have been married at Dunfermline in 1070 to Margaret, sister of Edgar Atheling: in 1124 it was created an abbey, and in 1224 the abbot received the mitre, but in 1304 most of the abbey buildings were burnt by order of King Edward I. At the Reformation in 1560, the remaining buildings and church, except the nave, which the "New Religion" reserved for their own parish kirk, were destroyed, and only this have remained until 1821, when a new parish kirk, consisting of chancel, transept and a central tower, 100 feet in height, was added to the east of the nave: the west doorway of the old church, between the two western towers, is Norman, and above it is a fine Decorated window; the Norman nave is of eight bays, with a north porch containing a rich Norman doorway; the transept, central tower and choir comprising the present church are in a modern Gothic style, and beneath the tower the remains of King Robert Bruce have been re-interred; the nave contains 17 other royal tombs, besides those of the Regents, Thomas, Earl of Moray, and Robert, Duke of Albany: on the south side of the church are some remains of the refectory and cells. The tower has the words "King Robert the Bruce" in massive stone letters, four feet high, round the four sides at the summit. The parish church has been collegiate and under the care of two ministers since 1645. There are other Established and United Free and Roman Catholic churches, besides Baptist and Congregational chapels. The Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity is in Viewfield place: the Rev. Leopold Octavius Critchley M.A., B.Sc. of Edinburgh University, has been rector since 1908.

The Grammar School, instituted towards the end of the 15th century, was, in 1873, by the operation of "The Education (Scotland) Act, 1872," transferred to the burgh School Board, the interest of the original sum of £2,000, which belonged to the school, being made over annually to that body. In 1877 the board, with the approval of the Board of Education, converted the school into one for the imparting of higher or secondary education. The present building was erected in Buchanan street at a cost of £7,500, and the school transferred to it in January, 1886. By the Education Scotland Act, 1918, the school was transferred to the Fife Education Authority. Adjoining is an annexe for Technical Instruction, erected in 1899 by the munificence of the late Mr. Carnegie, at a cost of £10,000, and extended in 1910 at a cost of about £11,000. The board have also erected a school in the west end of the town at a cost of £4,136, and a central school has been substituted for the Rolland and Commercial schools, at a cost of £5,143. A new infants' department was built in 1895 at an estimated cost of £2,800. There is also a school originally erected in connection with St. Leonard's steam power weaving factory, but which the board purchased at a cost of £1,200. In May, 1914, the Burgh and Parish School Boards were amalgamated, and there are twenty-two public schools now under the management of the Dunfermline School Committee of the Fifeshire County Council. Broomhall, the seat of the Earl of Elgin and Kincardine C.M.G. and Pitfirrane House, the seat of Lady Halkett, are in this parish. The market is held on Tuesday for grain, which is disposed of by stock and sample. The entire parish of Dunfermline comprises 21,042 statute acres; rental value of burgh, £239,959; landward, £49,128; the population in 1901 was 31,697 and in 1911, 35,731, including 28,103 in the royal burgh. Population of the wards in 1911—First, 4,983; Second, 5,760; Third, 10,541; Fourth, 6,837; Fifth, 1,821; Sixth, 3,160; Seventh, 2,647. Population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911—Parish church, 20,135 (of which 8 only were in Kinross-shire); North Church, 5,219; St. Andrew's, 4,714; St. Leonard's, 4,411. Included in the total population were 8 officials and 195 inmates in the combination poorhouse.

The population of the parliamentary burgh in 1911 was 24,855; the number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1920 was 18,017.

CROSSFORD, Halbeath, Wellwood and Milesmark are small villages and hamlets in this parish, and in the parliamentary division of West Fife, from one to three miles distant from Dunfermline. At Halbeath is a public school. At Townhill are collieries, fire-clay works, and a public school. At Wellwood are the collieries of Messrs. Thomas Spowart and Co. Limited, and a school. At Milesmark a school has been built by the joint aid of the parish and burgh late School Boards, at a cost of £3,000; this is now a public school under the management of the Dunfermline School Committee, for 400 children.

CROSSGATES is a village partly in the parish of Dalgetty and partly in this parish, 4 miles east-north-east from Dunfermline and 4 north from Inverkeithing, with a station on the North British railway. The inhabitants are principally employed in the collieries surrounding the village. There are Established and United Free churches and a public school.

DYSART is a seaport extending 3 miles from north to south and lying along the north shore of the Firth of Forth for about 2 miles east to west, and is a royal and parliamentary burgh, in the Kirkcaldy and Dysart poor combination, with a station on the Edinburgh, Thornton and Ladybank section of the North British railway. The parish was amalgamated with that of Kirkcaldy, Dec. 3rd, 1901, and is bounded on the north by Kinglassie, east by Wemyss and Markinch and west by Kirkcaldy burgh, and is within the small debt court district of Kirkcaldy. Dysart town is 2 miles north-west from Kirkcaldy, on a gentle declivity towards the Firth of Forth. The central street contains many substantial houses, and has a very ancient appearance. The streets are lighted with gas supplied by a company formed in 1843. So early as 1546 Dysart is mentioned as one of the principal trading towns on the coast of Fife. The trade now consists in the weaving of ticks, checks and similar linen fabrics, also woollens, tweeds, druggets and winceys. There are besides power-loom factories in the burgh, besides two flax spinning mills, and in the vicinity are mines of coal, extensively wrought. The harbour is very good, and there is an excellent wet dock with about 14 feet of water. Coal is the principal export. Dysart was created a royal burgh in the 15th century, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors, and, together with Kirkcaldy, Kinghorn and Burntisland, forms the Kirkcaldy parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. The most remarkable object of antiquity near the town is the castle of Ravenscraig, which stands on a steep crag, fronting the sea, within the burgh of Kirkcaldy; this castle is alluded to in Sir Walter Scott's "Lay of the Last Minstrel," under the name of Ravensheugh. It was inhabited in the time of the Commonwealth, and was assaulted by the Parliamentary troops, but has for many years been deserted, and is now ruinous. Dysart gives the title of earl to a branch of the Murrays of Tullibardine. There is an Established church, and two United Free churches. The Normand Memorial Hall, a building of stone, was erected at a cost of between £5,000 and £6,000, and presented to the town by Mrs. James Normand, in memory of her deceased husband. There is also a Mechanics' Institute, Masonic Hall, and Police station, and near the town is a golf course of 9 holes. Dysart House, formerly the residence of the Earls of Dysart, is the seat of Sir Michael Nairn bart. The area of the burgh is 238 acres; rateable value, £17,369; the population in 1901 was 3,562, and in 1911, 4,197 in the civil parish, and 14,835 in the ecclesiastical parish.

The population of the municipal parliamentary burgh in 1911 was 18,524, and the number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1921 was 2,091.

EARLSFERRY, a royal burgh, formerly in the parish of Kilconquhar, but transferred on 15th May, 1891, to that of Elie, lies at the head of Elie bay, in the civil parish of that name, which adjoins Earlsferry and is the nearest railway station, Elie possessing the harbour. The royal burgh, which is in the debt court district of Cupar, is 13 miles south-east from St. Andrews and 5 east from Largo, and remains in the ecclesiastical parish of Kilconquhar. The date of its erection into a royal burgh is uncertain, as its earliest charter was destroyed by fire in Edinburgh. A new one was granted by James IV. (1488-1513), by which all its ancient privileges were renewed and confirmed; it is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. The chief industry here is the manufacture of golf clubs and balls, but many of the inhabitants obtain a living by the letting of furnished houses through the summer. The National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited have branches at Elie. Earlsferry has in recent years been extensively rebuilt, owing to its great popularity as a summer resort; it has an excellent beach, well adapted for sea bathing on the south and west sides, and there are golf links on the north. The area is 47 acres; value of the burgh is £3,730 gross rental; population, 1911, 322.

EASTER FERNIE, see MONIMAIL.

ELIE is a parish and police burgh and seaport, with a station on the Thornton Junction, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The parish of Elie extends 3½ miles along the north shore of the Firth of Forth by about 1½ inland, and is in the Cupar debt court district. Earlsferry, formerly in the parish of Kilconquhar, was in 1891 transferred to this parish. The parish boundaries are St. Monance on the east, Kilconquhar on the north and Newburn on the west. The burgh is situated on the north-east part of Elie bay, 14 miles south-east from St. Andrews, 32 north-east from Edinburgh and 5 east from Largo, and is governed by a provost, two bailies and six councillors. There is a small, well-sheltered harbour, but no docks. The trade of the district consists in the export of potatoes. There are Established and United Free churches. The National Bank of Scotland Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited have each a branch here. There are golf links both for ladies and gentlemen, and a good beach, and, in conjunction with Earlsferry, this place is a favourite summer resort. In one of the streets near the sea are several ancient and substantial residences, evidently once occupied by families of distinction. At the lower end of the parish, close to the sea coast, is the hill of Kincraig, which rises to a height of 200ft. above the level of the sea, and its rocky slopes contain several large caves. Elie House, the residence of William James Baird esq. is a fine mansion of stone standing in good grounds. William James Baird esq. is the principal landowner. The area comprises 1,990 acres; area of burgh, 80 acres; rateable value for the burgh, £8,595; and landward, £4,105; population of the parish in 1911, 1,147, including 672 in the police burgh of Elie, and 322 in Earlsferry burgh.

Post, M. O., T. & T. E. D. Office; Miss Mary Clark, postmistress. Letters should have Fifeshire added to them

Williamsburgh and Liberty are small hamlets in the parish and form part of the police burgh.

FALKLAND is a royal burgh and parish, with a station on the Thornton, Ladybank and Dundee section of the North British railway, 2½ miles east of the burgh, and known as Falkland Road. The burgh lies 25 miles north from Edinburgh, 15 south-east from Perth and 10 south-west from Cupar. The parish extends 6 miles from east to west by 4 broad, and is bounded north by Auchtermuchty, west by Strathmiglo, south by Leslie and Markinch, and east by Kettle. The town was erected into a burgh by James II. in 1453, and its charter was confirmed and renewed by James VI. in 1595. The government consists of a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, a town clerk and nine councillors. Falkland consists principally of one street, the eastern part of which is broad and spacious, but towards the west is narrow. The few good houses are of an antique character, somewhat in keeping with the architecture of the palace, a building for a long time only a ruin, but rescued from total decay and repaired by the late Mr. Bruce of Nuthill, and since 1895 restored at the expense of the late Marquis of Bute K.T. The royal family of Scotland resided here occasionally up to the time of Charles II. who called here on his return from the continent in 1650. James V. died here in 1542. In the old castle of Falkland, David Stewart, Duke of Rothesay, eldest son of Robert III. was confined, and here he died, 27 March, 1402. Sir Walter Scott, in his "Fair Maid of Perth," wove in the traditional story. In 1715, it is said, the famous Rob Roy garrisoned the palace with a party of Macgregors, and laid the country under heavy contributions. The house in which Richard Cameron, the Covenanter, was born, is still standing. The manufacture of linen and floorcloth is carried on here. A town hall was erected in 1804, in which balls and other public assemblages take place. A large common, which belongs to Falkland, and on which the inhabitants had a right to turn their cattle &c. was in 1818 divided among the heritors, and is now nearly all enclosed. The parish church, erected by the late O. T. Bruce esq. at an expense of £7,000, is a fine structure, with a tower and spire. There are also United Free and Roman Catholic churches. A monument to Mr. Bruce has been erected on Black Hill, near the Lomonds, and in the square behind the palace is a memorial to Col. Robert Bruce, and John Bruce, king's printer for Scotland. The House of Falkland, erected by the late Mr. Bruce, and one of the finest mansions in the county, is now, with the estates, the property of the trustees of Michael Duncan David Crichton-Stuart, heir to the late Lord Ninian Edward Crichton-Stuart, and is occupied by the Hon. Mrs. A. Maule Ramsay. The Lomond hills in this district are cone-shaped; the eastern Lomond, which is the most regular and beautiful, is about 1,335 feet above the level of the sea, and appears to have been fortified. The western Lomond is 1,450 feet, and has on its top a large cairn. The trustees of Michael Duncan David Crichton-Stuart, Charles J. Maitland-Makgill-Crichton and Edward Balfour esq. D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. There is a War Memorial Institute in the burgh with reading room and billiard room, opened in October, 1920. The area comprises 8,179 acres; rateable value of parish, £16,123; area of burgh, 346 acres; rateable value, £3,235; population, 1911, of civil parish, 2,356, including 830 in the royal burgh, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 1,369. Population of wards: First, 830; Second, 987; Third, 539.

FREUCHIE is a village in this parish and quoad sacra parish. The manufacture of linen is carried on here, and there are Established and United Free churches, a Reading Room and a Subscription Library. There is also a public school. Falkland Road is the nearest railway station, one mile distant. Population in 1911, 987.

NEWTON OF FALKLAND is a hamlet about midway between Falkland and Freuchie, where there is an extensive trade carried on in brewing. Falkland Road is the nearest railway station, 2 miles distant.

FORDELL, see DALGETTY.

FORGAN parish extends for about 5 miles in length and about 2½ in breadth, along the south bank of the Firth of Tay, exactly opposite the town of Dundee. It is bounded by Ferry-Port-on-Craig on the east, Balmerino on the west, Kilmany and Logie on the south west and Leuchars on the south, and is in the small debt court district of Cupar. It contains the town of Newport, which has three stations (East and West Newport and Wormit) on the North British railway. A little north of Wormit station is the Tay railway bridge, connecting the southern lines with Dundee. The parish church of Forgan is nearly two miles inland, being 9½ miles north-east from Cupar and the same distance north-west from St. Andrews. The landward part of the parish is richly wooded and well cultivated. The mansion house of St. Fort, in this parish, is occupied by Reginald M. Pilkington esq. and about 1 mile west from Newport pier is the small harbour of Woodhaven, off which the industrial ship "Mars" is moored. The principal landowners are David Gillespie esq. Marquess of Zetland K.T., P.C. William Berry esq. O.B.E., J.P. Lieut.-Col. Henry Scrymgeour-Wedderburn and the trustees of the late Mrs. Jane F. Stewart. The area comprises 5,203 acres; rateable value, £32,772, which includes the burgh of Newport; the population in 1911 was 4,771, being Newport burgh 3,643, landward 1,128, including 246 on ships of the Royal Navy and 381 on the training ship "Mars."

INVERKEITHING is a burgh and parish and seaport on the north shore of the Firth of Forth, in the poor combination and small debt court district of Dunfermline. The town is a royal and parliamentary burgh, with a station on the main line of the North British railway, the Forth railway bridge terminating at North Queensferry in this parish. The burgh is 11 miles north-west from Edinburgh, 13 south-west from Kirkcaldy and 4 south-east from Dunfermline, and occupies a slight hill sloping up from the north-west side of Inverkeithing Bay, commanding an extensive view of the south side of the Forth. The parish extends 6 miles from north to south by 3 miles broad; the outlying portion having been transferred by Boundary Order 67 to Dunfermline, a detached portion of the parish of Dunfermline at North Queensferry being at the same time attached to Inverkeithing. By Local Government (Scotland) Act No. 54, sec. 51, and to take effect from May 15th, 1914, a western portion of the parish lying within the extended boundaries of the burgh of Dunfermline was disjointed from the parish of Inverkeithing and added to the parish of Dunfermline. This burgh, together with Dunfermline, Cowdenbeath and Lochgelly, forms the Dunfermline parliamentary district, constituted in 1918 under the "Representation of the People Act," and returning one member. So early as the days of David I. Inverkeithing was a royal residence, and received a charter of confirmation in the reign of William the Lion, confirming charters of earlier but unknown dates; a number of intervening charters were confirmed by one from James VI. in 1598. The government is vested in a provost, or sheriff, two bailies, a dean of guild and a treasurer, elected by the councillors. The trade of the burgh consists principally of paper making. Freestone and whinstone are abundant in this neighbourhood, and of excellent quality, and considerable quantities of each are annually exported. The harbour is capacious, and the bay is noted as a place of security in all winds. The town consists chiefly of two streets, which are lighted by gas; the town house comprises a gaol and apartments for the courts. Branches of the Clydesdale Bank Limited and the National Bank of Scotland Limited are established here. There are many remains of antiquity, some of which are coeval with the earliest periods of Scottish history. Among these is the "Inns," or old Palace, which is said to have been the residence of Annabella Drummond, Queen of Robert III., who died at Inverkeithing in 1401. This Queen is supposed to have presented the burgh with its cross, on the occasion of the marriage of her son, Duke of Rothesay, in 1400, with Mary, daughter of Archibald, 3rd Earl of Douglas; the top of the cross is adorned with shields charged with the royal arms of that Queen and the Earl of Douglas. Here are Established and United Free churches, and a Baptist chapel. The parish church contains a beautiful font, said to have been the gift of Queen Annabella, and discovered in 1806, when the church was undergoing a series of repairs. The Episcopal Mission church of St. Peter is attached to Holy Trinity, Dunfermline, and affords 64 sittings. The Rev. Henry Guy Selater has been priest in charge since 1919. There is a large public school, under the School Management Committee of the Fife Education Authority, opened in 1913. A fair is held on the first Friday in August. The Earl of Elgin and Kincardine, the Admiralty Commissioners and the trustees of the late Hon. Hew A. D. H. Haldane-Duncan-Mercer-Henderson (d. 1900) are the principal landowners. The area comprises 4,027 acres; area of burgh, 193 acres; rateable value in 1920, £58,561; the population of the parish in 1901 was 3,468, and in 1911, 6,274, including 6 on Inchgarvie Island and 3,291 in the burgh, and of the ecclesiastical parish, 5,489.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1920 was 1,684.

HILLEND and Jamestown are hamlets in the parish of Inverkeithing.

NORTH QUEENSFERRY, in the parish of Inverkeithing, is 2 miles south from Inverkeithing, and is well known to travellers as the port and point of land opposite to Queensferry (or South Queensferry), in Linlithgowshire, and a steamer passes between the two several times daily. Here is a United Free church. The Forth bridge, which carries the North British railway over the Firth of Forth, was opened by his late Majesty King Edward VII. then Prince of Wales, on the 4th of March, 1890, the cost of its erection being about £3,000,000. Two of the spans of this gigantic undertaking are 1,710 feet in length, and have a height of 150 feet above high water at spring tides. There are two other spans of 680 feet, fifteen of 168 feet, four of 57 feet and three of 25 feet each; the total length with the viaduct approaches is a mile and a half (for full particulars see Queensferry, Linlithgowshire). By its erection the direct journey north can be taken without break, whereas formerly passengers had to cross the Forth by ferry from Granton to Burntisland. A short distance to the west of the village is the anchorage ground, resorted to by vessels in stress of weather or contrary winds, called "Saint Margaret's Hope." Here is a fishing ground for a kind of sprat, of which quantities are taken. There are also large whinstone quarries, employing a number of men. Population in 1911, 971.

The population of Inchgarvie Island in 1911 was 6.

KETTLE (KINGSKETTLE) is a parish, including the village of Kingskettle, which is situated 4 miles east from Falkland and 17 south from Dundee, with a station, called Kingskettle, on the main line of the North British railway. The parish extends about 9 miles east to west by 3 broad; is in the small debt court district of Cupar, and is bounded north by Collessie and Cults, east by Largo, south by Kennoway and Markinch, and west by Falkland. The name of Kingskettle, by which the village is now called, has arisen from its being the property of the Crown. There are Established and United Free churches. This district forms a large portion of the rich and beautiful territory on the north side of the Bow of Fife. The river Eden bounds the parish on nearly the whole of the northern side. The manufacture of linen is the principal trade carried on here. A fire engine is maintained here by public subscription; the brigade consists of a superintendent, captain and seven firemen. The cemetery, opened in 1896, is under the management of the Parish Council, and contains a beautiful marble monument, erected by H. V. Haig esq. of Ramornie, to the memory of his wife, Archie Anne Lindsay Fraser. Edward Balfour esq. D.L., J.P. Lieut.-Col. Oliver Haig J.P. & Alexander Lawson esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 7,589 acres; rateable value, £11,170; population in 1911, 1,715.

KETTLEBRIDGE is a village in this parish, about 1 mile south of the church, and about half a mile from the village is the hamlet of Balmalcolm, where there is a United Free church.

KILCONQUHAR is a parish and village, with a station on the Thornton junction, Anstruther and St. Andrew's section, of the North British railway, is 4 miles east of Largo and 10 south of St. Andrew's. The parish is in the small debt court district of Anstruther, and contains the village of Colinsburgh (which see); it extends about 6 miles from north to south by a breadth varying from 2 to 3 miles, and is bounded south by Elie, west by Newburn and Largo, north by Ceres and Cameron, and east by Carnbree. Until the 15th May, 1891, the royal burgh of Earlsferry was in Kilconquhar parish, but the Boundary Commissioners then transferred a detached portion of Elie parish (consisting of Muircambus and part of Charlston estates) to Kilconquhar, and in exchange gave to Elie parish all the land formerly belonging to Kilconquhar to the south of Cockle Mill Burn and the North British railway. This area included the burgh of Earlsferry, which now forms part of Elie parish. Coal and lime are found in the parish. The parish church has a fine square tower 80 feet high. Balcarres House, the seat of the Earl of Crawford and Balcarres P.C. and about one mile north of Colinsburgh, is a mansion in the Tudor style, situated on a southern slope about 3 miles from the sea-coast; Kilconquhar House is the residence of the Earl of Lindsay, and Charleton House, of Col. C. F. St.-Clair Anstruther M.V.O., D.S.O. Balcarres Craig, near Balcarres House, is a remarkable hill, rising abruptly 200 feet above the level of the land. Kilconquhar Loch is a fine sheet of water, three-quarters of a mile in length and nearly the same in breadth, and about 2 miles in circumference, with two small islands, which harbour swans and wild fowl. The Earl of Crawford and the Earl of Lindsay, Col. C. F. St. Clair Anstruther M.V.O., D.S.O. William Baird esq. and the trustees of the late David Adams esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 6,633 acres; rateable value, £13,312 (gross). The population in 1911 was 1,419 in the civil parish and 1,423 in the ecclesiastical parish.

KILMANY is a parish and village, the latter 5 miles north of Cupar, and 5 south-west of Newport. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Cupar, extends 6 miles from north-east to south-west by a breadth varying from 1 to 3 miles; it is bounded north by Balmerino, north-east by Forgan, east by Logie, south by Cupar and west by Creich. Here is a station on the Dundee and Newburgh section of the North British railway. There are Established and Free churches. With the exception of a few acres which are chiefly woodland, the entire parish is in a high state of cultivation, being well watered and drained by numerous streams. In 1680, David Hackston, at that time proprietor of the estate of Rathillet and a bigoted leader of the Covenanters, was executed for complicity in the murder of Archbishop Sharpe, of St. Andrews. Lieut.-Col. Henry A. Bethune J.P. and Lieut.-Col. William Anstruther-Gray J.P. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 5,340 acres; rateable value, £8,007; population, 1911, 476.

RATHILLET is a village in the parish of Kilmany about 3 miles from St. Fort railway station.

KILRENNY is a royal burgh, also a parish, and contains the port and village of Cellardyke. The burgh is 1 mile north-east of Anstruther Easter, 3 south-west from Crail, and 11 south-east from St. Andrews. The nearest station is at Anstruther, on the North British railway. The parish extends 3 miles along the shore of the Firth of Forth, by 2 inland, and is bounded on the west by Anstruther Easter and Carnbee, north by Airdrie and east by Crail; it is in the small debt court district of Anstruther. The coast here is one continued range of rocks, with two small creeks, which form the harbour of Anstruther, and the port of Cellardyke, or Nether Kilrenny, while the burgh of Kilrenny is composed of Upper and Nether Kilrenny, or Cellardyke, and is governed by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer and six councillors. There is an Established church. The Town Hall, which includes council, reading and amusement rooms, was erected and presented to the burgh by Stephen Williamson esq. and the representatives of the late James Fowler esq. Col. Sir Thomas W. H. J. Erskine bart. David W. Clement esq. Andrew Morris esq. William James Baird esq. David Gibb esq. William Fleming esq. and Edwin R. J. Sandys-Lumsdaine esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,773 acres; rateable value, burghal, £5,889; and of the parish, including part of Anstruther Easter, £11,657. The population of the entire parish in 1911 was 2,979, 2,557 being in the burgh of Kilrenny and 156 in the burgh of Anstruther. Population of ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 1,181.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1920 was 1,203.

The village and quoad sacra parish of CELLARDYKE (or Nether Kilrenny) is an extensive fishing village, but forming part of the burgh of Kilrenny. There is a small harbour for fishing boats. Here are an Established church and a United Free Church hall. Cellardyke is specially noted for its oil clothing, fishing material, and net manufacturing, a considerable number of persons being employed in these industries. Canvas buoys were first made here, A. Black and Co. being the patentees and inventors. The greater number of the inhabitants are fishermen, about 200 boats and 50 drifters belonging to the place. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 1,798.

KINCAPLE, see ST. ANDREWS.

KINCARDINE (or Kincardine-on-Forth) is a town on the north bank of the Firth of Forth, and in the parish of Tulliallan, transferred to this county by a Local Government Order in December, 1890, having up to that time been included in Perthshire. The town is a seaport, 15 miles west from North Queensferry and 5 south-east from Alloa, and has three stations on the North British railway. At one time this place was called "West Pans," from the salt works established in it, but these have long ceased to exist. The town, although irregularly built and the streets narrow, contains some good houses. There is an Established church and a United Free church, and a branch of the Union Bank of Scotland Limited.

KINGHORN is a seaport and a royal police burgh and contributory parliamentary burgh, also a parish, 3 miles south from Kirkcaldy, and 2½ east-by-north from Burntisland, and has a station on the Edinburgh, Thornton and Dundee section of the North British railway. The parish is 4½ miles in extent from north to south by about 4 wide; it is in the poor combination of Kirkcaldy and Dysart and small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and is bounded south by Burntisland, west by Aberdour and Auchtertool, and north by Kirkcaldy and Dysart. Kinghorn was invested with the privileges of a royal burgh by King David I. (1124-53), and about that time was said to have been a royal residence. It is governed by a provost, two bailies, a treasurer, and six councillors. The burgh, in conjunction with those of Dysart, Kirkcaldy and Burntisland, to which were added in 1918 Buckhaven with Methil and Innerleven, forms the Kirkcaldy parliamentary district, returning one member. There are two principal streets in the town, one running from east to west, and the other from south to north. The harbour has fallen to decay, and the nearest existing harbour is now at Pettycur, about half a mile distant. There is an ancient Established church, which has been restored at a cost of £3,000, and a United Free church. The Town House is a good building, and there is a library and museum at the school, and a sub-branch of the British Linen Bank. In 1887 the municipal authorities purchased Links Park, adjoining the town, for public and recreation grounds, at a cost of £1,050, and expended in addition £300 in laying out the golf course and bowling green, and in 1903 Castle Rigland was purchased, at a cost of £2,400, thus extending the golf course to 18 holes. A golf club house was erected in 1894, facing the links. About a mile to the eastward of Kinghorn and near the coast, is the Kirkcaldy Combination Poorhouse for the parishes of Kirkcaldy, Dysart, Burntisland and Kinghorn. About 1 mile from Kinghorn, on the Burntisland road, is a monument in the form of a Celtic cross, erected to commemorate the death of Alexander III., who was killed by falling from his horse in 1286. The inscription reads, "To the Illustrious Alexander III., the last of Scotland's Celtic Kings, who was accidentally killed near this spot, March 19th, MCCLXXXVI. Erected on the Sexcentenary of his death."

The island of INCHKEITH forms part of the parish of Kinghorn, distant about three miles from Pettycur. It has a large harbour, erected by the government at a considerable cost, and a lighthouse with a revolving light on the highest point of land standing 235 feet above the sea level. Certain writers say Inchkeith was so called from an old noble family named Keith, while others connect it with Guidi. Here, they supposed, was raised the town or fortress of Guida, described by Bede, more than 1,100 years ago, as situated in the middle of the great arm of the sea which runs into Britain from the east. About the year 700 a church or monastery, founded by St. Adamnan, successor to St. Columba in the abbacy of Iona, was erected on the island. Inchkeith was seized by the English in 1547, and a fort built on it, but during the regency of Mary, queen of James V. it was captured by the French.

The area of the parish comprises 5,333 acres; rateable value of landward, £10,111; burgh, £11,905; population in 1901, 3,400, and in 1911, 2,295, of whom 1,549 were in the burgh, and 41 on Inchkeith Island. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 2,259. Included in the civil population were 7 officials and 60 inmates in Kirkcaldy Combination poorhouse. The area of the burgh is 325 acres; rateable value, £11,905.

The number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1920 was 1,112.

KINGLASSIE is a parish and village, the latter 3 miles south from Leslie, 4½ north-east from Lochgelly, and 3 north from Cardenden station on the Dunfermline and Thornton Junction section of the North British railway; there is also a station at Leslie on a branch line from Markinch. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of Kirkcaldy, and extends 5 miles from east to west by a width of 2 to 4 miles, is bounded north by Leslie and Portmoak, west by Auchterderran, south by Dysart, and east by Markinch. It is watered by the Lochty and the Ore, tributary streams of the Leven. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in mining. There are Established, Free and United Free churches. A Public Hall was erected in 1896, at a cost of £3,000, by the late Mr. Alexander Mitchell, of Redwells, and is now held by the Parish Council for behoof of the inhabitants. A fair is entitled to be held on third Wednesday in May, and on the Thursday before Michaelmas (o.s.). A large pit has been sunk by the Fife Coal Co. at a cost of over £200,000. Mrs. MacNab is the principal landowner. The area comprises 8,415 acres; rateable value, £22,240; population in 1901 1,478, and in 1911 1,944 in the civil parish and 1,649 in the ecclesiastical parish.

KINGSBARNS is a parish and village, the latter 3 miles north-west of Crail and 7 south-east of St. Andrews, with a station on the Thornton, Anstruther and St. Andrews section of the North British railway. The parish, which is in the small debt court district of St. Andrews, extends 3½ miles from north to south by 3 in breadth, is bounded north by St. Andrews and St. Leonards, west and south by Crail and east by the North Sea. Originally Kingsbarns formed part of Crail, but was separated from that parish in 1631. Here is an Established church. Pitmilly, a very ancient seat, stands in the northern part of the parish. Cambo, the seat of Lt.-Col. Sir Thomas Wilfred Hargreaves J. Erskine bart. D.S.O. is in the south portion of the parish. Charleton J. B. Monypenny esq. James Cheape esq. D.L. Lt.-Col. Sir Thomas Wilfred Hargreaves John Erskine bart. D.S.O. and Edmond de Haya Paterson-Balfour Hay esq. are the principal landowners. The area comprises 3,870 acres; rateable value, £7,416; population in 1911, 638 civil and 663 ecclesiastical parishes.

KIRKCALDY,

WITH ABBOTSHALL, CHAPEL, PATHHEAD, SINCLAIRTOWN AND GALLATOWN.

KIRKCALDY is a royal, parliamentary and police burgh, a seaport and parish, in the Kirkcaldy and Dysart poor combination and of a small debt court district, with a station on the Edinburgh, Thornton and Ladybank section of the North British railway, 12 miles east of Dunfermline. The burgh of Kirkcaldy is 3 miles in extent from north to south, by one mile wide, and is bounded north and east by Dysart, south by Kinghorn, and north and west by Auchterderran; the parish extends along the northern shores of the Firth of Forth, at the base of a range of rising ground for upwards of 3 miles. By an Act of Parliament the suburbs of Abbotshall, Pathhead, Gallatown and Sinclairtown are comprised within the boundaries of the burgh, as are also the quoad sacra parishes of St. James, Invertiel, Raith and Pathhead. On the 3rd of December, 1901, the parishes of Kirkcaldy, Dysart, Abbotshall, and a part of that of Kinghorn were amalgamated and are now under the Kirkcaldy and Dysart Parish Council. The civic government of the town, which was made a royal burgh by Charles I. is vested in a town council consisting of 27 members, including a provost and admiral of the burgh and harbour, four bailies, a dean of guild and a treasurer. The council are also commissioners of police under the General Police Act, and local authority under the Health Act. The management of the harbour has been vested since 1904 in the Town Council, and in the same year considerable extensions were commenced which were finished in 1909. The burgh, together with Kinghorn, Dysart, Burntisland and the united burgh of Methil, Buckhaven & Innerleven added under the "Representation of the People Act, 1918," forms the Kirkcaldy parliamentary district, constituted in 1708, and returning one member. The sheriff holds a court every Wednesday. The justices of the peace sit here for the trial of offences within the Kirkcaldy district of county, and here also hold licensing courts; this is also the meeting place for the County Council of the district. When Charles I. erected Kirkcaldy into a royal burgh, it had, according to tradition, 100 ships belonging to it, and ranked as the sixth place of maritime importance in Scotland; but in 1673 the number of vessels in its possession had decreased considerably. On the return of peace in 1763, the trade of the port revived, and the number of shipping consequently increased and progressively augmented, so that in 1792 it boasted 26 vessels; from this period Kirkcaldy has gradually risen into repute, both as a port and a manufacturing town. The principal importations are cork, linseed oil, whiting, potters' clay, grain &c.; the exports are floor cloth, linoleum, linen, yarn, machinery and coal. The new dock was opened in 1909, and has an area of 4½ acres, 21 feet of water over the sill at ordinary spring tide and 15 feet at neap. The tidal basin ebbs to 5 feet; the quayage extends over 1,000 yards, and a branch from the main line of railway traverses the entire length of the harbour. In 1918 the number of vessels that entered the port in the coasting trade was 62 of 11,751 tonnage, and 57 cleared of 19,774 tons. In 1918 62 vessels, aggregating 2,847 tons, were registered in this port; the number of fishing boats registered at the port was 218, aggregating 3,128 tons. Fishing boats and their implements are to be distinguished by the letters K. Y. There is a customs and mercantile marine office here, also an excise office. The prominent trade of Kirkcaldy and neighbourhood bears an intimate affinity with that of Dundee, consisting of the spinning of flax, tow, jute, and the weaving of linen goods for home and foreign consumption; striped hollands, dowlas, ticks, checks, sailcloths &c. are amongst the fabrics produced, and in the manufacture of which there are several extensive power-loom factories in full operation; there are also several bleaching fields and dye works, and also china and earthenware factories, where a superior class of goods is made. Kirkcaldy is now the centre of the floor cloth and linoleum manufacture of the kingdom. The other branches include brass and iron founding, machine and steel pipe, cabinet, fishing net and rope and twine making, and a considerable corn, malt and meal trade. The town, owing to its disproportionate length, has from an early period been styled "the lang toon o' Kirkcaldy," but it now comprises many well-built cross streets and detached dwellings. Electric tramways and lighting are provided by the Corporation, who have a large power station in Victoria road; the principal streets were lighted with arc lamps and private consumers supplied in December, 1902; other streets being lighted with gas; and an overhead system of tramways was opened for traffic in Feb. 1903. The streets are paved. The Town Hall, erected in 1829, contains a hall for burgh and district meetings, and record room, an office for the town clerk, and other apartments. The Sheriff Court Buildings, in Whyte's Causeway, were opened May, 1894, at a cost of £6,000. Here the sheriff holds a court every Wednesday and other days when necessary. The district committee meetings of the County Council are also held here, and the Justice of Peace Courts. There are two good hotels, the "George," in High street, and the "Station" near the railway station. Adam Smith, author of "The Wealth of Nations," was born here 5 June, 1723. The Adam Smith Public Hall in Bennochy road also contains the Beveridge Hall and Library, built with money left for this purpose by the late Michael Beveridge esq. of Beechwood, and provost of Kirkcaldy; the library contains about 13,000 volumes. An organ was presented in 1901 by the late Andrew Carnegie esq. LL.D. of Skibo Castle. Provost Beveridge also gifted to the inhabitants a fine public park, some 100 acres in extent, with an artificial lake in the centre, which in winter is used as a skating pond. At the western end of the park is a golf course of 18 holes, and a club house was erected in 1906 at a cost of £1,000. The Burgh Police Buildings, erected in 1902-3, at a cost of £28,000, are of Grange stone in the Renaissance style, from designs by Mr. William Williamson, and contain a police court and offices for the burgh police. The Pavilion, formerly the Corn Exchange, between Market street and Cowan street, the first stone of which was laid with masonic honours in May, 1859, is the property of the Corporation, and is now used for theatricals, public meetings, concerts &c. The Opera House, in High street, was erected in 1903, and will seat 3,000 persons. The Combination Poorhouses were erected in 1849, at a cost of over £5,000, and opened May, 1850; the buildings are available for 130 inmates and are the joint property of the parishes of Kirkcaldy and Dysart, Burntisland and Kinghorn, nearly all being held by the parish of Kirkcaldy and Dysart. The management is vested in the Parish Councils; one of these is situated on the lands of Abden, in the parish of Kinghorn, and commands an extensive view of the Firth of Forth; the other at Thornton was erected in 1862, at a cost of about £6,000, and will hold 195 inmates. The Swan Memorial, a building of red stone, was erected in 1895, at the bottom of Kirkwynd, as a memorial to the late Provost Swan, and contains a set of rooms for the Young Men's Christian Association, to whom it belongs.

The parish church of Kirkcaldy, mainly re-erected in 1807, stands on rising ground in the centre of the town, the principal feature of the building being the fine Norman tower, dating from the middle of the 13th century, and formerly part of the old church of St. Brisse, dedicated in A.D. 1244: in the south porch is a marble monument to George Gillespie, one of the commissioners to the Westminster Assembly in 1643, and there are two stained windows, designed by the late Sir E. Burne-Jones bart. D.C.L. and executed by the late William Morris F.S.A. of London. The Rev. John Campbell D.D. has been minister since 1881. St. James's church, built in 1841, as a chapel for the original seceders, has belonged since 1853 to the Church of Scotland. St. Brycedale United Free Church, an edifice in the Gothic style, was erected at a cost (exclusive of the site, which is valued at about £8,000) of fully £22,000. It contains a number of memorial windows, two of which are from designs by the late Sir E. Burne-Jones bart. The other places of worship are the parish churches of Invertiel, Abbotshall, Raith, Sinclairtown and Pathhead; there are also United Free and Original Secession and Roman Catholic churches, besides Congregational, Wesleyan and Baptist chapels. The Episcopal church of St. Peter is in Townsend place; the Rev. Arthur Inglis M.A. of St. Andrews University, has been rector since 1919; there is also a mission church in Pratt street. The High School, built on the site of the old burgh school, by Sir M. B. Nairn, of Rankeilour, when chairman of the Kirkcaldy School Board, includes an elementary department. The schools established under the will of the late Robert Philp esq. of Edenshead, for children of both sexes, have been transferred to the care of the Fife Education Authority, and the children entitled to the benefits of this foundation are educated at the schools, and receive clothing as before, free. A number of bursaries are also provided for the purpose of enabling the children of poor parents to attend the High School, or to prosecute their studies at the universities. There is also a charitable trust left by John Thomson, for educating poor children, and for providing annuities for the support of poor inhabitants. There are branches here of the National Bank of Scotland Limited (with sub-branch at Pathhead), the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited (who have also a branch at Pathhead and sub-branches at the West End and at Dunnikier road), the Bank of Scotland, the Union of Scotland Limited, the British Linen Bank, the Royal Bank of Scotland, the North of Scotland and Town and County Bank Limited and the Clydesdale Bank Limited. There is also the Kirkcaldy Savings Bank, with branches at Pathhead and Links street. Four newspapers are issued here, the "Fife Free Press," "Fifeshire Advertiser," "Kirkcaldy Mail" and "Kirkcaldy Times." The market, which is for the sale of grain, is held on alternate Saturdays. The ruins of Ravenscraig Castle are near the northern boundary of the burgh, and Seafield Tower, also a ruin, is on the south; both are on the coast overlooking the Forth. Raith, a mansion with a lofty tower and fine grounds, is the residence of the Rt. Hon. Viscount Novar G.C.M.G., D.L., J.P. The principal landowners are Col. St. Clair Oswald C.B. the Rt. Hon. Viscount Novar G.C.M.G., D.L., J.P. Sir Michael Nairn bart. and the trustees of the Earl of Rosslyn. The area of the parish comprises 9,575 acres; rateable value, £250,605; area of burgh, 1,743 acres; rateable value, £249,420. The population of the entire parish in 1901 was 39,994, and in 1911, 45,410, viz.:— Burgh, 39,601; Dysart burgh, 4,197;; landward, 1,612. The population of the municipal wards in 1911 was, First, 11,852; Second, 12,916; Third, 14,833. The population of the ecclesiastical parishes in 1911 was:— Parish Church, 11,326; Raith, 3,578; St. James', 4,047.

The Parliamentary burgh had a population in 1911 of 25,274; number of electors on the parliamentary register in 1921 was:—Kirkcaldy, 19,114; Burntisland, 2,599; Dysart, 2,059; Kinghorn, 957 and Buckhaven, Innerleven and Methil, 6,623; total, 31,352.

ABBOTSHALL, formerly a distinct parish, was merged in the amalgamated parishes of Kirkcaldy and Dysart, 3 Dec. 1901, and is partly in the burgh of Kirkcaldy, and in Kirkcaldy and Dysart poor combination, and is a quoad sacra parish. The district, the extent of which is about 2 miles either way, rises gradually from the coast northward into tolerably high ground. The present parish church was built in 1788 to replace the original church erected at the first disjunction of the parish in 1650. The small village of Chapel is in this parish. The population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911 was 3,623.

INVERTIEL is a quoad sacra parish formed from those of Abbotshall and Kinghorn. Here are Established and United Free churches. Population of the ecclesiastical parish in 1911, 2,891.

PATHHEAD, now included within the burgh, is in the parish of Kirkcaldy and Dysart, and is a quoad sacra parish, situated chiefly on the face of a hill, looking towards the Firth of Forth; it is joined by two other districts, respectively named Gallatown and Sinclairtown, also in the same burgh and parish. The manufacture of linoleum, floorcloth and linen goods is briskly followed in these places. Dowlas, ticks, sheeting &c. are produced; flax spinning is also carried on to some extent. At Gallatown are earthenware manufactories. The Public hall, in Commercial street, was erected about 1883; a branch of the Beveridge library is located in this building, and there is also a reading room. At Pathhead are branches of the Commercial Bank of Scotland Limited, and the National Bank of Scotland Limited. The Kirkcaldy Hospital was erected in 1889, in Nether street, at the expense of the late Sir Michael B. Nairn bart.; an additional wing was built in 1915, consisting of a large circular ward, two private wards, X-ray room and operating theatre, also at the cost of the late Sir M. B. Nairn. There is an Established church, three United Free churches, a Free church, and Evangelical Union, Wesleyan and Baptist chapels. The population in 1911 was 4,756.

LADYBANK is a village, 5 miles south-west from Cupar, ecclesiastical parish formed from Collessie parish, and in conjunction with Monkston a police burgh, governed by a chief magistrate, a junior magistrate and six commissioners; it is in the parish of Collessie, and is an important railway station on the North British system, being the junction for the lines from Edinburgh, Alloa and Perth with the line to Dundee. The chief business is linen manufacturing, but malting and bobbin making are likewise carried on. A United Free church, with spire, was erected here in 1876; an Established church has also been built, and there is an Episcopal Mission church, which is served from Cupar. The area of the burgh is 105 acres; rateable value, £5,210; population in 1911, 1,266 burgh, and 1,472 ecclesiastical parish.
